U.S. hails OAS adoption of human rights resolution

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — The Organization of American States has "reaffirmed its commitment to the priority of human rights and to that extent we in this hemisphere lead the world," U.S. Ambassador Gale McGee said following OAS adoption of a U.S. human rights resolution.

The resolution was approved Wednesday at the final session of the seventh OAS general assembly by 14 of the 25 nations, one more than the majority required for adoption. Eight nations abstained and three were absent.

With the resolution, the OAS became the first international body to go on record in support of President Carter's campaign to improve human rights around the globe.

"If it weren't for the United States, the human rights issue would never have come up," said one Latin American diplomat.

The resolution calls on all OAS members to reaffirm their commitment to "the pursuit and achievement of human rights and to undertake to secure the termination of any such violation of human rights as may exist within its borders."

It also increases the financial support for the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, which investigates reported violations of human rights in the hemisphere and reports on them to the OAS.

It was the major issue at the 10-day annual meeting.

The United States and eight other countries that co-sponsored the resolution successfully beat back a last-minute effort by Latin America's military governments, especially Argentina and Chile, to link human rights and terrorism in a single measure.

Argentina and Chile argued that terrorists also violate human rights, and that it is sometimes necessary to abridge human rights to combat terrorism.

"It certainly is true that the rights of persons can be violated by terrorists," said Deputy U.S. Ambassador Robert White. "But ... their actions may be a legitimate form of dissent against taking away the liberties of a people."

Voting for the resolution in addition to the United States were Peru, Mexico, Venezuela, Ecuador, Panama, the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbados, Granada, Surinam, Costa Rica and Haiti.

The eight abstainers were Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, Colombia, Guatemala and El Salvador. Absent were Bolivia, Nicaragua and Honduras.

By unanimous vote, the delegates then ratified a resolution by the Dominican Republic asking the OAS Permanent Council to study terrorism.

The organization also decided it has no right to investigate violations of human rights in Cuba because Fidel Castro's government has been expelled from the OAS. Some diplomats saw this as a new "hands off" policy but White, who is to head the U.S. liaison office in Havana when it opens later this summer, said: "The real question is whether Cuba should regain status in the organization as an active member."

Explosion spills raw sewage in street

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A sewer line exploded early today six blocks from the downtown area. The blast left a 75-foot-wide crater with raw sewage spewing into the street, and there were reports it may have resulted from vandalism.

Fire Lt. Robert Lord said an executive at the Patch Rubber Co., where workers were on strike, told officials that vandals had broken into the firm's cementing plant and opened valves to a tank of solvent. Lord said he was told that 3,000 gallons of petronaptha, a substance with highly flammable fumes, spilled into the sewer system.

Though the spillage occurred some distance from the area of the blast in the five-foot main sewer line, Lord said "we think that's it."

"There is a river of sewage as wide as a three-lane road out there," said Fritz Warren, a cemetery superintendent who reported he felt the blast about 2:30 a.m. "A foul odor has permeated everything." He said some windows of his house were shattered.

There were no reports of injuries but a police patrol car parked near one of the manhole covers and a car owned by Warren were damaged.

The explosion blew manhole covers along the sewer line as high as 100 feet into the air and upset covers for a block either side of the line, police said.

Akron police Sgt. Hugh Bennett said a 12-block area was sealed off and about 40 residents were asked to leave their homes.

Lover's chase ends in death

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — An automobile chase punctuated with gunfire that police say stemmed from a lover's quarrel has resulted in the death of a bystander and injuries to five others, including four children.

One car involved in the chase ran across a lawn Wednesday and through a group of women and children drawn outside by the noise of gunfire and squealing tires.

Although both cars sped away from the scene, police said, Ellinor Wright, 23, and Larry Harvey, 28, later turned themselves in and were charged with murder.

Chief of Detectives Matt Touchton said the two quarrelled when Mrs. Wright asked Harvey why he hadn't come home Tuesday night to the apartment they shared.

Harvey took off in his car and she followed in hers, firing a pistol as she chased him, police said. No one was struck by the bullets.

"As far as we know, he did not shoot back," Touchton said. "She didn't mean for that to happen," he said of the death. "I think she is basically a good person who just let the situation get out of hand and it ended with tragic consequences."

Jerlene Waller, 28, was killed.

Peggy Forshee, 23, was hospitalized with a broken hip and leg. Mrs. Waller's children, Larrell, 5, and Larry, 4, were hospitalized with bruises and cuts but reported in satisfactory condition.

Mrs. Forshee's children, Sherry, 6, and Michelle, 2, were released after hospital treatment.

Carter to speak at Demo dinner

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is addressing a Democratic fund raising dinner in New York which reportedly has $1 million in advance tickets sales, enough to pay off about a quarter of the party's debt from past campaigns.

Carter speaks at the dinner tonight at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. His aides say the President's address will be more partisan than policy and will promote some of his major proposals.

Purchase would protect agricultural programs

State budget includes $2 million for land acquisition by Cal Poly

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Two million dollars has been included in the 1977-78 state budget to allow Cal Poly Pomona to acquire 100 acres of hillside land adjacent to the campus.

Assemblyman William McVittie, D-Upland, announced today that the land desired by the university to protect its agricultural programs has been included in the budget.

Hugh O. LaBounty Jr., acting president of Cal Poly Pomona, said this morning that the university has no immediate plans for expansion of the land, but wants to protect its student programs.

"The 100 acres of hilly land is located between our present agricultural units and Forest Lawn Covina Hills," LaBounty explained.

"The land owned by Via Verde Development Co. is being held for us until Aug. 15 to see if the purchase was possible," La Bounty continued. "It is also being considered for residential development.

"If this land was to be developed for homes, the university's beef, swine, lamb and poultry programs would be endangered since we all realize that agricultural and residential developments have problems co-existing."

LaBounty added that the area will be used for ecological studies by students.

"If enrollment continues to grow, it may be needed for future expansion of the campus, but now it will be a protection for existing programs."

French slayer of young girl dies on guillotine

DOUAI, France (AP) — Jerome Carrein, 36, died on the guillotine at dawn today for the murder of an 8-year-old girl. He was the second person executed in France since President Valery Giscard d'Estaing took office three years ago.

Carrein was beheaded in the prison courtyard in this northern French town. He was sentenced to death twice for the slaying in 1975 of Cathy Petit, daughter of the owners of a tavern he frequented near Paulluel, 10 miles from Douai.

According to testimony at his trial, he met the child after school, persuaded her to accompany him to a swamp, tried to rape her and drowned her when she resisted.

The man returned to the bar and reported the child died accidentally. The parents were suspicious and called the police.

Carrein was convicted last July 12, but the Court of Appeals found a technical error in the trial and ordered a new trial. The Douai Court of Assizes on Feb. 1 sentenced Carrein to death for the second time after again finding him guilty of kidnaping a minor, attempted rape and murder.

It was not learned whether the sentence was appealed to President Giscard d'Estaing although this is usually automatic.

The death sentence is mandatory for persons convicted of murder unless the jury finds mitigating circumstances. It has been the practice in France since the time of President Charles de Gaulle to refuse clemency when children and prison officials are the victims.

An estimated 4,600 persons have been guillotined since the machine came into use in France about 200 years ago. It was invented as a substitute for hanging, which often left victims to strangle slowly. It has a 132-pound blade which falls nine feet between two grooved beams.

Soviets accuse Spain's Red chief of hurting movement

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has accused Spanish Communist party leader Santiago Carrillo of trying to split the international Communist movement and of playing into the hands of "reactionary imperialist forces."

The condemnation was contained in a 6,000-word editorial in the weekly New Times and based on a review of Carrillo's book, "Eurocommunism and the State." The editorial also was carried by the Soviet news agency TASS.

Carrillo was not immediately available for comment. A Spanish Communist party spokesman in Madrid said, "It will be up to Don Santiago to answer.'

The editorial was the most vigorous condemnation of any foreign Communist leader in recent years, surpassing criticism last December of French Communist leader George Marchais who was rebuked for criticizing Soviet handling of dissidents.

Tass said the book analyzes the Soviet Communist system in a way that "accords solely with the interests of imperialism, the forces of agression and reaction.

"If applied in practice it would lead to a split in the international Communist movement, the very goal the reactionary imperialist forces have aspired to for so many decades.

"The underlying idea of the author is the union of Western Europe on what is in effect an anti-Soviet platform," New Times said.

Court ruling deals prison unions jolt

WASHINGTON (AP) — State prison officials can prohibit prisoners from asking fellow inmates to join a union and refuse to distribute to inmates bulk mailings from outside union organizers, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The court reversed a lower court ruling that North Carolina officials violated the constitutional rights of prisoners by barring such union activity.

Today's decision did not ban unions in prisons, but the justices refused to give such unions privileges enjoyed by unions outside prisons.

The North Carolina prison regulations prohibit unions from using prison facilities for meetings, soliciting fellow inmates or receiving bulk mailings from union organizers outside the prison.

EPA plans to require noise labels on many appliances

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the roar of the lawn mower to the whine of the hair dryer the government is battling to keep the din down.

And where that can't be done, there will be a label to warn you how loud your new appliance will be when you start it up.

The Environmental Protection agency announced Wednesday it is planning to require noise labels on a variety of products.

Final decisions haven't been made about which products will have to carry the labels, but leading candidates are reported to be vacuum cleaners, air conditioners, shop tools, dishwashers and powered lawn and garden equipment.

Also included will be labels for products which reduce noise, such as ear protectors and acoustic tile. Those labels will contain information on how helpful the products are in keeping down noise.

"The newly proposed labeling program will permit informed consumer decisions by making possible comparisons of products related to noise or noise reducing characteristics," said EPA Administrator Douglas M. Costle.

Costle said the first product for which a labeling standard has been prepared is ear protectors.

"In this case the label will bear a number between 0 and 31. The higher the number, the greater the product's effectiveness in excluding noise from a person's ear," he said.

Similar labeling standards for noise-producing products are still being developed, and no decision has been made whether to use a system of numbers, letters or symbols, officials said.

"For consumer products the labeling program should, with a minimum of federal involvement, provide accurate and understandable information to purchasers and permit them to decide for themselves if they want a quieter personal environment.

"If consumers make it plain they want quieter products, the marketplace will in all likelihood respond," Costle said.

Officials said the labeling program is in response to congressional directions to reduce the level of background noise in the country.

For products over which individuals have little or no control, such as bulldozers, trucks, motorcycles and buses, EPA is setting allowable noise levels for manufacturers to meet.

The General Services Administration also is trying to reduce noice. It has purchased 10,000 power lawnmowers with noise levels reduced by 10 decibels. The mowers will be for use by federal agencies.

Since the decibel system for measuring noise is a geometric rather than an arithmetic scale, the 10-decibel reduction — from 92 to 82 decibels — means the noise level is being cut in half.

The EPA is seeking comments and suggestions from the public on it's noise labeling program and officials said public hearings will be scheduled if there is sufficient interest.

Persons wishing to comment should write, by Sept. 20, to the Director, Standards and Regulations Division, Office of Noise Abatement and Control (AW471), Attn. Product Noise Labeling, Docket No. ONAC 778, U. S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C., 20460.

Neutron bomb gets go-ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The full Senate is facing a decision on whether a lethal neutron bomb that kills people but leaves buildings intact should become part of the U.S. nuclear weapons arsenal.

The Senate Appropriations Committee rejected on Wednesday a move by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to ban production of the device.

Although its details are mostly secret, the proposed bomb is reportedly designed to kill people through the release of highly radioactive neutrons while doing a minimum amount of damage to structures.

The legislation, already approved by the House, now goes to the full Senate.

AMA calls for sale, warning of saccharin

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Warning: this product contains saccharin, which may be a cause of increased incidence of cancer in animals and humans."

A cautionary label along these lines would be placed on diet drinks and other products containing the artificial sweetener under an American Medical Association resolution aimed at preventing a federal ban on saccharin.

The physicians' organization, at its annual meeting, agreed Wednesday to support continued sales of the sweetener. A related resolution passed by the 249-member House of Delegates advocated efforts to amend the federal law on cancer-causing food additives under which the Food and Drug Administration plans to take saccharin off the market.

"We want to develop a longrange plan to amend the Delaney Amendment and a shortterm regulatory or legislative attempt to keep saccharin on the market," said Dr. Alfred Faber of Illinois, whose committee wrote the resolution.

Many physicians feel the case against saccharin as a cause of cancer is inconclusive and that saccharin is a badly needed dietary aid in treating diseases such as diabetes, in which sugar intake must be limited.

"I hope my diabetic patients live long enough to get cancer of the bladder from saccharin," said one physician during debate on the resolution.

The AMA body adopted a statement saying that the physicians would support a measure to "permit the marketing of saccharin as a food additive or an over-the-counter product with labeling warning of the potential increase in the incidence of cancer in animals and humans based on the currently available evidence."

In addition, the AMA voted to seek a change in the Food Additive Act, or Delaney Amendment, so that clearer evidence of possible cancer causation by a food additive would be required for the government to ban a substance like saccharin.

Under the current law, said Dr. Paul Friedman of Philadelphia, "artificial doses are being used in experiments that have no relation to normal human consumption."

The doctors agreed that the law should be changed so that a substance could be taken off the market only if there was evidence that cancer could result from ingesting the additive in amounts equivalent to "normal daily consumption for humans."

Growth plan adopted

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Upland City Council has adopted a growth management plan that not only controls the amount of residential growth within the city but also determines where it will be located.

Councilwoman Ina Petokas was absent when the council voted 4-0 to endorse the 127-point system explained by City Engineer Fred Blanchard on Monday.

Blanchard said the staff felt that handling 125 residential units per month would result in an organized, fair development plan. The growth control calls for not more than 500 units to be considered in six months with a maximum of 900 units a year in the city.

The growth management plan does not include single-family homes on existing lots.

Blanchard added that the point system would encourage developers to submit well-prepared plans. He said this has not always been true in the past, resulting in an extra work load for city staff members.

The point system includes many factors, such as schools in the vicinity, parks and public services available.

The maximum of 900 units a year is substantially less than units reviewed recently. Upland approved 1,282 residential units during the 1975-76 year and 1,322 units from July 1, 1976, to May 1, 1977, an 11-month period, Blanchard added.

Some 2,400 units were approved by the city during the 18 months prior to 120-day moratorium which went into effect Feb. 7.

The city's concern over control of growth beyond services available was coupled with the moratorium by the state Water Quality Control Board based on the operating capacity of the Chino Basin Municipal Water District's sewage plant which serves Upland.

The growth management plans were approved by Bob Mills, representing the Upland Chamber of Commerce, and several area contractors.

The plans are flexible and can be changed by council resolution later if necessary, Blanchard said.

Brown prison proposal gets into trouble

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. can't build new prisons in 1977-78 if the legislature's budget committee gets its way, because a Republican lawmaker says there's no proof they are needed.

The joint committee of the Assembly and Senate completed work Wednesday on a more than $14.6-billion state budget proposal and refused to include $92 million Brown wants to build two new prisons.

Assemblyman Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, who cast the deciding vote to reject prison-building funds, said in an interview:

"To put a lump sum in for the purpose of showing the public how intent we are to keep people behind bars doesn't seem kosher to me until we have studies to justify it."

The committee also reversed an earlier decision and allowed the University of California to raise student fees $48 this fall without loss of state funds.

The budget, about $400 million more than Brown proposed in January, is expected to come up for full Assembly and Senate votes Friday. Brown has until July 1 to sign it after cutting individual spending items.

Combined with pending bills on property tax relief and school finance, the state would spend about $16.3 billion in the coming fiscal year.

Chaffey College personnel gains 6.5% pay raise

Classified personnel at Chaffey College received 6.5 per cent pay raises during a special board of trustees meeting Wednesday noon.

The action by the trustees followed similar raises for certificated staff members and the adoption of the tentative budget last Week.

The salary and benefit package for the classified staff had been delayed several days at the request of the Chaffey College Chapter of the California School Employes Association (CSEA) representatives so the chapter's attorneys could inspect the offer.

The salary increases for 328 employes will add about $650,000 to the proposed budget of just over $18 million.

The tentative budget adopted is about $538,467 less than the 1976-77 college budget due to a drop in the enrollment.

After additional refinements, the 1977-78 publication budget will be considered at the July 14 board meeting and the final budget for the next fiscal year will be considered on Aug. 4.

State briefs

Emergency room liability

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation easing liability limits on emergency room doctors has won Assembly passage despite foes' arguments it curbed patients' legal rights too much.

Wednesday's 43-24 vote on AB 1301 by Assemblyman Vic Fazio, D-Sacramento, sent it to the state Senate.

Backers said the bill was needed because doctors in emergency situations shouldn't have to stop and worry about suits when patients need quick help.

Fazio won passage of the measure last week also, but opponents held it up for a second vote by a parliamentary maneuver.

"This will almost be a bar to liability so in the long run I don't think it will provide better services," said Assemblyman Julian Dixon, D-Los Angeles.

The measure would remove "negligence" as a grounds for filing suit against emergency room doctors and nurses and against paramedics and firemen on the scene of an emergency.

It would leave grounds of "gross negligence" which the bill's supporters said was sufficient redress against poorly performed care.

Delay on tax, school bills

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. and Democratic leaders of the legislature say they have agreed to delay final action on property tax and school finance bills to take a closer look at the costs involved.

An agreement to continue work on the school and tax bills during the legislature's summer recess was made during a series of meetings at the Democratic governor's office Wednesday.

Special conference committees involving a total of six senators and six assemblymen were being selected to work on the two billion-dollar-plus proposals while the legislature's other 108 members take vacations beginning next week.

Collecting hospital bills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County officials have created a special task force to collect up to $15.3 million in unpaid hospital bills.

"There's been a problem in following up on bills that are collectible," auditor-controller Mark H. Bloodgood said Wednesday. "We want to concentrate hardest on sending timely bills to individuals and insurance companies and on following through on them promptly."

The $15.3-million figure represents "potentially collectible revenue" from individuals, insurance companies and MediCal out of a total of $370 million in deliquent medical bills as of last April 30, officials said. Most of the remaining bills are owed by indigents who cannot afford to pay them, Bloodgood said.

Emergency radio network

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A new emergency radio network to alleviate "chaos" in ambulance communications has been ordered by the county.

The new network will coordinate radio transmissions between all private and public paramedic units and hospitals in the county, officials said.

Edward W. Messigner, head of the county's Department of Communications, said the system was needed because ambulance calls from San Diego County freqeuntly interrupted emergency transmissions here.

"Occasionnaly the system got so jammed that a doctor would end up talking to paramedics who were giving medical treatment to some other physician's patient," Messinger said.

The radio network, which will cost an estimated $4 million, has been on the drawing boards for 18 months. Private companies will contribute $1.2 million, state and federal agencies $1.5 million, and the county $1.3 million, officials said.

Nuclear bankruptcy viewed with apprehension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bankruptcy proceedings filed by a federal agency against a key producer of atomic fuel may disrupt nuclear programs in foreign countries and could lead to millions of dollars in international lawsuits.

Carter administration officials said Wednesday that experts from the State Department and Justice Department are investigating international and legal problems arising from the failure of the U.S. Nuclear Corp. of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

A bankruptcy petition against the firm was filed without fanfare by the federal Energy Research and Development Agency last month.

Sources say Brazil, South Africa and some other long-time buyers of the company's highly enriched uranium are asking the State Department about the bankruptcy proceeding and obviously are concerned that their major source of a special type of reactor fuel may be cut off.

Brazil and South Africa already had made down payments to U.S. Nuclear for future deliveries of nuclear fuel, sources say. Now the countries may find their money and fuel tied up in bankruptcy court.

ERDA, the corporation's biggest creditor, filed the bankruptcy petition May 4, officials said. U.S. Nuclear was closed, but its supply of enriched uranium, already processed for export, was properly stored and sealed, the officials said.

U.S. Nuclear, State Department officials say, is the only U.S. firm using a special metallurgical process to produce fuel elements for a particular kind of research reactor exported by the United States.

An ERDA team from Washington now is checking into the corporation's records to determine how many countries paid U.S. Nuclear for fuel not yet delivered. Sources say they believe at least a dozen countries have been dealing through the closed company.

Shutdown of U.S. Nuclear complicates the task of various government agencies that must advise President Carter when he decides whether or not to approve sales of enriched uranium to foreign countries. Carter said in April he personally will screen large orders for enriched uranium, which can be used to build nuclear weapons.

Some of the foreign requests for nuclear fuel now being considered are loaded with heavy political overtones and friendly countries already annoyed with government-prompted delays may be irate over what will amount to a new legal roadblock to needed nuclear fuel.

For example, South Africa, whose race policies have been denounced by the U.S. government, put in a bid more than two years ago for 55 pounds of enriched uranium at a total cost of about $500,000. The uranium was prepared by U.S. Nuclear, but the sale was never cleared by the Carter administration and now is entangled in the bankruptcy case.

Brazil, assailed by Carter on the issue of human rights, also had asked to buy a new shipment of uranium from U.S. Nuclear. Brazil's research reactor is similar to South Africa's reactor.

CHURCH BUILDING COLLAPSES

Workers try desperately to help William Rivers as he lies among twisted steel beams in the collapse of a church under construction in Tallahassee Wednesday. Rivers, one of eight persons injured in the mishap, was listed in serious condition.

Welfare fraud poses threat

CHICAGO (AP) — Massive welfare fraud by government workers such as that alleged in Detroit and Chicago could be a major problem in every large city in the nation, a federal prosecutor says.

U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner said Wednesday that he will urge U.S. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and Department of Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano to launch a nationwide investigation to determine if public employes are illegally collecting welfare.

His announcement was made Wednesday after a federal grand jury indicted 92 local and federal agency workers for lying and cheating to illegally obtain welfare payments. Some of those indicted earned up to $17,500 a year and their average Civil Service pay was $12,000, Skinner said.

"I've never seen anything like it," he said. "It is the most serious law enforcement problem I've seen and I've been around the U.S. attorney's office for nine years," he said. "How in the world can they receive $12,000 a year or more from their public job ... and expect the taxpayers to pay them for welfare fraud and lie and cheat year after year to get away with it?"

Some $10 million has been siphoned off over the years as a result of the fraud, Skinner estimated. He said some of those who collected the payments hold charge accounts at Chicago's most expensive retail shops and drive high-priced, late-model cars. One had $20,000 in a savings account.

He also said that "many of these people are working mothers who have good jobs and report no father in the home. It's very unfortunate" but said he would seek stiff jail sentences in the most aggravated cases as a deterrent.

Skinner said the massive fraud charged in the indictments was similar to large-scale welfare chiseling recently found among public payroll workers in Detroit, where 30 indictments were returned as a result of a Michigan investigation.

The fraud was discovered after payrolls were checked against names of welfare recipients.

"We're hitting two for two," Skinner said at a news conference. "In Detroit they did it and found a major problem. In Illinois, we did it and found a major problem. I think it could be a major problem in every large city in the country."

Meanwhile, Gov. James R. Thompson said he will appoint a task force to investigate the charges and recommend ways to tighten up on welfare fraud in Illinois.

"The indictments are a triple disgrace," Thompson declared at a news conference in his Chicago office. "Service to the people is impaired, the names and reputations of honest and efficient public employes are besmirched and the taxpayers take it on the chin and get ripped off."

Skinner said all 92 persons indicted accepted monthly welfare checks while drawing government salaries.

Skinner said indictments were sought only in the most serious cases and they conclude the first phase of a year-long investigation which showed "an astonishing lack of respect by public employes for the law."

Ike, Mamie didn't think of divorcing

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — The son of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower says his parents had problems during World War II but that his father never considered divorce.

John S. D. Eisenhower says his mother, Mamie, wrote to Eisenhower asking about his purported affair with the late Kay Summersby, the then-general's driver and secretary.

"Mother was under a lot of strain," Eisenhower said. "I don't know if she believed the rumors, but she thought enough of them to bring it up in her letters."

The Eisenhower family has released some of the wartime correspondence between Eisenhower and his wife in reaction to a upcoming ABC television program that depicts Eisenhower's rumored affair with Miss Summersby.

Eisenhower's son, an author and historian, said in an interview Wednesday that he did not know the full details of the Eisenhower-Summersby relationship.

Eisenhower said he also released the letters to refute "hogwash" in Merle Miller's book, "Plain Speaking." In the book Miller includes an account by Harry Truman of a story that Eisenhower planned to divorce Mamie and marry Miss Summersby.

Man-hour cost of search for two runaways tabulated

Civilian searchers and Pomona police drove more than 5,000 miles and expended more than 1,300 man-hours looking for two young runaway children who were found safe Tuesday night in downtown Los Angeles.

A final tabulation of figures Wednesday revealed that members of the California Citizens Alert Patrol (C-CAP) alone put in 1,050 hours searching for the children. Fifty C-CAP members volunteered to assist the police Monday afternoon and night and 65 took part in the Tuesday operation.

Besides the members of C-CAP, 20 citizens not connected with any organization assisted in the search. Many had citizens band radios and used them to inform truck drivers to be alert for the missing children along the state's highways. It was reported that within a 30-minute period Monday, descriptions of the children were broadcast by truckers using CB radios all the way from San Diego to Sacramento.

The children hopped a ride into Los Angeles on a railway flatcar Monday, it was learned after they were found.

Mitchell jeered by inmates at prison

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — John Mitchell today puts on a prison uniform and begins to acquaint himself with what will be his home for at least the next 30 months.

The dormitory he shares with other inmates at the federal prison camp at Maxwell Air Force Base differs drastically from the plush Justice Department office he once occupied as attorney general.

Instead of rubbing elbows with the rich and powerful, Mitchell will be living with drug smugglers, income tax evaders and bootleggers.

Many of those prisoners jeered Wednesday when Mitchell arrived at the minimum security facility to begin serving his sentence for involvement in the Watergate scandal that brought down the administration of Richard Nixon.

During his 45-minute indoctrination, Mitchell exchanged his dark green business suit for a brown work uniform. He was photographed, fingerprinted, given prison number 24171 157 and assigned to one of the seven military-like dormitories that house inmates.

Grunska said no attempt was made to preselect Mitchell's roommates.

Amin alive; it's declared officially

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Uganda's President Idi Amin was officially declared alive but resting by Radio Uganda today.

The radio, quoting a military spokesman said : "Amin has been resting after a long period of hard work."

It is understood that any announcements about Amin on the Uganda radio are approved beforehand by Amin himself.

Like a cancer ward, says Colson

Prisons not country clubs

WINCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — The prisons where two former top Nixon aides began serving time this week are far from being country clubs, says former White House special counsel Charles Colson.

"Living in constant noise and in overwhelming depression is like living in a terminal cancer ward," Colson told a group of high school students in this Boston suburb.

Colson spoke only hours after John Mitchell, 63, entered prison at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama on Wednesday, the first former U.S. attorney general to go to prison. Colson was also jailed there.

Mitchell became the 25th person jailed in connection with the Watergate scandal. He was imprisoned five years and five days after the break-in at the Democratic National Committee's headquarters at the Watergate building in Washington.

Former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman surrendered on Tuesday at the federal prison at Lompoc, Calif. Both men are serving 2½-to-8-year sentences, as is former domestic adviser John Ehrlichman, imprisoned since last October at Safford, Ariz.

"Everyone (in the prison) has family problems, and no hope for the future," Colson said, calling the dormitories "filthy beyond belief and smelling like urine."

"Taking men like Mitchell and Haldeman and thrusting them into a situation like that... You can call it a country club if you like," he said to dispute such descriptions.

Colson, who served seven months of a sentence for obstructing justice in the scandal that toppled the administration of former President Richard M. Nixon, spoke to 21 Winchester High School juniors at the end of a four-week class on Watergate.

After throwing questions at Colson for three hours, the 21 students said they were unsatisfied.

Several described him as "very defensive."

"I'm a little disappointed," said Mary Budd, 16. "He seemed to dodge most of my questions."

Colson "used his sense of humor as a way out" of answering many questions, said Bob Brosnan, 17.

The Colson interview was recorded on video tape by a Washington, D.C., firm that supplied materials for the class. It hopes to turn this and five other tapes into a television documentary and possibly a classroom film.

During the interview, Colson warned the students against trying to "legislate morality."

"The minute you think you're incapable of a Watergate, man, that is when you're in deep trouble," he said.

Christie mystery saves tot

LONDON (AP) — Agatha Christie's 16-year-old detective story "The Pale Horse" saved the life of a 19-month-old girl dying of a mysterious condition that baffled London doctors, the British Journal of Hospital Medicine reported today.

The Arab baby was flown from Qatar, on the Persian Gulf, for treatment and was semiconscious when admitted to London's Hammersmith Hospital. Despite intensive care, her blood pressure increased, her breathing became increasingly difficult and she appeared on the brink of death, but the doctors could not diagnose her illness.

As the doctors were making their morning rounds of the wards, Nurse Marsha Maitland suggested that her tiny patient might have been poisoned by a compound of thallium, a soft bluish-white metal whose salts are poisonous. Nurse Maitland said she was reading "The Pale Horse" and the baby's symptoms were remarkably similar to those of a thallium case in the book.

The doctors decided to test the theory. Thallium is rarely found in Britain, and the hospital lacked the necessary testing equipment. The doctors went to Scotland Yard, which referred them to a laboratory with the equipment. Tests confirmed thallium poisoning, and the baby recovered after getting the right treatment.

The article in the medical journal suggested that a thallium preparation had been used to kill roaches and rats around the child's home.

Bees added to livestock

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Hitch up Old Paint outside, partner, and check your sixshooters at the door! Things have changed out on the range.

The state Assembly on Wednesday unanimously approved a measure aimed at redefining livestock tc include bees.

Junk food ban okayed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation forbidding sale of "junk food" in elementary and junior high schools has won Assembly approval after its author lashed out at cavities and obesity.

Assemblyman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles, said Wednesday the bill would help fuel the fight against tooth decay and fatness.

Soweto students massing

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police shot and killed one black and wounded another in Soweto today and arrested about 130 others in central Johannesburg as black students protested the continued preventive detention of their leaders by South Africa's white government.

Police sources said large groups of students were massing all over Soweto, the segregated township of more than a million blacks 10 miles southwest of Johannesburg. The police were reported breaking up the groups with tear gas.

BRONC RIDING — This is one act which will be repeated at the Fourth of July rodeo at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona, sponsored by the Pomona Firemen's Association and City of Pomona. A fireworks show will be presented immediately following the evening rodeo performance.

Two July 4 rodeos slated at fairgrounds

Two rodeo performances have been scheduled at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona July 4.

The rodeo, sponsored by the Pomona Fireman's Association and the City of Pomona, will be produced by Rodeo Stock Contractors of Clements. Six events, approved by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys' Association, will be bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, team roping and bull riding.

The Girl's Rodeo Association will sanction a cloverleaf barrel race.

Local contestants may enter at Pomona Fire Station, 925 E. Lexington Ave. For further information call 620-2205. The deadline for local contestants to enter the rodeo is noon, Wednesday.

It is expected that more than 150 professional contestants will be vying for a purse of $7,500.

The purse makes this rodeo the largest July 4th Rodeo in California this year.

There will be musical entertainment and free pony rides for children.

An aerial fireworks display is planned immediately following the evening rodeo.

Performance times will be 2 and 7 p.m. Gates will open at 12:30 and 5:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at all Pomona fire stations. Tickets will also be sold at the grandstand entrance on July 4. They are $3 for adults and $2 for children under 12. Children 3 and under will be admitted free.

Reserved seat tickets will be available at the grandstand entrance on July 4 for an additional $2.

'Adults only' trips planned

Five "adults only" trips are being planned this summer by the San Dimas Recreation Department.

Reservations are being accepted for trips to Solvang on July 7, Laguna Arts Festival July 20, Ports O'Call Aug. 9, Dodgers game Aug. 27 and Hawaii from Sept. 16 to Sept. 25.

Cost for the Hawaiian trip is $554 per person. Reservation fees are being accepted at San Dimas City Hall, 245 E. Bonita Ave.

Parents claim daughters got V.D. at school

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona school board Tuesday night heard a report from two district residents who claimed their daughters had been infected with gonorrhea from the toilet seats at Washington Elementary School.

The incident first arose three weeks ago when a school district nurse discovered an apparent infection in four girls at the school and recommended the children see their family physicians and the doctors at the county health department.

District officials immediately notified the county health department and the press, informing both of the situation.

Initially, it was thought the children had contracted the disease from the toilet seats at the school, but later opinions by physicians have just about completely discounted the possibility of that. Most physicians consulted in the matter by the district and parents agree that it is impossible to contract gonorrhea from a toilet seat due to the fragile nature of the germ which is even difficult to culture in a laboratory environment.

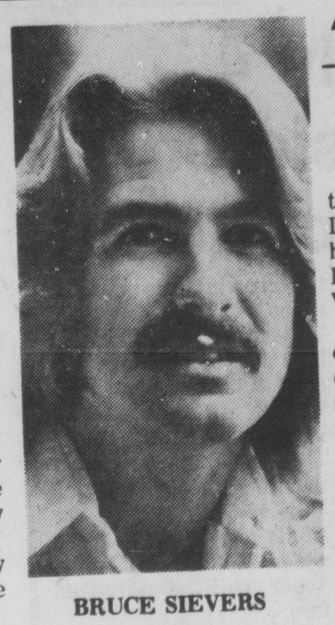
While initial investigations into the case concluded in the gonorrhea diagnosis, the initial child in the case was treated with penicillin. Subsequent tests on the four children for the disease by county health officials then proved negative.

The parents told trustees that "filthy bathrooms" at the school were responsible for the infection. They claimed the original doctor who treated the girls maintains the children were suffering from gonorrhea.

Supt. Charles Carpenter said his health staff was and continues to be in contact with the health department.

Board President Don Donnelly told the parents that "a full and complete investigation into the incident has been conducted by the district. He invited parents to meet with the district's professional nursing staff to discuss any additional problems they may have.

Carpenter told the audience of about 60 persons, "I in no way want to create the impression that all the restrooms in the Pomona school district are in grade A shape all the time. That simply would not be correct."



BRUCE SIEVERS

S.D. Library group hosts poet Sievers

The Friends of San Dimas Library will hold their annual meeting on June 29 at 7 p.m. in the community room of the library.

Poet Bruce Sievers will be the guest speaker. His program, "An American in love with his country," tells of Sievers' search for meaning in people and himself.

One of Sievers' poems, "America," has been entered into the Congressional Record.

The public is invited to attend the annual meeting. Admission is free and refreshments will be served. Further information is available by calling 599-6738.

Washington Park activities begin

Summer activities have started at the Washington Park Community Center in Pomona, with the area open for general recreation Mondays through Thursdays from noon to 9 p.m.

The center is also open Fridays from noon to 6 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Al Erby is the center's director, with Renu Orapinsansin his assistant. Murphy McCally and Louis Bridgeman are recreation leaders.

Special programs offered include youth cooking class on Wednesdays from 3 to 5 p.m.; arts and crafts, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3 to 5 p.m.; tap dance class on Wednesdays from 2 to 6 p.m.; youth weight lifting club, Wednesdays and Fridays from 4 to 5 p.m.; tennis class on Mondays from 5 to 7 p.m. for youths and Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. for adults; exercises on Mondays and Thursdays from 7 to 8 p.m. and Fridays from 10 to 11 a.m.; and summer camp pre-school, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

In addition, movies will be shown every Friday from 3 to 5 p.m. These are free.

'Country Rainbows' is the theme

Miss La Verne pageant set for July 2

"Country Rainbows" is the theme for the 1977 Miss La Verne Pageant to be held July 2 at 7 p.m. in the Dailey Theater at La Verne College.

Six La Verne coeds are competing for the title currently held by Cal Poly student Cherlyn Wanamaker. They are:

—Lori Swank, who is interested in the performing arts and plans to attend Cal State Fullerton where she will be seeking a credential to teach asthmatic children.

—Scherrei Collins, who plans a career in kindergarten level education and is the reigning Miss Los Angeles County Liberty.

—Sheila Palmer, who enjoys outdoor sports and wants to attend Azusa Pacific College and major in nursing.

—Linda Witherspoon, who is involved in the musical program at her church and wants to become a real estate agent working for her father.

—Lori Blackwell, a member of the Young Americans who plans to attend California Institute of the Arts to study for a career in the entertainment field.

—Lisa Whitridge, who is a seamstress and will be attending Mt. San Antonio College majoring in photography and drafting.

Each contestant will be judged in an interview, in street dresses, swim suits, and evening gowns, and will present an "Achievement." Judges will be Helen Sauser, owner of Chancery Lane Book Shop; Cathy Madlin, teen instructor of Madlin's Modeling School, Palm Springs, and former Miss Bikini International; Anna Brooks, instructor at Studio Seven Modeling School in Covina; Bruce Van Note, musical director at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Pomona; and Michael D. Osborn, director of the Miss Orange County Pageant.

R.G. Harris, owner of Liberty Ford, La Verne, will be the master of ceremonies and guest vocalists will include Miss California Cindy Landis, former Miss La Verne Carole Young, and "His song," a musical group from La Habra.

The La Verne Businessmen's and Merchants Association is co-sponsoring the pageant with other La Verne industries, clubs and organizations.

Tastee Freeze in La Verne has hosted the contestants at a publicity luncheon. The contestants will also be attending a dinner hosted by Taco Kitchen in La Verne. Pioneer Chicken of San Dimas will be hosting the judges' and contestants' buffet dinner prior to the pageant. Crowns and tiaras are furnished by Chic Accessories in Montclair Plaza, jewelry by La Verne Jewelers, and swim suits by Sea Fashions, Inc. in Los Angeles.

The pageant is planned by Pageant Chairman La Verne N. Burns and former Miss La Verne, Robin Benedict Espinoza, pageant coordinator.

Retiring educators honored

Retiring educators from the Chaffey and Ontario-Montclair school districts were honored recently at the annual public schools week dinner at the Masonic Lodge in Ontario.

More than 200 educators and community members attended the dinner to honor the educators.

Each received a plaque, courtesy of the Masons, for their years of service.

Retirees include Agnes Brennan, teacher at Mission School; Esther Brewster, psychologist, Chaffey schools; Guy Elsea, teacher at Vernon Junior High School; Charles Fleming, teacher at Chaffey High; Ellen Law, Bon View teacher; Helen Lewis, Monte Vista teacher; Ferne Peck, Euclid School teacher; Arthur Peck, El Camino teacher; Hermoise Pettitt, Chaffey High teacher; Marvin Tate, Monte Vista School principal.

Also, Margaret Thrasher, Kingsley School teacher; and Carolyn Vanderploeg, Ontario High teacher.

Other retirees who were unable to attend the dinner include Marjorie Jennings, Montclair High; Kathryn Johnson, Montclair High; Marion McKissen, Chaffey High; Ruby Nicholson, Alta Loma High; Nell Paige, Ramona; Gladys Davis, Ontario High; Wayne Hanawalt, Vernon Junior High; and Katherine Uebelhart, Vernon Junior High.

Bus service changes will begin July 10

Bus service changes on Southern California Rapid Transit District bus routes affecting the valley will begin July 10.

"These service refinements are part of previously announced economy measures to meet budget limitations the district currently faces," said Charles Storing, RTD board member.

The district cost-cutting program's major targets are weekend and night service (after 7 p.m.) on lines where chronic low patronage has caused operational inefficiency. The changes include:

—Line 451 (Garey Avenue-Foothill Boulevard) and Line 453 (Indian Hill Boulevard-Reservoir Street). All night service will be discontinued. These lines serve Pomona and Claremont.

—Line 482 (Los Angeles-Hacienda Heights-Pomona via Colima Road). Night service on weekdays and Saturday will be reduced from the current 30 minutes to every hour. This serves Los Angeles, El Monte, South El Monte, Industry, Hacienda Heights, Rowland Heights, Diamond Bar and Pomona.

—Line 484 (Los Angeles-La Puente-Pomona-Ontario International Airport via Valley Boulevard). Night service between downtown Los Angeles and El Monte will change from its current 30 minutes to every hour. Line service between El Monte and Ontario International Airport remains unchanged.

—Line 486 (Los Angeles-Puente Hills Mall via Amar Road). Night service on weekdays and Saturday will be changed from the current 30 minutes to every hour. The line serves Los Angeles, El Monte, Baldwin Park, Valinda, West Covina, La Puente and Industry.

Big Brothers inviting men

Men who are 21 years and older are invited to join the Catholic Big Brothers on a volunteer basis.

Men are needed to spend a few hours each week developing a one-to-one relationship with a fatherless boy.

Information on the program is available by contacting Peter Adler, the area director, at (213) 266-3950.

Single mothers looking for a Catholic Big Brother for a son are also invited to contact Adler.

Pomona Library board appoints new librarian

Halbert Watson has been appointed Pomona City Librarian by the Pomona Public Library Board of Trustees.

An employe of the library for the past seven years, Watson succeeds Brad Simon, who left Pomona for a similar position in Newport Beach.

"I am very honored the library board showed such faith in me and it is my goal to maintain the library as one of the great assets of the city," said Watson.

Watson, who has been acting librarian since Simon's departure, joined the library in 1970 as public service director. In 1973 he was named assistant librarian.

Prior to coming to Pomona, Watson was a research analyst for Resource Management Corp. in Bethesda, Md., and head reference librarian for System Development Corp.

He is a graduate of UC Berkeley, and received his master's degree in library science from USC.

A resident of Pomona, Watson is active in the American Library Association, California Library Association, California Librarian Black Caucus, Pomona Municipal Management Club and the Pomona Breakfast Lions Club.

HALBERT WATSON

Reading club is under way

Pomona Public Library's annual summer reading club for youths is under way and will continue through the end of August.

Children of all ages may participate in the club, which has a theme of "You and Me and Our Heritage Tree."

Each week the program will feature new crafts, movies, special guests, storyhours, projects, and treats courtesy of McDonalds.

For information, persons may call 620-2017.

Publication of tax rolls to continue

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors has agreed to continue publishing tax assessment rolls in local newspapers this year, despite the contention of Chairman Ed Edelman that it was a "waste of money."

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said the community newspapers serve as "automatic watchdogs" by carrying the annual paid lists.

By studying the lists, owners could see how their properties are valued in comparison with other real estate in their area, he added.

Supervisor Peter Schabarum declared it was important for people to have a chance to compare their assessments with those of their neighbors and "a legal notice, as an alternative, is not sufficient to do that."

Under the present policy, county Assessor Philip Watson has been publishing reassessed areas in newspapers which serve those areas for the past 10 years.

Last year, the county paid $394,000 for publication of those lists.

However, Carmine Bellino, a special investigator hired to streamline the operation of Watson's office, last March recommended the county abandon the practice because "the costs did not warrant the service."

Tuesday, Supervisor Baxter Ward said that while he agreed with Bellino's recommendation, he believed this was not the right time to cut the service.

There are still "some clouds over Watson's assessment practices and until all doubt is dispelled, I am for publishing lists," he added.

Pomona council settles squabble in project bid

The Pomona City Council found itself in the middle of a squabble between the builder of a city project and one of his subcontractors this week.

The owner of Martin J. Jaska Inc., contractor for the construction of a city heliport and police helicopter hangar at Brackett Field in La Verne, appeared before the council to request its permission to substitute electrical subcontractors for the project.

Jaska told the council the change was needed to correct a clerical error in his company's bids for the project. He said he inadvertently submitted the bid of one subcontractor while listing the name of another.

The subcontractor erroneously listed, Walterscheid Electric Co., challenged the change. A representative of the company told the council it should remain as the subcontractor for the project.

Council members eventually decided to allow the change, as state law allows, on condition that Jaska provide all the legal expenses if a lawsuit results.

The project is already under construction and the electrical work is being performed by Hughes Electric, whose low bid was submitted to the city by Jaska.

In other business this week, the council appointed Councilman G. Stanton Selby as the city's representative on a Rapid Transit District advisory committee, which includes members from La Verne and Claremont.

The new committee will be looking at possible ways the three cities can achieve their goal of withdrawing from the Southern California Rapid Transit District.

In a related comment, Mayor Charles Bader asked that a presentation be prepared showing how the city would be served by the West Valley Transit Authority.

Film series on health scheduled

The film series, "Eat Right to Your Heart's Delight," provided by Blue Cross of Southern California, will be the basis for a special six-week nutrition education program at the Pomona Health Center.

The weekly classes, held Friday from 2 to 3 p.m., will show persons how to implement a healthy diet designed to lower calories.

Films and lectures will show how to make the best selections in the supermarket, how to store and prepare food to preserve flavor and nutrients, and at the same time encourage desirable food practices that will lower the risk of obesity and atherosclerotic heart disease.

The first class, Friday, will present, "Low Fat Meat Preparation."

Other films in the series, which won a 19th Annual International Film Festival award for 1976, are "Meatless Menus," "New Ways with Chicken," "Modifying Recipes to Control Saturated Fats and Calories," "Seafood Specialties," and "Meals in a Half Hour."

Persons may call Sheila Jelly, nutritionist at 623-6811 ext. 525.

Jones to be speaker at Pomona C of C installation dinner

Thomas V. Jones, chairman and chief executive officer of Northrop Corp., will be guest speaker at the Pomona Chamber of Commerce installation dinner June 29 at Cal Poly's Kellogg West. The cocktail hour will begin at 6:30 p.m. with dinner at 7:30.

Jones joined Northrop in 1953 as assistant chief engineer and was named senior vice president for development planning in 1958. He was elected president in 1959, chief executive officer in 1960 and chairman of the board in 1963. From 1963 to 1975, he served in all three capacities.

He served the Brazilian government from 1947 to 1951 as technical adviser to the Brazilian Air Ministry. Concurrently, he was a professor and department head in the Brazilian Institute of Technology.

He was a Douglas Aircraft Co. engineer during and after World War II.

Jones was born in Pomona July 21, 1920. He was graduated from Stanford University in 1942, magna cum laude, in engineering, and received an honorary doctor of laws degree from George Washington University in Washington, D.C., in 1967.

D.B. Women's Club to hold rabies clinic

The Diamond Bar Women's Club will sponsor a rabies vaccination clinic July 8 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Lorbeer Junior High School in Diamond Bar.

Co-sponsor will be the Southern California Veterinary Medical Association. The clinic will be coordinated by the Los Angeles County Department of Animal Control.

State, county and city laws require the immunization of all dogs over the age of four months.

The vaccination fee is $2 per dog.

Burrowers

The term "Terrier" was formerly applied to dogs who pursued small game into burrows.

Claremonters' son gains high honors in dentistry

Noel Sheldon Smith, son of Diana and Bowen Smith of Claremont, graduated from the School of Dentistry, College of Physicians and Surgeons, University of the Pacific, San Francisco, as class valedictorian.

At the graduation awards banquet, Dr. Smith was presented the California Academy of General Dentistry award as the most versatile student of the graduating class; the Arthur McDowell Scholarship Fund Award, for having achieved the highest grade Council of the Alpha Omega Fraternity award for having attained the highest grade point average; and the Tau Kappa Omega National Dental Honor Society Award for academic achievement.

On July 1, Dr. Smith will begin a one-year residency at the Veteran's Administration Hospital in San Francisco which is a post-doctoral educational, clinical and surgical program in conjunction with the UC Dental School.

Dr. Smith resides in Tiburon. A 1969 graduate of Claremont High School, he did his undergraduate studies at the U.C. Irvine, receiving a B.S. degree and graduating with honors in biological sciences in 1973. The following year, he attended UCLA Graduate School of Public Health.

Real estate taxes due June 30

Real estate taxes not paid on or before June 30, will carry additional penalties, warned H.B. Alvord, Los Angeles County tax collector.

He said all unpaid taxes will require the payment of a 6 per cent penalty and $3 per parcel costs for preparing the delinquent list.

Property on which delinquent taxes have not been paid by June 30 will be sold to the state. Additional penalties of 1 per cent per month and a redemption fee of $2 per parcel will then be added.

Alvord said notices of delinquent taxes have been mailed to property owners by his office. There are several thousand notices which have not reached owners because of incorrect or unknown addresses.

If a property owner has not paid his taxes, and a bill or delinquent notice has not been received, he should call the tax collector's office at (213) 974-2111 to obtain a bill.

Payments may be made by sending the tax stub and a check or money order to H.B. Alvord, 225 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, 90012.

Re-forestation program

600 trees replanted at Bonelli Park

A unique project to re-forest undeveloped areas of Los Angeles County regional parks continued this week with the planting of 600 smog-resistant trees in Bonelli Park, San Dimas.

One hundred elementary school children planted the trees as part of a new program called "The Growing Concern."

When fully mature, the fast-growing Aleppo and Canary Island pines will reach heights of 65 to 120 feet.

The plantings are supervised by the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation in association with the California Conservation Project, a non-profit organization dedicated to environmental education and re-forestation.

"The Growing Concern" is a community project sponsored by Atlantic Richfield Co. which expects to have some 4,000 trees planted in Los Angeles County regional parks by the end of the year. A similar project is planned for Orange County.

For the Bonelli Park program, elementary school children from the valley assisted. Each child received a tree to plant at home as a momento of the occasion.

Teachers to attend conventions

Members of the Associated Pomona Teachers will attend conventions this summer in Minneapolis, Minn.

Steven W. Enoch, president and Delbert Pfeifer, executive director, will attend the National Conference of Urban Education Associations in Minneapolis on June 28-30. Pfeifer will also attend the session sponsored by the National League of Professional Staff Associations on June 28-30.

Seven teachers will attend the representative assembly of the National Education Association as state and local delegates in Minneapolis from July 1-7.

They are:

Will Bollinger — teacher, Ganesha High; Bus Ellis — teacher, Simons Jr. High; Judd Ellson — teacher, Simons Jr. High; Steve Enoch — teacher, Armstrong Elementary; Jim Ervin — counselor, Marshall Jr. High; Susan Espinoza — teacher, Simons Jr. High; Dorothy Goldsmith — librarian, Marshall Jr. High; and Ada Jeppesen — teacher, Pomona High.

The services, programs and policy positions for the National Education Association for 1977-78 school year will be the major topics under consideration in Minneapolis. Pomona will be represented by more delegates than any other city in the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys.

NOSTALGIA — Franz Mittermeier of Talheim in upper Bavaria may cause a feeling of nostalgia in his neighbors as he cultivates his field with a horse-drawn sowing machine such as his ancestors used 50 years ago. He's one of the few West German farmers who still use oat-burning power plants on their farm equipment.

Pounding pavement still one of best ways to land summer job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There are plenty of summer jobs out there looking for students, says Dick Peterson, who runs one of the state's biggest youth employment programs. Here are some of his tips on how to find an opening, charm the interviewer and keep the job once you've got it.

Peterson is coordinator of Youth Opportunities Unlimited, a joint effort of the Los Angeles Greater Unified School District and the Greater Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce. YOU channels jobs from employers to student counselors, known these days as "work experience coordinators," in local high schools.

Most California school districts have similar programs throughout the summer months, and job coordination services are also available through the state's Employment Development Department. The phone number of your local EDD office is listed under "State of California" in the White Pages. Peterson says, however, that one of the best bets is the old pounding the pavement routine.

"Go to companies, dress appropriately, and fill out a lot of applications," he advises. "Many of the fast-food companies have continual hiring programs, as do many of the amusement parks. Talk to friends, neighbors and relatives who may know of a position open."

Peterson offers these "Do's and Don't" for student job seekers:

—Get a sample application form, fill it out at home and take it with you to job interviews. That way you'll have the dates of your elementary, junior high and high school graduations and the names and addresses of your references ready to be copied onto the company's form.

—If you're applying directly to a company, find out something about the firm and its product. Check out what kind of clothes the employes wear and dress accordingly. Go alone — not with your friends — and find out ahead of time exactly where you're going and the name of the person you should see.

—Manners, poise and self-confidence are the key things to remember in the actual interview, but don't turn them on just for that. If you behave badly while you're waiting, you may not be able to make it up in the interview. If the personnel officer asks what you can do, don't say "anything." You should know your skills and abilities before you apply.

—You should be 16, and you must have a Social Security number and a work permit in order for an employer to hire you. Your high school can supply you with the Social Security application form.

Uplanders fattening falcon(s)

Bird swoops down for food out of hands

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

A young falcon in Upland has his fat and his freedom, too.

Mrs. Ann Ascher, 2233 Palm Way, and her young neighbor, Peter Lassalette, 2225 Palm Way, have been adopted by one — or possibly two — striking birds with rose-pink and blue-gray feathers.

"We assumed for a long time that it was just one bird that came down to be fed," Mrs. Ascher reported. "But now, we think it may be a female and male which are almost identical in coloring and size.

"The falcon was first spotted about a year ago, just after we moved into this new neighborhood," adds Mrs. Ascher.

At first, Mrs. Ascher tossed bread, cheese or other tidbits into the air. The bird would sweep down and grab the food and fly onto the garage roof to enjoy his snack.

It was a butcher who told the Upland woman that falcons love fat. He gave her some to try.

Sure enough, the falcon wanted the fat so much that he would land on her hand and pull the food from her fingers.

"Now, the falcon sits on the rooftops or telephone wires and watches for someone with food. I whistle, and he sweeps down to sit on my hand.

"Our feathered friend (or friends) has a very impatient nature," adds Mrs. Ascher. "If we don't come out of the house when he expect us, he comes down and hits against the Windows."

At first, only the Aschers' windows were brushed by the bird, but now that Peter has taken up feeding the falcon, windows at his home have been hit.

"We've photographed the bird several times and really love him, but have not given him a name. Maybe we will consider a pet name, but a falcon represents freedom, so maybe a name would be too civilized."

TAKING FAT

Peter Lassalette, 2225 Palm Way, Upland, feeds fat to a young falcon who has learned to attract attention by brushing against two windows of two Upland homes.

MSAC board freezes salaries of teachers, classified employes

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Trustees at Mt. San Antonio College in an unexpected action Wednesday night froze the salary structure for 700 full-time teachers and classified employes at the present levels.

The board also moved ahead with implementation of an instructional program that will give the trustees more control over the faculty an as well as over what is taught at the college.

The two moves apparently were made in response to unfair labor charges filed by the Faculty Association with the Educational Employment Relations Board (EERB) nearly three weeks ago.

Wednesday's action means there will be no pay raises on July 1 to start the new fiscal year. Whether the raises will come forth later depends on resumption of contract negotiations which have come to an impasse as of now.

There was an indication that the trustees' position on the salaries may change later. They approved pay raises for management and confidential employes amounting, according to a college official, to an average of about 6 per cent.

As for the instructional program, the board approved implementation starting Sept. 1 over the objection of the teachers.

Carter Doran, president of the faculty senate, asked the trustees to continue studying the proposal and to set up a new committee that would give the trustees feedback. But he got no place.

"I don't want any more committees working on this," board member William Temple declared. "We've had committees consider this for five years now. I see no reason for any more delays."

Then the board approved a management audit for the college — including the new instructional program that would merge the present department system into divisions — starting in the fall.

It was a highly charged meeting with the teachers asking for concessions and the board staying aloof — a complete change over past years.

An indication of the extent of the rift came when Pat Perez, president of the faculty, asked for a copy of the contract between the board and its consultant, John Wagner. Trustees instructed the administration to charge for copying the four-page public document.

Earlier in the evening, the board approved a $25,914,273 tentative budget, a reduction of $56,000 over last year. But last year's budget included pay raises for the teachers.

James Simpson, vice president in charge of business services, said a pay raise would necessitate either a drain on the district's $3 million surplus or an increase in the current tax rate of $.7073 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Judges hope to get aid from Assembly on fight for more jurists

The fight of the legal profession to get more judges for the Los Angeles County Superior Court apparently is far from over.

Undaunted by the refusal of the county Board of Supervisors to support the addition of 34 more judges, the jurists have now gone to the state Assembly for help — and there is a good chance that they'll get it.

An emergency bill introduced by Los Angeles Assemblyman Art Torres which offers the county $2 million in state aid to add any number of judges up to 34 was narrowly defeated Tuesday.

Approval fell just two votes short of a two-thirds majority needed to carry the emergency measure.

But Torres said he will try again today or Friday to push the bill through, even though the majority of the county supervisors has already turned the offer down.

If the measure passes, it will then go before the state Senate for consideration.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, whose vote turned the tide against more judges, says he is "surprised" at the action taken first by the Ways and Means Committee and then by the Assembly.

"It is an unusual move, to say the least, to approve judges which the Board of Supervisors doesn't want," he declared. "The legislature's policy has always been to subsidize more judges only at the request of either the Grand Jury or the supervisors."

Hahn said the board refused the judges' request by a 3-2 margin last week for two reasons: It was too expensive, and it failed to guarantee "sorely needed" court reforms.

The supervisor claimed that even though the state would pay the salaries of the judges, the support staff — clerks, bailiffs, court reporters, district attorneys and public defenders — would cost the county more than $4 million.

Moreover, Hahn is upset because the judges declined to join him in supporting a merger of the Municipal and Superior courts into one system.

As a result of that refusal, the supervisors appealed to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to lead the fight to reorganize the courts.

Hahn was joined by supervisors Peter Schabarum and Baxter Ward in calling for a constitutional amendment to put the merger proposal on the June, 1978 ballot.

They said the merger would save $50 million a year in court costs throughout the state.

Right now, there are 171 Superior Court judges in Los Angeles County, including eight in Pomona. Court officials said if the 34 judges are approved, Pomona will get one or two more.

William Hogoboom, presiding judge of the Superior Court, said the judges are opposed to a merger with the Municipal Court because their system is different and the merger would not work.

He pointed out that while the county has one Superior Court system, there are 27 Municipal Court districts throughout the county, and before any merger could be considered those districts would have to be consolidated into one system.

Meanwhile, Samuel Shore, president of the Los Angeles Trial Lawyers Association, launched a bitter attack against Hahn for refusing to support the bid for the additional judges.

He charged that Hahn as well as Schabarum and Ward have "denied justice to the people" by their action.

He accused Hahn of attempting to make the court system "a political tool in his manipulation of the courts to serve personal interests."

Shore said litigants already have to wait three years for civil trials. Without additional judges, he warned, the civil courts may soon have to shut down.

Pomonan will receive Eagle award today

Jerry Nicholas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald G. Nicholas of Pomona, will receive his Eagle Scout Award during court of honor ceremonies today at the Pomona First Baptist Church.

Nicholas, a June graduate of Lutheran High School, La Verne, is a member of Boy Scout Troop 101, sponsored by the First Baptist Church of Pomona. Bob Rose is his scoutmaster.

For his Eagle project, Nicholas reseeded a burned area in Bonelli Regional Park, and planted walnut and oak trees.

He is a football letterman. His scout service has included patrol leader, assistant patrol leader and senior patrol leader. He attended the 13th Buckskin Conference in 1973.

He was an honor student in high school.

Citizen group speaks up against Expo 81 in area

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

"We have no money. We have no consultants. We do have an understandable desire to save the communities where we live from unwanted exploitation."

Thus Louise French, spokesman for the Citizens Against Expo 81, explained the group's goal and function to Ontario City Council members late Tuesday night. Mrs. French spoke at nearly midnight and received applause from the 20 plus supporters in the audience; and a gavel pounding for silence from Mayor Paul Treadway.

The anti-Expo 81 remarks were received reluctantly by council members. Treadway, in whispered conversations with other council members and administrators, attempted to have the item removed from the agenda when Expo 81 Corp. representatives didn't show as expected. Councilwoman Faye Dastrup pushed the issue of Expo and finally won consensus to allow the item to remain.

Irene Rice of Ontario, a vocal opponent to the international fair, first approached the podium. Treadway told her "There is no business to be handled by the City Council this evening" regarding Expo 81. Nonetheless, Mrs. Rice offered a few comments before turning the microphone over to Mrs. French.

The Upland woman pointed out several "notable misgivings" shared by members of the Citizens Against Expo 81 who lived primarily between the La Verne-San Dimas and Riverside-San Bernardino areas. Questioning the "advisability" of Expo 81, she mentioned such concerns as future land use, management and growth, economic and business climate, impact on air and water resources and financial requirements to be imposed on taxpayers.

She cited a range of services — police, fire, paramedic, camping facilities at Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park, street, planning — that would have to be provided the exposition from the public tax rolls. Mrs. French charged that "financiers from New York and concessionaries" would enjoy the profits, not valley residents.

"With so many already greatly needed projects in Ontario, how can we divert funds to these costly additional expenditures?" Mrs. French asked.

Jerry Clemans, Expo 81 Corp. public relations director, explained that the Expo promoters did not attend the council session as scheduled because "we had no reason to be there."

Clemans said the new financial proposal for a tax exempt revenue bond does not alter the agreement Expo 81 currently has with the city and Ontario Motor Speedway nonprofit board.

"There's nothing at this point that we're asking the city to change. We're really not asking the City Council to vote on anything and not asking that the contract be changed at this time.

"We'll appear before the council and further explain it (the financial proposal) after (City Atty.) Sam Crowe and Bear, Stearns and Co. attorneys reach agreement. That's the key to the thing," Clemans added.

The Citizens Against Expo 81 includes members of the Claremont League of Women Voters, United Democrats of Pomona Valley, Clean Air Now, the Sierra Club and other organizations and private individuals.

In her closing remarks, Mrs. French stated that the group is conducting research on and circulating petitions against the exposition. Both will be presented to the council "in due time," she said.

Chino will celebrate anniversary

The City of Chino will celebrate its 90th anniversary this July.

As part of the planned recognition of the historic event, the Chino Branch Library and the Chino Valley Historical Society will present a series of local history programs concerning the Chino Valley.

The programs will span the historical period of Chino's development starting in the 1700s and continuing through the actual development as a city in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Further information may be obtained by calling 628-1604.

Pomona man shot in hand

A young Pomona man was wounded in one hand Tuesday night in an unexplained shooting incident near Sharkie Park, Main Street and Grand Avenue, police reported.

The victim, 21, went to Pomona Valley Community Hospital but declined treatment, authorities said. They said he supplied them with no information about the incident.

No injuries or damage in 4.7 Bay Area jolt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — No serious injuries or major damages were reported after a "moderate" earthquake shook the San Francisco Bay Area.

The earthquake was recorded just after 7:30 p.m. PDT Monday.

University of California seismologist Bruce Bolt termed the quake "moderate" and said it was centered six miles east of Livermore, a city about 40 miles east of Oakland. Bolt's preliminary figures put the quake's magnitude at 4.7 on the Richter scale.

The National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., measured the quake at 4.9.

Earthquakes of that magnitude are capable of causing damage, according to seismologists.

The Alameda County sheriff's office said no reports of injuries or damages had been received from the Livermore area.

Bonita wage dispute unchanged

Bonita school board members and district teachers apparently are no closer to a settlement of their wage dispute, despite release of a factfinding report on salaries Wednesday night.

The chairman of the factfinding panel essentially agreed with the district's position that only a small (1 or 2 per cent) salary raise could be given for 1976-77 school year, with a larger raise for 1977-78.

Robert M. Leventhal, the panel chairman, told the school board that $50,000 was available for raises this year, and $250,000 for 1977-78.

He recommended a 5 per cent raise, retroactive to May 1, 1977. This would amount to the same as a 1 per cent boost for 1976-77 and 4 per cent for 1977-78, according to Supt. James Johnson.

However, the factfinding report is not binding on the teachers or the district, and teachers have strongly disagreed with it.

Teachers had been asking for a 6.8 per cent boost for 1976-77, retroactive to July Sept. 1, 1976. They also wanted a 5.3 per cent raise for next year, but the district had offered only 2 per cent for 1976-77 and had not discussed the following year.

Johnson said the factfinding report "proves we don't have the money" for the raises the teachers requested.

However, the factfinder who represented teachers on the panel, Thomas L. Brown, said he "respectfully dissents with the chairman's findings in virtually every respect.

"Certainly, the chairman and the board's factfinder knows the report is totally unacceptable to the teachers . . ."

Judging from Brown's response, Johnson said he expects the salary dispute to continue.

A factfinding panel is one of the processes in negotiations determined by the state's Educational Employment Relations Board (EERB) when the two parties fail to reach agreement. The panel decides whether there is money available for increases.

Sorry record on noise

One afternoon a week or so ago, a government secretary sat in her Washington office typing letters, answering the phones and chatting with a visitor. In the space of an hour, three trains rolled past her window, drowning all conversation.

"Doesn't that racket drive you crazy?" her visitor asked.

"Not really," the secretary replied. "I don't even hear it anymore."

Her response, while perfectly typical for someone regularly subjected to intense but intermittent noise, was slightly ironic. The secretary works for a House subcommittee which has just concluded that the government's program to combat noise pollution is essentially a flop.

It has been five years since Congress enacted the Noise Control Act of 1972, and the country is as noisy as ever.

Trains, buses, trucks, airplanes, construction equipment, kitchen gadgets, electric tools, lawn mowers and other types of machinery assault our ears and fray our nerves.

An estimated 16 million Americans suffer from some degree of hearing loss directly attributable to noise. Another 13 million live in urban areas where the average noise level is intense enough to be rated as harmful to their health, according to government reports, and nearly half of our entire population — an estimated 100 million people — is subjected to average noise levels the government defines as annoying.

Most of us, like the congressional secretary, tend to adopt a "grin and bear it" attitude to noise, accepting it as an irritating but necessary price of modern technology.

But Congress decided five years ago that the cacophony could and should be reduced, and it gave the Environmental Protection Agency primary responsibility for doing so.

The agency's response has been less than dazzling, according to both a recent report by the General Accounting Office, the watchdog arm of Congress, and testimony at a hearing by a House Commerce subcommittee chaired by Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-Pa.

In five years, EPA has identified only 11 products as major noise sources and has issued final regulations for just two: newly manufactured portable air compressors and medium- and heavy-duty trucks.

The agency has also issued regulations for interstate motor carriers and for interstate railroads, but the latter will have little immediate impact since it applies only to new locomotives — not existing ones.

Airplane noise, an intense irritant to millions of people who live near airports, continues virtually unabated while EPA and the Federal Aviation Administration battle over jurisdictional questions.

And along with all this, the federal government's spending for noise research has actually decreased over the past five years.

Not surprisingly, the government's sorry track record on muffling the noise in our technological society has angered Rooney and members of his subcommittee, who are reviewing the program's funding authorization.

Ordinarily, a few stinging press releases would be the only result of such congressional ire. But Rooney has seized upon a considerably more effective means of spurring EPA to greater efforts: He plans to withhold any additional funding for the noise control program until the agency shapes up.

If he can persuade the rest of Congress to go along, he will in effect put EPA on "probation" for a year, at its existing funding level, while closely monitoring the agency's noise pollution control program.

If a few more congressional committees would be equally hard-nosed in reviewing the effectiveness of programs Congress has enacted over the years, who knows what might result? We might even get a government that works.

Joyce Hifler

Think on these things

Sometimes we are forced to think for ourselves — and that's not at all bad. As much as we would like to depend on other people and trust in their guidance and wisdom, the responsibility is still ours.

Most of us like the thought that we have someone on whom we can rely without hesitation. It's comforting to know we're not alone — but dangerous to lose our ability to think and cope. It is something of an art to keep one's mind clear and sharp, and that is impossible without exercising it regularly. Too much dependency robs us of gifts that need to be polished by frequent use.

Surely there's a middle ground where avid thought is highly useful without having to do it just to survive.

Society overrun by lawyers

WASHINGTON — Not long ago, the Shah of Iran spoke to Chief Justice Warren Burger about modernizing the judicial processes in his country. Apologetically, the Shah explained that Iran's system of justice was primitive. In the villages, he said, disputes were resolved by councils of elders. There were no courts, no lawyers, no judicial review.

The Chief Justice confided afterward that he would like to send a legal team to Iran to investigate village justice. The American experts, he suggested, might learn something.

Burger has become increasingly dismayed with the complex legal system in the United States. The lawyers are entangling the populace in litigation, bogging down the courts and substituting legal manipulation for justice.

"The harsh truth," he warned the American Bar Association last month, "is that . . . we may well be on our way to a society overrun by hordes of lawyers, hungry as locusts, and brigades of judges in numbers never before contemplated."

Across the land, lawyers lurk behind the bushes waiting to pounce upon the passers-by, drag them into court and drain them of their assets. Most lawsuits benefit only the lawyers, who collect fat fees and leave both parties worse off.

Attorneys also dominate the government. The founding fathers intended that Congress, for example, should be representative of the people. But the lawyers have taken it over; they hold more than 300 of the 535 seats.

Attorneys also populate the various federal agencies, boards, commissions, committees and councils. Both in and out of government, Washington has more lawyers per capita than any city in the world. The lawyers in government produce complex legislation and regulations, which create business for the lawyers out of government.

Today, the confused citizen needs an attorney to make out a tax return, sell a home, settle an estate and protect him from the proliferating pitfalls that the government lawyers produce. Here are our observations:

— The nation is overrun with lawyers who, lured by the scent of the green, congregate where the big money is. They thrive, for example, on corporate law. Indeed, many a corporate president began as the general counsel. Yet the nation's 29 million poor are suffering from a lawyer shortage. An estimated 85 per cent of their legal needs are still unmet.

— All too often, the legal decision goes to the client with the most money. He can outmaneuver and outlast his poorer opponent in the courts. It is not uncommon, corporate attorneys tell us, for complex cases to drag on for more than a decade. The client who has to count his money may not survive the legal skirmishing. The poor often cannot afford to seek redress of grievances for even the most basic injustices.

— Most lawyers price themselves out of the average American's range. Their hourly rates start around $35, quickly reach $100 and continue on up into the stratosphere. Once the eminent Washington attorney, Clark Clifford, made a rare appearance on Capitol Hill for Charles Revson, the head of Revlon cosmetics. Clifford coached his client carefully, then sat silently at his side while Revson answered congressmen's questions. For this appearance, Clifford sent Revson a bill for $25,000.

— The legal processes have become encumbered with procedural rigmarole — unnecessary routines that are designed more to enrich the lawyers than to serve the public. It costs a small fortune, for example, to clear the title for a home purchase. And the probate processes have become so encrusted that the attorneys often wind up with a greater share of an inheritance than the heirs.

— Attorneys are supposed to be society's peacemakers and problem solvers. Too many devote themselves to the opposite; they are troublemakers who create problems. They operate on the theory, apparently, that the more trouble they can stir up, the more law business there will be. The wise judge Learned Hand once remarked: "I must say that as a litigant I should dread a lawsuit beyond almost anything else short of sickness and death."

— Most lawyers, in the opinion of the judges who watch them in action, are incompetent. Chief Justice Burger has noted: "Many judges in general jurisdiction trial courts have stated to me that fewer than 25 per cent of the lawyers appearing before them are genuinely qualified."

— Some 28,000 young graduates will pour out of the nation's law schools this year. This is nearly double the number who graduated 10 years ago. With few exceptions, they are licensed, according to Burger, "without the slightest inquiry into their capacity to perform the practical functions of a counselor or an advocate."

Paul Harvey

Young, sophisticated superfly

Andy Young is no longer an enigma.

It took a while for us to recognize what he was up to.

At first it appeared to make no sense for a diplomat to be moving about Africa in the undiplomatic role of a gadfly.

The very idea that the chief of the United States' U.N. delegation should be going around Africa fanning smouldering passions into flame — it didn't seem to make sense.

It does now.

Our U.N. Ambassador Andy Young, in the name of "human rights," told black Africans to boycott white merchants; called the British "chicken" on racial matters; implied black American troops would refuse to fight on the side of South African whites.

All this table pounding made no difference whatever to the principals involved.

Africans cannot boycott white merchants any more than they have.

Britain demanded and got a fine-print apology.

There never was any question about our military involvement in South Africa.

Then why all the inflammatory rhetoric?

We all tend to be reassured when any policy-making national official of our country sounds off in behalf of something in which we believe.

This is no less true of blacks in the United States.

When they see in headlines a black official telling off whites, they are reassured that their interests are receiving official attention.

It is an artful political device for taking the heat off the homefront.

Andy Young has utterly defanged stateside agitators for black rights.

The Abernathys and the Browns and the Jacksons have been effectively gelded by this Administration superstar focusing all black-white race resentment "elsewhere."

"Human rights" is the best of all issues with which to unify the electorate. It cannot offend. It mollifies the masses.

President Carter, subscribing entirely to the declamations of Andy Young, predicts that Young will one day be "a Third World hero."

I suggest the parallel purpose is to create a homefront hero whose protestations tend to shush dissent.

How long has it been since you've heard of an race-related picketing or other demonstrating in the United States?

As governor of Georgia, Jimmy Carter was similarly skillful — sacrificing home-state support on the race issue in order to build the only kind of a national reputation that could win national office. Andy Young, then and now, has helped with elegance and eloquence to establish and sustain that image.

This may be the first-ever Administration in our nation which has managed to neuter domestic race restiveness by — in effect — moving the race problems to Africa.

Our man in Washington

Carter and Congress not in tune

By TERRY WADE
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter is not pleased with Congress and the feeling is mutual. Congress is losing confidence in the President and, interestingly, Democrats are leading the retreat.

Democrats, who only a few weeks ago were giddy with the potential of the situation, now lament dealing with the President of their own party. It was an uneasy relationship from day one, but Carter was given the benefit of the doubt — after all, he was a fellow Democrat.

Carter didn't give Congress the same break. An anti-Washington candidate, he continued to reflect distrust that has apparently resulted in poor White House-Capitol Hill communications. The resulting missed signals and misunderstandings are a root cause for the waning confidence Congress has in the President.

The communications problem is accentuated by the early mistrust and an increasing realization that the new Congress is different than the Congresses of the pre-Watergate era. What was once perceived as a natural combativeness between a Democratic Congress and a Republican president is now seen between the same Congress and a Democratic president.

Congress is no longer content with simply disposing of presidential proposals. Policy making is more exciting and the legislative body is interested in a little of that action. So, all of these things have conspired to cause Mr. Carter problems.

There is little wonder he is displeased. None of his major initiatives have been implemented. In fact, most of his proposals have been ignored or gutted by Congress and the prospects for future legislation look bleak.

Congress, on the other hand, also has a legitimate complaint. This man (President Carter), whom they originally tried to work with, has left them in the lurch on such issues as the tax rebate and subsidized home insulation. In other cases, Carter has offered major legislation without so much as a how-do-you-do to Congress.

Both sides are beginning to reevaluate their positions, but the White House will have to make the major concessions. Congress is certain it is right. What the President must do, if his administration is to be effective, is very simple. He must learn that the people on Capitol Hill are important to him. If he learns that lesson, then his administration will be worthwhile.

If he does not learn to bend before he is forced to, the Republicans will have a good shot at a lot of House seats in 1978 and at Carter's job two years later.

Who says you can't fight City Hall? — Time and again the city fathers of Alameda, Calif., had failed to heed the impassioned arguments and protestations of an irate citizen. But where there's a weapon there's a way. That frustrated individual finally decided the time had come to make certain those city fathers got the message straight from the horse's rear end. So, to convince them they should show a little horse sense instead of just horse around, he dumped five cubic yards of horse manure on the City Hall steps.

Getting rid of dead wood

By EARL G. WATERS

Did Sen. Bill Campbell get his head under the tent in his efforts to gain adoption by the legislature of the "sunset" concept in state government? The surprise approval of SB 5 by the Senate, which would eliminate the Department of Insurance by 1981 unless it can convince the legislature that it performs necessary functions, would make it seem that he has.

The idea of "sunset" legislation was presented to the legislature two years ago by Sen. Campbell, then a member of the Assembly. It started a panic among bureaucrats and his bill failed in committee. Elected to the Senate last year, Campbell promptly renewed the proposal to automatically eliminate all regulatory agencies of government which failed to justify their continuance each five years.

Sen. James Mills countered with a resolution ordering Legislative Analyst Alan Post to study the idea and report back next year. Campbell, a conservative Republican, viewed that as an effort to head off "sunset" legislation. He may have been right, for Post is on record against the idea, saying he thinks sunsetting would "exacerbate" the problem rather than help.

And, although Campbell hasn't given up on his bill (SB 62), a dark horse in the form of SB 5, authored by liberal Democrat Omer Rains, is the measure which gained Senate approval. It merely singles out the Insurance Commissioner for a "pilot test" of the sunset concept. Since Campbell fully supported Rains' bill, his idea can be said to be taking hold.

That the time has come for cutbacks in government regulatory programs is obvious as the public complaints of too much government grow louder across the nation and even President Carter found it a convincing argument in his campaign last year.

Colorado, the first state to adopt sunset laws, now has tangible results with four of its state agencies recently abolished. Fourteen other states have enacted similar legislation and a sunset proposal is before Congress.

Rains' selection of the Insurance Commissioner as a pilot may not be the best test if elimination of an agency is the sole goal of sunset for it can hardly be contended that insurance companies shouldn't be regulated by the state. But Rains saw it as an opportunity to compel an agency which he feels is not doing an adequate job to undergo a complete accounting to the legislature. In this instance the aim of sunset is to make an agency "shape up."

Perhaps Campbell should narrow his proposal down also and single out a half dozen agencies which everyone knows serve no real purpose, using them as "pilot tests" to show that sunsetting will work to eliminate "dead wood" in government.

For despite the skepticism of Post and others who feel the legislature already has the power and the tools to review questionable state programs, the beauty of "sunset" is that the legislature must go on record with a majority vote to permit continuance of each agency. As it stands, without sunset laws, a majority must vote "aye" to eliminate any agency.

As everyone knows, including the bureaucrats who will fight sunset laws to the bitter end, it is 10 times easier to get "no" votes on any issue than it is to get a majority of "aye" votes. That has been the chief reason for the inability of the lawmakers to trim government up to this point. If sunset can work in nearly one-third of the states of the nation, it deserves a try in California.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem in three words — I'm a klutz. The embarrassment and shame I've suffered from spilling things, breaking things, dropping things, stumbling, falling — is more than I can take.

Everthing I do screams "KLUTZ." When I shuffle cards, serve a glass of water, walk into a room, I feel like a clumsy ox — inept and left-footed.

Life would be a breeze instead of a hurricane if I were more graceful — or at least a little better coordinated. Please don't send me to ballet school, just tell me how to develop poise at home. — Klutzy Carol (Age 19)

Dear Carol: Most klutziness is the result of (a) hurrying, (b) being absent-minded — no concentration on what one is doing.

Slow down and make a conscious effort to do every small thing as gracefully as possible. You're bound to see an improvement, Lovey.

P.S. Can it be that you are subconsciously klutzing it up a little to call attention to yourself? Some people would rather be laughed at than ignored. Think of these things.

Dear Ann Landers: A continuing family problem prompts my first letter to your column, regarding the writer from Philadelphia who keeps sending gifts and checks and gets no thanks or acknowledgments from nieces and nephews.

Out of a family of four children we have a 12-year-old boy (I can sit down and guide him through the thank you's, no problem), an 18-year-old girl who responds warmly, and promptly, without prodding, a 22-year-old who responds warmly, but not too promptly, and a 20-year-old son who stubbornly refuses to write a thank-you note, no matter how I beg or plead and try to shame him into it.

When I see a relative who has sent a gift to this impossible boy I make some feeble attempt to apologize. It goes against my grain but I feel I must say something.

If you have a solution to the problem I would love to hear it. In the meantime, I resent the accusation that I did not raise him properly. He knows what to do. He just won't do it. — Not Guilty In Endwell, N.Y.

Dear Not Guilty: Can it be that your 20-year-old clod refuses to acknowledge gifts because he likes to bug you?

I suggest the following: When a gift for him arrives, phone the sender — tell him or her it was a lovely, thoughtful gesture.

Also say, "Unfortunately the young man is very remiss when it comes to acknowledging gifts and this, of course, distresses me. Please don't send him another gift ever again, if he fails to say thank you for this one. I, as his mother, would consider it a great favor."

Dear Ann Landers: A friend of mine is married to the youngest son of a large family. Her husband, Ferdinand, has five brothers — all older. Their wives seem to produce nothing but girls. At last count Ferdinand and Cheryl had 17 nieces.

Cheryl became pregnant recently. She is determined to have a boy and has been eating herbs and root food (carrots, turnips and beets) like mad. Her grandmother says this will produce a male child. True or false. — Big Q

Dear Q: The sex of a child is determined at the moment of conception. Whatever she is carrying has already been decided.

Patrick Henry's will to widow

Our Love and War man is disturbed by the fact that the American orator Patrick Henry became more famous than the American statesman Gouverneur Morris. In Henry's last will and testament, he provided most generously for his widow Dorothea, but only on the condition that she never remarry. In Morris' last will and testament, he provided most generously for his widow Ann, but with the proviso that her income would be doubled should she decide to remarry. "Clearly, Morris was a larger figure than Henry," says our L. and W. man.

A. Bangkok. It's crisscrossed by canals.

You know those simple little stay-awake pills that you can buy at any drugstore? Each contains just about the same amount of caffeine as a cup of coffee. So some doctors now are advising the caffeine addicts, who are trying to quit coffee because of the high prices, to substitute the caffeine citrate tablets as needed.

HOT WATER

Question arises as to which uses the most hot water, a clothes washer, an automatic dishwasher or a tub bath. No doubt about it, the clothes washer. It takes between 30 and 40 gallons. Figure 10 to 16 gallons for the dishwasher. And Maybe 25 gallons for the bath.

Did I say the car on the back of the $10 bill is a Hudson? Oh, oh. Am now advised it's a 1926 Hupmobile.

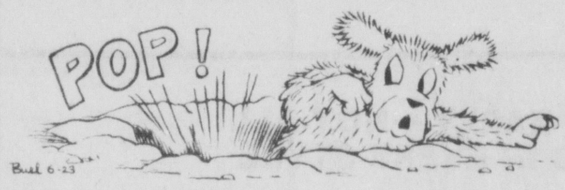
Balloon popping stops dog digging



DEAR DR. MILLER: Since your constant harping through the column about keeping your dog confined had a lot to do with our decision to keep Buddy in the backyard, well, our problem is partly your responsibility, so we feel justified in asking for help. Buddy was good at first in the backyard, but now he's discovered the "joys" of digging to China. He's dug this huge hole. We filled it up several times, and he opened it up again. The only way we could stop him was to lay heavy planks over it, and now he's in the process of digging a brand new hole. Our neighbors said they stopped their dog by filling the hole with water, and holding the dog's face in it. Well, we just couldn't do that to our Buddy. There's got to be a better way. Doesn't there? Help! — C.W.

DEAR C.W.: I'd consider blown-up balloons a better way for Buddy. Simply place a blown-up balloon in the hole, and when he starts digging, he'll probably pop it, then replace it with a second. It's unlikely Buddy would be back for a third. Consider, however, that in denying him the joys of his underground excursions, it behooves you to provide him with another outlet for his energy. Fetching a ball in the backyard might be adequate, or it might take jogging on a leash. Whatever, it's always wise when one activity is blocked because it's undesirable, to try to provide a satisfactory substitute. Otherwise, the resourceful pet's likely to find a new source of amusement which may be even worse, from your standpoint, than the last game.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Chinny, my nearly-adult male Siamese, is a wool eater. He's chewed up countless wool sweaters, a few socks and a blanket. My only consolation is it's summer. Still, if I can't cure him by winter, it's going to be a cold one for me. I've tried wool fat, gum massage, more attention, diet changes, and you name it — I've tried it. He still chews wool. I'm still trying. Any other suggestions? Please — V.P.

DEAR V.P.: Some wool chewers will switch allegiance from wool to sprouted grass. Additional exercise or distractions provided by another cat will do it for some. Frequent and somewhat intensive gum massage works occasionally. A cure more consistently effective is the addition of thyroid to the Siamese diet. Check with your own veterinarian to see if he'd approve the use of thyroid in Chinny's case.

Erma Bombeck

Doctor-sickee mediator

One of the chores that was never mentioned in my job description when I became a wife and mother was that of mediator between the Family Doctor and the Family Sickee.

You know how it goes. Your child comes in from play and says, "I don't feel well. My legs feel like they got little needles all over them, my head hurts real bad, I got a big pain right here on my side, and I can't see real well. Everything turns black and I'm dizzy and burning up and then I got this real chill and sometimes there's a ringing in my ears and . . ."

As you herd the child into bed, your blood turns to ice as you hurriedly call the doctor.

"Could you bring him to the office around 3:00?" he asks.

Every maternal hair on your neck stands up. "You are assuming that he will last until 3:00. I want you to come here!"

Sometimes my performance is so convincing a doctor will actually stop off on his way home. He enters the room of the Sickee.

At the sight of the doctor the kid starts to move about like a Japanese volleyball team. He springs into the air, falls on the mattress on his face, giggling and laughing, hiding behind the pillow, bring out his puppets, turning on the record player, dancing and singing into the doctor's stethoscope.

"Is this the child who is going to that big playroom in the sky?" he asks tiredly. Then turning to the child he asks, "Is there a pain here?"

The child falls down giggling.

"What about here?"

He shakes his head no until I think he will screw himself into the bed.

"A laxative should do it," says the doctor, closing the bag.

My husband is no better. After he relates all his symptoms to me, I relate them to the doctor and then report, "The doctor says he would like to meet you in the emergency ward of the hospital."

"That's ridiculous," he says. "I'm not in THAT much pain. What did you tell him?"

"I used your words, 'You're young. I want you to marry again.'"

"And for THAT he wanted me to come to the hospital?"

I have been put in the middle so many times that I am sometimes reluctant to call the doctor. The last time my son complained of a knee injury I put it aside for a day or so. When we finally got to the doctor he said, "Didn't the boy complain?"

"Actually, he did," I said, "but I thought I could pull it off as the final billing date ends the 30th."

I have seen the look he gave me on only one other occasion. It was when Gen. Yoshijiro Umeza tried to shake Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hand when Japan surrendered at the end of World War II.

Dr. Lamb

Aneurysm blowout danger

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have an inflated place in the aorta. One doctor's advice is to operate. Two others don't encourage it yet. What are the dangers?

I feel some discomfort on the inside of the left leg. I have been careful about pressing on the inflated aorta. It looks like by being careful I could manage if there wouldn't be another reason to operate. I would appreciate your comment.

DEAR READER — You are talking about an aneurysm of the large artery that goes down the middle of the body near the spine and supplies blood to most of the body. The dilitation is caused by a weakening of the elastic tissue that normally exists in this tube like structure. A good way to think of it is as if it were an inner tube.

That stretched, diseased aorta is about as safe as a stretched, weakened inner tube and the danger in both cases is that it will have a blow out. Unfortunately, rather than just having a flat tire if your aorta blows you are likely to hemmorrhage to death before you can get adequate medical help. This risk is so great and so unpredictable that most doctors today think that if there is no contra-indication that it is better to do the surgery. Incidentally, in skilled hands the surgery is fairly simple if the aneurysm is in the abdomen, as I presume from your letter yours is.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Haven't heard much about hair transplants for some time. How successful have they been? Can they be done when the man's hair is just thinning at the temples? Is the head bandaged after the transplant? Does the hair line look natural afterwards? Can one continue his daily work while this is being done?

DEAR READER — They are being done fairly regularly now. Most hair transplant procedures are the punch biopsy type. A small clump of hair follicles are removed from the side of the head where hair is abundant and transplanted or seeded in the bald areas where a new hair line is to be established.

Another procedure pioneered by Dr. Jose Juri in Buenos Aires is being done by a limited number of doctors in the United States. It is a three stage operation. A skin flap with hair is raised from the back side of the scalp. The flap is about one and a half inches wide and eight or nine inches long. The technique is similar to the skin graft techniques worked out in treating burn patients. The flap is raised, rotated and sewed into place along the new hair line in three stages. You must wait a week between each phase of the operation. It produces a thicker growth of hair than the punch biopsies. It is also more complicated.

You should expect to have bandages with either procedure. The exact management will vary with your surgeon. You could probably get the punch biopsy method done by any number of plastic surgeons in your area.

If you don't mind being seen with a bandaged head you could certainly go about your work with most of these procedures except the third stage of the flap transplant. That stage requires general anesthesia and it might be a number of days before you would want to be back at work.

Your skin has a lot to do with your appearance, for information about it send 50 cents for The Health Letter 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing with your request to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

"I feel it is a very strong, potent film. I don't want to say more than that now. I enjoyed doing it and it is a strong film. Let others see the film and make their own judgments now."

—Ballet star Rudolph Nureyev, on seeing the rushes of "Valentino," his first venture as a screen actor.

"If we were a growth stock, we would, perhaps, not be a spectacular investment, but we would surely be in the 'blue chip' category on the basis of the steadiness of our growth, and all this without any significant plant expansion!"

Thoughts

But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control; against such there is no law. — Galatians 5:22, 23.

Today we are afraid of simple words like goodness and mercy and kindness. We don't believe in the good old words because we don't believe in the good old values any more. And that is why the world is so sick. — Lin Utang, Chinese philosopher.

Astrographs

Your Birthday, June 24, 1977

A departure from the norm that would bring about changes in your basic lifestyle is likely this year. The things you aim for will provide you with more fun and greater enjoyment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unless you tactfully handle those under your wing today, you'll get results opposite from what you hoped for. They can be guided, but not bullied. To find out more about yourself send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today may not go as well as it could. The reason is you'll do things to impress another, rather than follow the dictates of your conscience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Stay away from the high rollers today. You could spend beyond your means to keep up with the crowd.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Challenges tend to intimidate you today. You may back off out of fear. If you get into the action, you'll find they are only paper tigers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) One who expounds his ideas boldly and dramatically may give you an inferiority complex today. Analyzing his words will debunk the illusion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It would be unwise today to enter a joint venture where you're in the minority position. Unless the roles are equal, don't play.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Underestimating your opposition today could lead to undesirable results. Recognize the true caliber of those you joust with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's vitally important to maintain a positive attitude toward your work today. If you inflate the size of the task, your initiative will suffer.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Business matters should be treated realistically today. Don't feel that others are looking out for anything else but their own survival.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Make it a point to support your mate in front of others today, even though you don't agree. It'll save you from an argument later.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Rather than try to impose your ideas on coworkers today, hear them out. They may have thoughts that complement yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your purse could suffer today because you think only of gratifying immediate whims. If you spend foolishly, you'll later have buyer's remorse.

South won the trump lead with the seven and counted winners. There were six sidesuit winners and if he could take seven trump tricks he would have his grand slam. It looked easy to him as long as he could ruff two diamonds in dummy.

So he cashed the ace and king of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, cashed dummy's ace and king of hearts, ruffed a heart, ruffed his last diamond, ruffed dummy's last heart, started to run his last three trumps and suddenly found that the hand had collapsed because West had started with four trumps.

A little extra thought at an early stage of the play would have saved the grand slam. The essence of any cross ruff-type hand is to cash your sidesuit winners before you start your cross ruff.

Correct technique would be for South to cash all the ace-kings as tricks two to seven. After that he could have cross ruffed losers in any order. At some stage of the proceedings West would have been forced to start using his trumps to ruff but South would simply overruff. West would never be able to score with one of them.

Ask the Jacobys

A Maryland reader wants to know the best way to play 9 8 7 6 opposite A K 10 4 to win four tricks.

The answer is to lead the nine and let it ride if not covered. If it is covered, win, go back to dummy, lead the eight and let it ride unless it's covered. This wins when both queen and jack are to the right of the ace-king.

Rabbi tells congregation: Your solemn duty to take to streets to protest Nazi march

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Rabbi Lawrence Montrose, a quiet man not noted as a political activist, has told all 640 families in his congregation that it is their "solemn duty" to take to the streets on July 4 to protest a march by American Nazis.

The rabbi said in a letter that he was seeking a peaceful gathering as a "show of strength" to demonstrate opposition to the march planned by a Nazi group in this Chicago suburb of 69,000 persons.

One Skokie resident, Erna Gans, whose parents and two brothers died in Hitler's concentration camps, said "it is the responsibility of the 7,000 survivors of the holocaust living in Skokie to prevent Nazis from marching here."

Harvey Schwartz, the village attorney, warns there is "a great probability" of violence if uniformed members of the National Socialist Party of America demonstrate as planned.

"We are soldiers, soldiers take risks," replied Nazi leader Frank Collin when told his march could spark violence. "The violence won't come from us. If there's violence it will show the Jews' true colors."

Collin, national coordinator of the National Socialist Congress, said "up to 100" party members from Illinois, California, Missouri, New Jersey, Nebraska, Ohio, Oklahoma and Texas will march in Skokie.

Rabbi Montrose, of the Skokie Central Traditional Congregation, said he realized that bringing together groups of Jews and Nazis held great potential for violence, but he said he felt a visible demonstration of opposition to Nazism was essential.

He said he decided to write to his congregation because "we know from the early 1930s that remaining silent isn't an effective weapon ... and because we must join the survivors of the holocaust in a visible demonstration that we will not allow a small group of fanatics to do in America what they did in Germany ..."

Skokie has adopted three ordinances designed to block the march, but the U.S. Supreme Court recently overturned an injunction which would have prevented it.

The American Civil Liberties Union, representing the Nazis, says the Constitution permits persons to demonstrate on behalf of their political beliefs, however odious they may be.

"I've never seen a clearer case of First Amendment protection than the Skokie case," said David Hamlin of the Chicago ACLU. He said the three ordinances should be reversed easily in court.

But Mrs. Gans said, "The courts will protect us. The courts have a duty to protect the people as well as the murderers. The First Amendment doesn't give anyone the right to tell me they want to kill me."

She said she has met with other holocaust survivors, rabbis and civic leaders, and "the overwhelming belief is that we must not be silent, we must oppose them publicly."

Several Jews said one explanation why so many holocaust survivors settled in Skokie was that they felt more comfortable living among other Jews in an area where synagogues and Jewish cultural institutions already existed at the end of World War II.

It was this large number of Jews that prompted the Nazis to bring their march to Skokie.

Vance will visit China in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will visit China August 22-26 in hopes of making progress toward normalized diplomatic relations between the two countries, the State Department said Wednesday.

In making the announcement, spokesman Hodding Carter refused to speculate on whether Vance expects his trip to result in establishment of diplomatic relations.

The only other stop Vance plans is a one-or two-day visit to Japan after his stay in China, Carter said.

The purpose of the China trip is to "continue our conversations in light of the Shanghai communique toward normalizing relations," he said.

Since the communique was signed in 1972, achievement of that goal has eluded the past three administrations.

Six weeks ago President Carter reaffirmed his committment to that objective but added, "the one obstacle — the major obstacle, obviously — is the relationship we've always had with Taiwan.

"We don't want the Taiwanese people punished or attacked and if we can resolve that major difficulty I would move expeditiously to normalizing relations with China," the President said.

This statement drew an angry reaction three days later from Chinese Vice Premier Chi Teng-kuei, who told a group of Japanese journalists that Carter's conditions are unacceptable.

"To liberate Taiwan in a peaceful way or by armed force — this is China's domestic affair and not a U.S. affair," he was quoted as saying.

School board-council feud over federal funds for civic center plan

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

Ontario City Council members and administrators voiced angry indignation Tuesday about a unanimous vote of the Ontario-Montclair school board to attempt to bump the city's Civic Center project funding.

City Manager Roger Hughbanks was noticeably peeved when he reported that the school board had decided to submit an application to the Economic Development Administration with a central kitchen facility as the number one project for the Ontario planning target area. The EDA of the U.S. Commerce Department administers the Public Works Act of 1976.

The act is designed to stimulate employment and longlasting public works projects for local municipalities. The second phase allocation targets were announced two weeks ago and Ontario is earmarked for $2,258,000.

The City of Ontario submitted two projects in the first round of competition, a $3.5 million Civic Center request and a backup project for a $2.1 million city yard. In the first phase, the EDA approved specific projects. This present stage calls for cities and school district officials to determine priorities and submit these project priorities to EDA for further scrutiny and approval.

Mayor Paul Treadway blasted school board members and the city manager embellished upon his remarks.

"Do you believe the school district thinks a central kitchen is more important than a new City Hall?" asked Treadway, a teacher at Ontario's Imperial Junior High School. He said the district already has equipment that is "operative and functioning."

Hughbanks called the board decision "uncomprehensible and indefensible." Pointing out that the schools had not competed originally and failed to submit any project proposals, he described their present actions as "selfish" and "unfair" because it threatens final approval of the Ontario Civic Center complex. City staff now occupies cramped, inadequate buildings and portables at 225 S. Euclid Ave.

"It is vital to city government to have an efficient building to work in," Hughbanks said. "The center would rejuevenate downtown Ontario. We viewed this grant as the culmination of years and years of work.

"The O-M board this afternoon agreed to make its prothe board, Assistant City Manager John Porter quipped "we don't have time to horse around writing letters back and forth." He suggested a joint meeting between the council and board "so we can sit down and explain the facts of life. We can't afford the luxury of correspondence back and forth."

The city has 28 days or until July 11 to re-submit the project proposal for the Ontario planning area.

The council instructed staff to contact O-M officials and attempt to arrange a joint meeting for 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Supt. Jack Jones explained the school board vote this morning, saying that the district was experiencing serious problems in providing lunches to students presently enrolled. The problem would be aggravated in the fall, he continued, if a law is implemented requiring school districts to also provide a hot meal to kindergarteners.

This latter could increase the volume of participants in the hot meal program by 17 per cent, he said.

"Although they realize a City Hall is needed in Ontario, they also feel a central kitchen is needed and this is a means of getting it," Jones said.

Fraud suit filed

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The district attorney's fraud unit says it is charging the two partners in Blue Pacific Equities with bilking nearly one-half million dollars from 20 persons, most of them elderly.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Robert J. O'Neill said Robert S. Domaille, 31, and Earl Bazzel, 54, are named in a complaint alleging grand theft, issuing securities without a permit and conspiracy to defraud.

O'Neill said the firm headed by the two men, who are scheduled for arraignment Friday, is in bankruptcy.

ONeill said an investigation showed investments from $2,000 to $116,000 were obtained from the 20 persons for use in real estate projects, most of which were not carried out.

The complaint alleges $473,00 was obtained in such fashion between 1972 and early 1975.

Expo 81 hires an investment company

Bear, Stearns and Co., one of the top 10 investment banking firms in the nation, has been hired by Expo 81 Corp. as the managing underwriters for the revenue bond to provide umbrella financing for the proposed international exposition.

Jerry Clemans, public relations director and press coordinator for Expo 81 Corp., said today that this is merely an "official announcement, but nothing particularly new." He noted that the New York City firm had been hired nearly a month ago to put together the details of the multi-million revenue bond.

The bond is a municipal type tax exempt issue, Clemans explained. He estimated that it will be offered sometime before the end of the year and will be in the range of $130 million.

"We can't give a specific figure yet because we're waiting for final analysis from the accounting firm," Clemans said.

He said Expo 81 Corp. has also retained the national accounting firm of Touche Ross and Co. as financial consultants and accountants to assist in structuring the proposed offering. Bear, Stearns and Co. will be responsible for actually selling the revenue bonds.

Mondale taxes OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service, in a "Dear Taxpayer" letter to Walter F. Mondale, says the vice president and his wife have their tax return in order.

"You will be pleased to know that our examination of your tax returns for the above period shows no change is required in the tax reported. Your returns are accepted as filed.

"Thank you for your cooperation," the IRS said in the form letter, made public Tuesday along with Mondale's return.

The return shows that Mondale and his wife, whose joint return was audited by the IRS, paid $17,726 in federal income taxes last year on a combined taxable income of $48,745.

Mondale filed his tax return with the IRS by the April 15 deadline. In contrast, President Carter and his wife have been given two extensions of the deadline, and a White House spokesman said Tuesday he did not know whether they had filed their return.

The White House has said the Carters' return eventually will be made public.

When it was revealed earlier this month that Carter's 1975 tax return was being audited, Mondale revealed that the IRS was going over his return as well.

The event is free. Armstrong is a former desert research scientist of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and has been a member of the faculty of Cal Poly Pomona for the past 17 years. Currently he is director of the audio-visual department.

Doubt begins to plague 2 lottery bugs

McMURRAY, Pa. (AP) — Tom and Philomena Drake, who vowed to win Pennsylvania's Instant Bingo Lottery even if it took all of their $20,000 savings, may throw in the towel by the end of the week.

"I'm sure if Rocky was here he'd understand. Even he probably would have reconsidered boxing if his opponents were allowed to fight without gloves," said Drake, referring to the movie character played by actor Sylvester Stallone.

The Drakes set out a month ago to find the one ticket in 35 million that will win them $1,000 a week for life.

"After visiting with the lottery commission in Harrisburg, some serious questions about the possibilities of winning were put in my mind," the 30-year-old realtor said Tuesday as he scratched the numbers off what may be his last $500 book of lottery tickets.

"When my wife and I have had the chance to discuss the matter further with lottery officials this week, we'll make the decision whether to go on," Drake said from the local pharmacy that has been headquarters for their venture.

Drake refused to elaborate on what lottery officials told him, but noted he "got an education" when he toured the state's lottery facilities after a misunderstanding over the rules.

So far, the Drakes say they've spent $3,500 on seven books of tickets. By Tuesday, their winnings totaled $700.

Lottery officials say the 20,000 tickets the Drakes intend to buy increase their odds to only 6 in 10,000 from 35 million to one.

Political arena

SEN. JOHN V. BRIGGS, R-Fullerton, said there are two key issues around which the current death penalty controversy in California revolves.

These are: Is the current law under consideration adequate to protect the people? And, is the legislature going to allow this matter — particularly Gov. Brown's opposition to a death penalty — to be buried this year, long before the voters will decide whether Brown is to continue as governor?

"I am thoroughly convinced that the current bill is far too weak; fails to provide any real protection for the common citizen against murderers; and allows enormous discretion for Brown-appointed trial judges to overturn a death sentence even after a jury has specifically determined that there are no mitigating circumstances and have voted for death for a given criminal," said Briggs.

The bill which Gov. Brown has vetoed is, in Briggs' view, restrictive and would allow the death sentence only in the "most narrowly-defined" circumstances.

"If a person kills a policeman he could receive a death sentence," Briggs continued. "If he were to murder you or me the death sentence could not apply, unless the murder occurred in connection with the commission of some other crime.

DOLLY PARTON WANTS A NEW IMAGE

For years Dolly Parton has had a huge following as the reigning queen of country music. Today, however, Dolly wants to broaden her audience even further by moving into the mainstream of rock and pop music, and she's determined not to let anything stand in her way. In our profile of her, we take a close look at exactly what she's done in an effort to create a new image. We also give the reader a revealing glimpse at the private side of Dolly: How is her love for garish clothes and jewelry related to her poor upbringing? How does she use her music as a retreat when things get rough? What role did her local church play in getting her started in music? What does she mean when she says she wants to be the "new Mother Goose?" What are her plans for children of her own? In short, Dolly Parton is a woman of many dimensions who is every bit as compelling off-stage as she is when she's performing. Moreover, our glimpse into her personal life will provide you with a clearer understanding of the motivation behind her desire to change the direction of her career.

Tension mounting in 11-month-old Kentucky strike

STEARNS, Ky. (AP) — Law officers fear this eastern Kentucky coal town may become the next "Harlan County, U.S.A." as tension mounts in the 11-month-old strike at the Stearns mine.

"I hope it ends because I'm afraid blood might be spilled if it don't," said Sheriff Joe Perry. "It's rough, I'll tell you. There ain't no doubt about it."

The coal company has bunkers, reinforced with sandbags, to protect its buildings. In turn, the nearby union hall has been fortified. There have been reports that helicopters, used to take company officials and guards to work, have been fired upon.

"It looks like a battlefield," said Perry. "And that's what it is."

Last week, Perry and more than 140 miners who have been on strike since July viewed the Oscar-winning movie, "Harlan County, U.S.A.," that documented a 13-month strike by miners at the Eastover Mining Co.'s Brook-side mine, also in eastern Kentucky.

That strike began in 1973 and ended when Eastover agreed to recognize the United Mine Workers as collective bargaining agent for the Brookside miners.

New York filmmaker Barbara Kopple, 30, filmed the Brookside dispute, and her cameras recorded the tension between strikers and "gun thugs" who helped men cross picket lines.

Perry said the miners appreciated the film "because it showed what can happen in a situation like we've got right here."

"I hope that it doesn't come to another Brookside," Perry said Tuesday. "I hope the people are smart enough to get together on the bargaining table rather than to settle with guns. Brookside was just mild compared to what can happen."

At Brookside, one picketer was killed before the UMW was recognized.

"I hope that won't have to happen here," Perry said. "But if this doesn't end soon, I'm afraid it will."

The dispute here centers on the miners' insistence that an employe-dominated safety committee be created that could call miners out of the pits when conditions are deemed dangerous. As long as that deadlock remains, says UMW organizer Lee Potter, there will be no settlement.

At Brookside, shots were exchanged on many occasions, and violence on or near the picket lines was common. At the Stearns' Justus mine, thousands of gunshots have been fired since the strike began, Perry said.

"I'd say about a hundred rounds are fired every night," Perry said. "Both sides are firing. I've had deputies down there when bullets were hailing around, and this is not a story. It's true."

He said someone shot out a headlight of one of his deputy's cars recently and that it "came from the direction of the security guards."

Stearns hired security guards earlier this year, and Potter says there was no trouble before that. Frank Thomas, an official of Blue Diamond Coal Co., which owns Stearns, said that's not so. He said the guards are needed to protect company personnel and property.

"I can't even work my garden in the middle of the day," said Chester Morgan, whose house is located near the picket line. "Some nights it's peaceful, but there's a lot of gunfire. It sounds like machine guns. Sometimes me, my wife and daughter have to go to the basement when it gets too hot."

Potter, who also helped organize the Brookside miners, said men "on both sides fire at each other.

"The men on the picket line are protecting their rights," he said. "I sure as hell wouldn't stand there.

"This is like Brookside, but the spirit is unreal," Potter said. "The unity here is stronger than anything I've ever seen. They get stronger every day instead of weaker."

About 130 miners, their wives and children plan to go to Knoxville, Tenn., Friday, in two buses to demonstrate in front of Blue Diamond's headquarters, Potter said.

Potter has been charged with first-degree assault, kidnaping and first-degree robbery in connection with the shooting of a mine security guard. He says the charges were "trumped up." Twenty-seven other men, mostly striking miners, are to be tried Oct. 25 on charges stemming from the shooting of two security guards. None of the guards was seriously hurt.

Both sides have reported that shooting has intensified. Robert Storm, head of the company's hired security agency, Storm Security System of London, Ky., charged that strikers fired more than 800 shots one night, and union leaders say more than 1,000 rounds were fired in a single night recently by guards.

Circuit Judge J.B. Johnson Jr. has limited the number of picketers and warned them not to carry guns. Sheriff Perry said he tried to arrest 10 guards for having guns but was told by "higher authority" not to do so.

Witnesses began testifying before the McCreary County Grand Jury this week in connection with the dispute.

AUCTIONEER CORNWALL EXAMINES TREASURES.

SLAIN HEIRESS — Marjorie Jackson is shown in a 1960s photo wearing expensive silver mink stole which went on auction block Wednesday in Indianapolis.

From furs to false teeth

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — About 2,500 bargain-hunters and treasure-seekers braved a chilly rain today as the belongings of slain grocery heiress Marjorie Jackson — including luxury cars, furs and gold-inlaid false teeth — went on the auction block.

The curious crowd, many gambling on bidding for an unopened box or a garbage bag that might contain some of the fabled Jackson fortune, began gathering at dawn. They spilled out of the tents and stood in the rain, protected by umbrellas and plastic trash bags with holes cut for their eyes and arms.

Auctioneer Earl Cornwell stood in a steady rain to sell the estate of Mrs. Jackson, who was found shot to death in her cash-littered home last month.

Minor household items were to be auctioned first. The first item sold, a marble-top chest of drawers, went to Beech Grove antique dealer Charles Stewart for $30.

When police found Mrs. Jackson's body, they also discovered more than $5 million in cash stuffed in drawers, vacuum cleaner bags, boxes and garbage cans. Last week, authorities speculated that some of the cash might still be among Mrs. Jackson's things.

Cornwell said all of the boxes and bags had been sorted by auction time, but "you never know. We might miss something. If someone bids $5 for a garbage bag full of money, it's theirs."

Everything — including the cheap burglar alarm and cap pistols she used to guard her privacy and her possessions — was up for grabs.

"I'm going to sell Marjorie Jackson's false teeth," Cornwell whispered. "There's a lot of gold in them."

Full-length minks, two late model Cadillacs, jewelry, oriental rugs, silver, china and crystal were among the more valuable items. There were about 40 Bibles — two of them with mother-of-pearl covers.

A lot of Mrs. Jackson's belongings were damaged by the fire police said her killers set to disguise their crime. Cornwell's wife and two helpers worked for almost two days washing the smoke smudges from glasses, plates and bric-a-brac.

Five rather ordinary drawers were stacked near the entrance to Earl's Auction Barn. Cornwell said some of the fortune was kept in them. And they too, were up for sale.

Six persons are in custody in connection with the Jackson murder and the theft of her money.

EYES ON BALL

Both David Beck, 10, and Linda Vancil, 13, show the power of concentration as they stroke away at tennis balls during junior competition in the Pomona Valley Campionships at the Claremont Tennis Club. Play in eight junior events will continue through finals matches Friday. The tournament's open titles will be decided this weekend.

Puzzling Halos still sputtering

CHICAGO (AP) — Norm Sherry doesn't know what it'll take to get his California Angels moving, but he's certain that performances like Chicago reliever Bart Johnson turned in Wednesday night won't help.

"Every time we start to put something together, we stop," Sherry said after watching Johnson scatter five hits in 6 2-3 innings of relief as the White Sox defeated the Angels 6-2. "Johnson was tough, but we were hitting the ball. We just couldn't score."

"You look out there. It's talent there, but we just can't get it going," Sherry said of his club. "We score runs in streaks, but the streaks are too far apart."

California banged out 10 hits, the same number as the Sox, but was only able to score on Terry Humphrey's second home run of the year, a solo shot in the third, and in the eighth when Bobby Bonds doubled and came home on Mario Guerrero's RBI-single.

The Angels dropped a 3-2 decision to the White Sox Tuesday night as Angels right-hander Nolan Ryan allowed only three hits — none after the second inning. But an inability to score runs, despite collecting six hits, spelled doom for the Angels who came into the Chicago series trailing the American League West leaders by three games.

"Nobody has the answer to the problem," said Sherry. "We score runs in streaks, but the streaks are too far apart."

How long can the Angels wait before making a run for the divisional lead?

"We can't get too far behind. We're behind these guys (White Sox) by five games now. We've got to stay within striking distance and get it going," Sherry said.

Jorge Orta drilled a two-run homer in the second to give the Sox a 2-0 lead against loser Ken Brett, 6-5, who was making his first start against his former teammates since being traded to the Angels last week.

"I'm disappointed. You always want to do well against your old team. Orta hit a terrible pitch and that was the story all night," said Brett.

Leading 2-1, Chicago starter Ken Kravec ran into trouble in the third when he yielded Humphrey's home run, a single to Gil Flores and a two-out walk to Don Baylor. That's when Johnson came on to put out the fire by getting Bonds to bounce into a force play.

"Bart's doing a fine job. Kravec just didn't have it tonight — didn't have his tools. He was struggling with his curve ball and I wanted to get him out of there before it was too late," said Chicago Manager Bob Lemon.

"Johnson was a lifesaver. It's encouraging to see a guy come out of the bullpen that way," Lemon added.

Chicago added a run in the fourth on Wayne Nordhagen's run-scoring single and scored three times in the sixth as one run came home on a wild pitch, another on a double by Nordhagen and the third on Brian Downing's RBI-single.

California sends Wayne Simpson, 3-4, to the mound today against Francisco Barrios, 6-3, as the teams conclude the three-game series.

Dodgers ready for Cincy

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — All the pressure is on the Cincinnati Reds this weekend when the Dodgers and Reds clash in a key four-game series along the banks of the Ohio River.

The Dodgers completed a successful homestand (7-2) Wednesday night by burying the St. Louis Cardinals, 12-1, to widen their lead in the National League West to 8 1/2 games over the Reds, who lost earlier in the evening at Philadelphia.

There's no question Cincinnati must gain some momentum this weekend if it ever hopes to catch the runaway Dodgers, who got well at home after seeing their pennant express slowed down on a 2-5 road trip to Chicago and St. Louis.

"We're ready for the Reds," exclaimed Dodger skipper Tom Lasorda after Wednesday's laugher. "It's a tremendous feeling to head into a series like that following a game like we had tonight."

The Dodgers could really open up daylight in the race with a good road trip which also includes eight games (four apiece) at Atlanta and San Francisco.

A big reason why the Dodgers get on their airplane today with optimism is the way the big bats have come alive.

Steve Garvey belted his first grand slam homer in his career and added three singles to raise his season RBI total to 60 while Ron Cey contributed a triple, single and sacrifice fly for 59 RBIs.

"We're certainly prepared for the Cincinnati series," Garvey, who has hit eight homers in the last 15 games, said. "After our last trip, I said all we needed was some home cooking."

Cey added, "All we can do is approach Cincinnati one game at a time. We're playing well now. Everyone in the lineup is contributing and I certainly hope it continues this weekend. I feel that an 8 1/2 game lead is a pretty good margin at this stage of the season."

Friday's opening game of the series in Cincinnati shapes up as a crucial one for the Reds since they have been saving pitching ace Tom Seaver for the Los Angeles invasion.

All four games from Cincinnati will be televised by KTTV (Channel 11). Friday's contest begins at 5 p.m. followed by an 11 a.m. start Saturday plus an 10 a.m. telecast of Sunday's doubleheader.

In addition, the Dodgers' Monday night game at Atlanta will be carried on ABC and the first three games at San Francisco on the Fourth of July weekend will be carried by KTTV.

The Dodgers had a picnic against St. Louis Wednesday in scoring six runs in the fourth inning followed by four more in the fifth.

It made an easy evening for Dodger starter Burt Hooton, who picked up his first victory of the month. He pitched a strong eight innings with Mike Garman finishing up the ninth.

St. Louis' only run came across in the fourth inning and it was unearned because of an error by shortstop Bill Russell. Catcher Ted Simmons' single scored Jerry Mumphrey but Hooton struck out Lou Brock and got Ken Reitz on a pop-up to protect the 2-1 lead which was greatly extended in the bottom half of the inning.

The Dodgers batted around for the 14th time this season in the fourth when Garvey unloaded on his grand slam then batted around again in the fifth when Cey belted his triple.

The only controversy in the game came in the second inning when Simmons was out at the plate trying to score when Brock stole the 876th base of his career.

St. Louis manager Vern Rapp formally protested the game, claiming catcher Steve Yeager illegally blocked out Simmons on the latter's charge to the plate.

DODGER DATA — Wednesday's paid turnout of 39,247 gave the Dodgers an amazing total of 361,753 (average of 40,195) during the nine-game homestand and raises the season total to 1,276,368 (38,678 average).

Pitching match-ups in Cincy are: Friday - Tommy John (7-4) vs. Seaver (8-3); Saturday - Don Sutton (8-2) vs. Woodie Fryman (2-5); and Sunday - Rick Rhoden (10-3) and Doug Rau (6-1) vs. Fred Norman (7-3) and Jack Billingham (8-3).

Lee Lacy has been placed on the 15-day disabled list effective retroactive to Monday.

Lea Antonoplis wins 2nd match

Lea Antonopolis of Glendora won her second match Wednesday at Wimbledon.

Miss Antonopolis, 18, defeated C.F. Matison of Australia in straight sets, 7-5, 6-1

Austin plays like seasoned veteran

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The youngest competitor in the 100-year-history of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships performed like a seasoned veteran in her dream-come-true debut Wednesday.

Tracy Austin, a 14-year-old schoolgirl from Rolling Hills, Calif., breezed to a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Elly Vessies-Appel of The Netherlands in a women's singles match.

Her teeth in braces and her sun-streaked hair tied back by two pink bands, Tracy won the first point, the first game, the first set and the first match of her Wimbledon career, then told newsmen she had played it "just like any other match."

Ignoring the pressure of the occasion, she volleyed from the baseline like a Chris Evert and covered the court like a Billie Jean King.

Tracy is the American 14-year-old and under champion and has not been beaten by a girl in her own age group since she was seven.

She comes from a tennis family. Her father, George, a nuclear physicist, her mother and three brothers all are accomplished players.

Crowds flocked to the outside court as the eighth-grade youngster played her first match outside the United States, where her 128 tournament triumphs have boosted her into 23rd position in the women's rankings despite her youth.

Tracy's memorable start to her Wimbledon career may go no further, however. She is scheduled to meet Miss Evert, the defending champion, in the third round.

Can Tracy beat Miss Evert, ranked No. 1 in the world?

"Well," she said, pausing, "I don't think this year."

Her parents watched from the sidelines as Tracy rolled up her first win on Wimbledon's grass. Mrs. Austin, her eyes streaming with tears, said later, "Can you believe both Tracy and I are allergic to grass?"

Tracy appeared on court in a white outfit that looked like a French maid's apron—a big bow in the back and a large pocket at the front. She wore two tiny bracelets on her left arm and a gold necklace.

Warhurst gets San Dimas job

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

The new San Dimas High football coach carries a name most familar to valley grid fans.

The Bonita School District announced Wednesday night the appointment of Don G. Warhurst as the new skipper of the Saints' football fortunes.

Warhurst is the eldest son of Cal Poly athletic director Donald E. Warhurst.

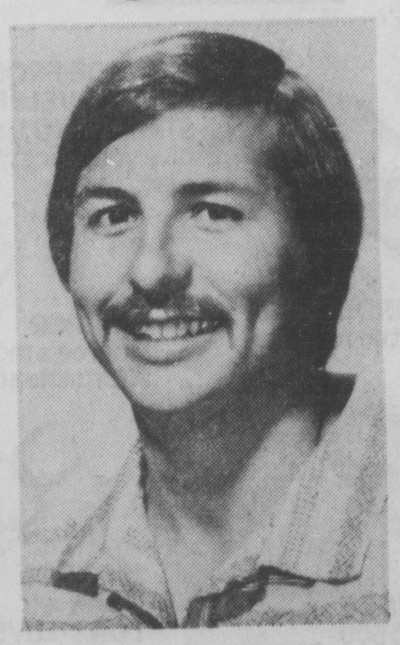
The younger Warhurst was a standout athlete at Cal Poly in the mid-1960's, and was the school's Athlete of the Year. He graduated from Poly in 1969, assisted at Nogales High for one season, and then joined Bob Baiz' staff at San Dimas in 1971 when the school first opened. He's been at the school as an assistant coach ever since.

"I'm just tickled pink to get the head coaching job at San Dimas," Warhurst said. "Being a head coach is something I've wanted a long time. I'm really pleased that it worked out so that I could stay at San Dimas and get the varsity position as well."

Warhurst was one of over 40 applicants for the Saints' chief mentor job, a post left vacant earlier this year when Baiz decided to devote all his attention to his athletic director duties at the school.

"I plan to run the team much like Bob did, although we will probably throw the football a bit more next fall," Warhurst indicated. "We only have two starters back, and only six guys altogether, from last year's championship team, so I've got my work cut out for me, that's for sure.

"At least having been at the school all this time, I know the kids and know what needs to be done to field a winning team. It will take a lot of work but I've got a great group of assistants. That's going to make things a lot easier."



DON WARHURST

Warhurst will be one of two rookie coaches in the Hacienda League when the football season opens. Ontario High recently hired Terry Roche as its varsity mentor.

It was also announced at the Bonita District meeting Wednesday that Gary Prestesater will be taking over as varsity baseball coach from Doyle Lyman.

Prestesater had been the junior varsity baseball coach at the school. He is a 1965 graduate of Azusa Pacific College where he was a standout in football, basketball and baseball. He played a couple years in the Chicago White Sox farm system prior to beginning his teaching career.

Here comes Seattle Slew

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Seattle Slew will return to the race track in the $300,000 Swaps Stakes on July 3 and the unbeaten Triple Crown winner doesn't figure to have much problem adding about $200,000 to his bankroll.

Hollywood Park officials said over the weekend that the Swaps Stakes purse would be increased from $200,000 to $300,000 if Seattle Slew entered. Co-owner Mickey Taylor made the expected announcement in New York Wednesday.

The Swaps Stakes, a 1¼-mile event on dirt for 3-year-olds, is expected to draw from seven to 12 entries, according to a Hollywood Park spokesman who said the winner will receive around $200,000.

Among the horses expected to run, the spokesman said, are J.O. Tobin, Text, Nordic Prince and Bad 'N' Big.

J.O. Tobin, the English 2-year-old champion last year, finished fifth to Seattle Slew in the Preakness on May 17. Text won the Argonaut Handicap at Hollywood Park earlier this month. Nordic Prince captured the Will Rogers Handicap here in May while Bad 'N' Big won the Caballero Handicap here last month.

Slew is unbeaten in nine starts, ending with the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

Stanky quits job after one day

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Eddie Stanky quit the Texas Rangers today after serving only one game as manager.

Stanky had replaced Frank Lucchesi as field boss of the Rangers Wednesday night and guided the team to a 10-8 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"Eddie Stanky has quit almost before he got started," Rangers General Manager and vice president Eddie Robinson told newsmen at the downtown Minneapolis hotel, where the American League team is staying.

Robinson said third base coach Connie Ryan would serve as temporary manager. The Rangers wind up a four-game series against the Twins at Metropolitan Stadium today.

Stanky, 59, apparently caught an early-morning flight for his home in Mobile, Ala.

Robinson said he was in the shower when Stanky called him from the airport at 8:15 a.m., CDT, to tell him he was leaving the team.

"You've got to be kidding," Robinson said he told Stanky.

Robinson said that Stanky responded that he had thought it over all night, decided that he couldn't leave his family and aged father.

"He had deep pangs of remorse," Robinson said.

Robinson said Stanky told him, "You've got a good ball club, you've given me a wonderful contract and I know what I'm turning down."

The general manager said he urged Stanky to stay at the airport until he could get there and discuss the matter. But Robinson said Stanky replied, "'No, I've made my decision. There will be no second thoughts.'"

Robinson said the Ranger players had not been told of Stanky's decision to leave the team. Two players in the hotel lobby said they knew nothing of the matter.

In the locker room after Wednesday night's game, the peppery pilot said, "I didn't do anything. I was just a spectator in the dugout. My coaches made out the batting order. They ran the game. Coach Connie Ryan had some tough decisions."

Stanky managed the St. Louis Cardinals for four years in the 1950s and the Chicago White Sox for three years in the late 1960s. He has been head baseball coach at South Alabama University for the past nine years and was reportedly returning to that post.

Robinson said Stanky was "tickled to death" when he was offered the job of Rangers manager earlier this week.

Bert Hawkins, the Rangers' traveling secretary, said he had been with Stanky after Wednesday night's game and that Stanky was "smiling and very happy" when he went to his hotel room.

At Mobile, Ala., Athletic Director Mel Lucas of the University of South Alabama said Stanky's wife, Dickie, told him of the sudden change of plans and "she was shocked as well as all of us." The Stankys have six children, including three still at home.

Stanky had startled many of his friends when he decided to leave South Alabama.

The athletic director said Stanky was "homesick" and found out fast he didn't want to go the major league route again.

Lucas was exuberant about Stanky's return to South Alabama and said "he's my man." But before he takes Stanky back, he said with a laugh, "I may have to interview him on a couple of things."

Stanky has been highly successful at South Alabama, compiling a 308-102 record and taking four teams to the NCAA playoffs.

He explained his return to the major leagues Wednesday by saying, "Once you get a taste of it, you've always got a hankering to get back.

But he said he had no illusions about the life of major league managers. "I feel like the man swimming in the ocean with a cut on his arm," he said. "Sooner or later, the shark is going to get you."

Gurney, Adams win All-CIF 3A honors

Montclair High topped off a banner baseball campaign by having two of its players win All-CIF 3A honors, it was revealed today.

The Cavaliers, who claimed their second straight San Antonio League title this spring, placed both catcher Kent Gurney and shortstop Rick Adams on the 3A first team.

Gurney, a junior, hammered opposing pitchers for an even .500 batting average this year, and was a defensive standout behind the dish. He was tabbed as the SAL's Most Valuable Player, an honor he also won as a sophomore.

Adams, a recent first-round pick by Houston in the major league draft, batted .384 for the Cavs.

The only other SAL player to make the 3A units was Pomona High third baseman Joey Chapa. Chapa recorded a .387 average for the Devils while being one of the steadiest defensive players in the valley.

Selected as 3A Player of the Year was Edgewood High pitcher/outfielder Mike Pill. Pill, a 6-2, 190-pound senior, compiled a perfect 14-0 mound mark for the Trojans and also batted .430 with nine home runs and 38 RBIs.

Former caddy charts courses

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The Butler National Golf Club course, where the Western Open began today, extends 7,032 yards and every yard has been measured off by George Lucas.

Lucas is a former tour caddy, who is making a good living charting yardage at PGA tournament sites with steel wire. He walks the course, diagramming each hole, measuring yardage to the front and back edges of the greens from various spots along the fairways—such as a water sprinkler head, the end of a trap, a willow tree, a bush.

He prints his findings in pamphlet form and sells them for $5 to players when they arrive for a tournament.

Lucas' business was reported brisk at the Western Open, where most caddies were unfamiliar with the course.

Since the Western Golf Association bars tour (professional) caddies, the players are provided bag toters sent in from various clubs in the Chicago area.

This is as it should be, because receipts from the Western Open go to the Evans Scholars Foundation to put needy caddies through college. Most of the caddies are working toward such scholarships, including three teen-age girls who are packing for George Burns, Miller Barber and Don Iverson.

"Normally I have a tour caddy who goes over the course and gets the measurements, but I buy Lucas' books anyway," said U.S. Open champion Hubert Green.

JUNIOR IN ACTION — Claremont's Justy Hamilton, 13, hopes her forehand shot is on target as she competes in the girls 14 singles competition of the Pomona Valley Tennis Championships. Junior action concludes Friday.

Bolanos, Pineda featured

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Junior welterweights Tury Pineda and Ramiro Bolanos fight tonight in the featured 10-round main event at the Olympic Auditorium.

Pineda, of Mexicali, Mex., brings a 26-7-1 record with 22 knockouts into the bout while Bolanos, of Ecuador, is 54-11 with 34 knockouts.

Olympic matchmaker Don Chargin hopes to match the winner against No. 2-ranked junior welterweight Monroe Brooks in late July.

In a companion 10-rounder tonight, bantamweight Oscar Muniz fights Jose Antonio Rosa. Muniz, of Los Angeles, has a 7-1-1 record while Rosa, from Puerto Rico, is 19-4-2.

Post 78 nips La Verne

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

Claremont fans are used to cliff-hangers as the Post 78 squad won another (its fourth) tough game in its final at bat Wednesday night at La Verne College.

The Post 78 outfit improved its District 18 American Legion league record to 3-2 with its 10 inning 9-7 triumph over La Verne Post 330.

Claremont sent nine men to the plate in the 10th frame and scored three times with two out to take the three hour and 55 minute contest.

With two out, Dan Healey blooped a fly to leftfield which Dave Drury thought he caught for the final out of the inning. Jim Todd scored from third when the umpire ruled that Drury trapped the ball. Dick Bell added two insurance runs with a double to leftcenter.

Claremont had rallied from a 5-0 deficit as La Verne racked up five runs and 11 hits in the first three innings of action.

"We just keep coming back," said Claremont's Jack Helber. "Tonight was a good example of how we never give up when we're behind in 4 game. I was pleased with the way we bounced back to win after falling behind 5-0 to a good solid ballclub."

Leonard Peacock picked up his first victory in making his second appearance on the hill since injuring his arm on March 22.

Ron Lawson pitched a one hitter for Elks to beat Ries Refrigeration 4-1. Wendell Cador drove in two runs in fourth and scored in sixth along with Paul Munch for Elks.

Ries Refrigeration scored two in first but Gray's Painting came back with five in the fourth and went on to win 5-4.

Mark Sherfy tripled in first inning and scored, behind a no-hitter by Jeff Rich who also went 1-for-2 to hand Elks it's first loss of season 3-2.

Randy Turner tripled and Henry Gonzales doubled behind a three-hitter by Keith Andrews in scoring a 7-5 win for Drape-Rite over Gray's Painting. Ken Chapple and Jeff Wisham doubled in a losing cause for Gray's Painting.

Louis Johnson and Dietrich Chapple double behind Perry Castro's first pitching effort of the season, a seven inning three hit effort.

Highlights

Bumstead's came from behind with 11 runs in the fifth inning to best Optimist's 16-2. Dennis Wren (3 for 4, including his first homer), David Gessaman (3 for 4), and Ricky Gessaman (2 for 2) led Bumstead's hitting, while George Van Es, Chris Van Es and Mark Allen each had a pair of hits for the losers.

Lloyd's used the extra base hit to advantage as half of their 10 hits went for extra bases in their 9-2 win over Pneudraulics. Andre Swan hit his first homer for Lloyd's and Roger Price hit his first for Pneudraulics. Pizza Palace, led by Reyes Castaneda (4 for 5), blasted Montclair Bronze, 18 to 7. Marc Yoakum was 3 for 3 for Bronze.

League leading, Bruce Allyn Plumbing received a stellar performance from pitcher Jeff Dahlstrom as they topped second place, Mr. Dryclean, 6-0. Dahlstrom struckout the first 16 batters faced, walked the second batter in the sixth inning, then struckout the next 2 batters for a six inning total of 18, with only the walk marring a perfect game. Toby Walker (3 for 4) and Dahlstrom (3 for 3, including 2 homers and 6 RBI's) led the Bruce Allyn hitting attack.

Bud Harrington's first inning grand slam homer paved the way as Pneudraulics beat Optimist's, 9-5.

In a very quick (1 hr. 10 min.) game, Bumstead's slipped past Lloyd's, 4-2. The big blow came from Cliff Delasantos who cracked his first homer in the second inning. Doug Kirby struckout 12 in a losing cause. Mr. Dryclean, off to a slow start, came up with 6 runs in the third inning to overcome a Pizza Palace lad on their way to a 9 to 4 victory.

Mike Valdez and Ricky Rhinehart pitched Bruce Allyn Plumbing to their third consecutive shutout as they allowed only 1 hit in stopping Montclair Bronze, 9-0. They struck out 16 on the way to the win.

Cortez Auto won its 12th in a row by blanking Trophy King, 7-0. It is the only team in the entire Ted Greene program to own an undefeated record.

The team, managed by Ed Cortez, has scored 126 runs with 65 singles, 15 doubles, four triples and one home run. Cortez Auto pitchers have allowed only 16 runs in giving up only 28 singles, six doubles and 30 walks.

Greg Miley hit the home run for Cortez Auto.

Quotes

"Those other years, when I'd get off to such a great start, I'd win two or three tournaments and I'd kind of lose interest. I wouldn't want to play...Now it's different. I've got something to work toward. I've got some work cut out for me." — Golfer Johnny Miller, experiencing an early-season slump.

Kicking around

with Adrian Mercado and Willy Keo

AT A RECENT COACHING WORKSHOP we referred to a visual aid that had been prepared in January.

It listed the number of AYSO coaches and assistant coaches as 13,000; we quickly had to make an on-the-spot update. In a few short months that number had risen to 16,000 with the numbers continuing to grow.

A just concluded survey corroborates what we already knew . . . almost all the new coaches have never played soccer. Because the need for coaches is ever greater, KICKIN' AROUND suggests that you begin looking around for possible coaching candidates this fall.

Before explaining the basic elements of tactics to the prospective coach, a review of youth coaching philosophy is recommended to hammer home the point that the program is primarily for the enjoyment of the youngsters, and that positive coaching is not only suggested, but is mandatory according to the AYSO Rules and Regulations.

Another basic rule should also be explained at this time . . . the "Everyone Plays" rule that guarantees every player that he will play at least one half of every game.

If the prospective coach doesn't balk at these regulations, and feels that he or she can abide by them you may then begin to explain the rules of soccer.

The quickest way to turn off your proteges or protegees is to overpower them with your knowledge of the 17 Laws of the Game. Reassure them that soccer is an uncomplicated sport that is played on a rectangular field.

Each team is allowed only 11 players on the field at any one time. The object of the game is to pass the ball through the opponent's goal. How the players are deployed on the field is up to the coach, but years of experimentation have shown that it is most helpful to have a goalkeeper (the only player allowed to touch the ball with the hands), a number of players committed to defend their goal against attacks by the opposing team, another number of players with the dual responsibility of defending when the other team has the ball and attacking when your team has the ball, and finally a number of players that will be primarily committed to the attack. These four groups of players are labeled: the goalkeeper, the fullback line, the midfield line, and the forward line.

Next week we will discuss the "best" system to use for deploying the players, and why "the best defense is a good defense" . . . when you win.

USC MAY BE CONFUSING SOCCER WITH WATER POLO. USC swim coach Peter Daland recently recruited three soccer players for soccer coach Joe Baker.

Because the maximum number of swimming scholarships is 11, three other potential world-class swimmers were recruited for USC under soccer scholarships.

Under the NCAA rules for a multi-sport athlete these three players must participate fully and regularly in organized practice with the squad . . . for the entire practice and playing season.

The Pac-8 swim coaches are concerned over these aquatic booters especially so because USC won the NCAA championship by almost 200 points with 11 swimmers on scholarship; fourteen swimmers on scholarship cannot but make them even stronger.

Meanwhile back on the USC soccer field coach Joe Baker is quoted as saying "My guess is they'll be as good as those we have coming back." USC's soccer record of 7-9-3 last year is nothing to boast about; giving out soccer scholarships to swimmers is certainly not the way to improve his team.

USC now has given out three "soccer" scholarships. KICKIN' AROUND finds no alternative but to "red card" the USC athletic department for conduct unbecoming a university. We will, however, give them an opportunity to redeem themselves by filling the remaining eight soccer scholarships with our local genuine bumper crop of excellent graduated booters.

FOR THE THIRD TIME IN FIVE YEARS the powerful Maccabees of Los Angeles have walked off with the U.S. Open Cup title by overwhelming the Philadelphia German/Hungarian club 5-0.

The Philly club was misnamed when you consider that all but one of its players were born in the USA and most of them hailing from the Kensington area near Philly. The Philadelphians were expected to provide tough opposition after wading thru Baltimore and Pittsburgh and the 4-time Open Cup champs, the Greek/Americans of New York City.

The Maccs had a much tougher time with the defending champion San Francisco Athletic Club here a few weeks ago and also with the St. Louis Ziegenhein in the battle to represent the west.

It is noticeable that the coaches of the 1976 Dewar Cup winners, the San Francisco Athletic Club and the Maccabees are also coaches of ranking college teams . . . Steve Negoesco being the coach of both the University of San Francisco team and the SFAC who last year walked off with the NCAA Division One title and the U.S. Open Cup, and Zvi Friedman who coaches Cal State Northridge and the Los Angeles Maccabees.

Friedman is also Chief Coach for AYSO, the American Youth group which now involves more than 150,000 boys and girls in 16 states. The Maccabee victory over Philadelphia brings to the far west its sixth U.S. Open Cup title since 1956 when the L.S. Kickers won the first. Five have been won by Los Angeles teams and one by San Francisco. The West is rising up.

DID YOU CATCH THE WEEKEND TV SOCCER PARADE? By this time you should be alerted to check your Saturday and Sunday schedules. Channel 34 gave us the Peru/Chile match Saturday and the Brazil/Poland game Sunday. In conflict with the Brazilian game was the Aztec/Minnesota coverage over channel 9 so you had to make a choice, or jump around during commercials. At 6 p.m. on Saturdays you don't have to worry about the commercials . . . the English games being on channel 28 which is not supported by commercials but by public subscription. And of course the fine German games are shown over channel 22 at 9:30 p.m. on Thursdays.

We didn't get to see the Cosmos/Tampa game but 62,394 lucky fans got into Giants Stadium in New Jersey to set a U.S. record for a soccer crowd and they were treated to a masterful showing by the Great Pele who came thru with a hat-trick (3 goals in one game) . . . only the 92nd hat-trick of his 22-year career and the second of the season! If the Cosmos make it to the NASL final this year there is no way a new crowd record can be set with the limited seating capacity of the Portland Stadium. It would be far wiser to make the final a home-and-away series in the home parks of the two finalists than by pre-designating a site as the NASL does. Last year Minnesota alone could have set the record even if opponents Toronto drew only their usual 5,000.

GEORGE BEST WAS AFIRE AGAIN in the Minnesota game last Sunday. His shooting, dribbling and pinpoint passing are making Steve David the top NASL scorer. Add a boost for hard-working Charlie Cooke who does a lot of ball picking-up in his midfield job and still manages to move forward for Best's passes. Charlie is a valuable man to the Aztecs. You can see these formidable warriors go against Pele and Beckenbauer on channel 9 Sunday from New Jersey and against Connecticut Wednesday night. You'd better check for particular times.

The Aztecs come back to the Coliseum for that great July 2 game against the Pele/Beckenbauer combine..truly a treat for the soccer fan.

AMERICAN LEAGUE ACTION finds the champ Skyhawks challenging the Sunshine at Santa Ana Bowl Saturday at 7:30 p.m.; and the New York Apollos doing a rerun of their title game vs. the Skyhawks at Van Nuys at 8 on Wednesday night.

DOWN SOUTH . . . WAY DOWN . . . Brazil beat Poland 3-1 before 90,000; Argentina and Scotland tied 1-1 after each had a player explulsed for fighting; and all South America primes for the Brazil/Peru/Bolivia World Cup playoffs July 10, 14 and 17. Sounds terrific.

DAVID GOMEZ

Rare play for boy in T-Ball

David Gomez pulled off a rare diamond feat last week in the Pomona Park and Recreation Department's youth T-Ball program.

Playing third base for the Angels in a game at Simons Junior High, eight-year old David completed an unassisted triple play.

He caught a line drive, stepped on third for a force play as the runner from third left early, and then proceeded to tag out the runner who had strayed off of second base.

The play was the first of its kind that league director Gene Knight could remember since the program's beginnings four years ago.

Youth T-Ball games are played Monday and Wednesday evenings at 5 p.m. at Simons. They are also played at Emerson Jr. High and at Westmont and Kennedy parks. League play concludes July 15 with a City Tournament set to begin July 18.

Amateurs enter match play

PEBBLE BEACH (AP) — Tom Culligan, 35, of San Mateo, a former San Francisco city champion, held medalist honors as the 66th California State Amateur Golf Championship entered match play today at Pebble Beach.

Culligan, who reached the quarter-finals in two previous state amateur tournaments, is paired against former San Francisco 49er quarterback John Brodie for his opening match as 32 survivors from a starting field of 200 begin headto-head competition that ends with Saturday's 36-hole finals.

Wednesday's third-round of medal play left Culligan tied with Robert Isaacson Jr., 20, of San Jose at 222, six over par. In the playoff the two parred the 385-yard first hole, and Culligan holed out a 12-footer for a winning birdie on the next extra hole, the 507-yard, par-5 No. 2.

Isaacson's first match opponent in the lower bracket is John Cook of Palm Springs.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — Blue chips were weak as stocks struggled for direction early Thursday in active trading while institutions juggled their portfolios in preparation for the third quarter.

In addition, a number of investors were waiting for the Federal Reserve Board's weekly money supply figures later in the day which could have a bearing on Fed policy. The basic money supply spurted $1 billion last week.

Several observers were disturbed by Wednesday reports that the United States had a record $4.32 billion current account balance of payments deficit, most of it being spent for foreign oil. The government has predicted a $10 to $12 billion deficit for the year.

Some also were concerned that orders for non-defense items in May were down 0.7 per cent. The non-defense sector is considered a barometer of future economic activity.

Against that background, the Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 2.29 points Wednesday, was off 2.12 points to 924.19 shortly before noon EDT.

Market breadth figures reflected considerable investor uncertainty. Advances led declines, 576 to 497, among the 1,634 issues crossing the tape. There were 561 unchanged issues.

Volume at the two-hour mark amounted to about 9,700,000 shares, compared with 12,130,000 traded during the same period Wednesday.

The heavy trading of the past several days and the inability of the glamors and blue chips to move sharply higher has indicated institutions were adjusting their portfolios for the third quarter.

Avis Corp. was the most active NYSE issue, unchanged at 21½ following a block trade of 103,700 shares at 21½. Berkey Photo followed, off ⅛ to 4⅛ in trading that included a block of 136,000 shares at 4.

Exxon was the third most active issue, unchanged at 52¼. The Justice Department said it does not intend to oppose Exxon's proposed sale of servce stations to Checker Oil Co.

Kaiser Cement & Gypsum was ahead 1¼ after a delayed opening. The company late Wednesday raised its quarterly dividend payment to 16 cents a share from 12½ cents.

Becton Dickinson was ahead 1¾. Late Wednesday, the firm's directors voted to reject acquisition overtures made by several unnamed companies.

General Foods was off 1½. The company Wednesday said it would seek to increase its authorized common share to 100 million from 60 million.

St. Regis Paper was off 1¼, Crown Zellerbach ⅝ and International Paper ½ following published reports a major analyst has taken the issues off his recomended list.

Kaiser Industries was the second most active Amex issue, up ⅛ to 5. Vernitron was third, unchanged at 10¼.

Over-the-counter stock prices

Los Angeles (UPI) Over-the-counter quotations supplied by the National Association of Securities Dealers, are bids and offers quoted by over-the-counter dealers to each other; the quotations do not include retail markup, mark down or commission; and do not represent actual transactions.

Ontario International

Passenger volume up

The strong upward trend in passenger volume at Ontario International Airport continued in May as 130,492 air travelers used the airport to mark a 13.7 per cent increase over the same month last year.

While passenger volume rose, air cargo activity fell to 520,315 pounds for the month, a drop of 9.4 per cent from the previous May. Total operations (landings and take-offs) at OIA were also down 4.2 per cent to 13,420 compared to 14,004 in 1976.

John Dickinson, airport manager, predicted the May increase is indicative of a record-breaking summer in passenger volume. He attributed the expected increase to new services offered by the airport and the effects of an intense advertising program.

At least four of the nine airlines serving OIA will have additional flights during the summer months. He added that the Los Angeles Department of Airports, OIA operator, recently launched a public service advertising campaign to create a greater awareness of Ontario and help relieve the congestion at Los Angeles International.

Stockbroker fight

Exchange has growth pains

SAN FRANCISCO (LENS) — A fresh sign of the uncertainty that haunts stockbrokers about the future of their trade has appeared in the Pacific Stock Exchange. A management plan to save money by amalgamating the two closely linked Los Angeles and San Francisco trading floors was narrowly defeated last month.

The debate about the plan over the past three months, as one group of stockbrokers lobbied for the merger and another opposed it, has highlighted three developments in the financial world: the rapid growth of the Pacific area as a financial center, the growing primacy of Los Angeles in this market and the state of nerves into which technological change has plunged the brokerage houses.

The industry is already expecting changes in the regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission by the end of the year. But the future of on-floor trading itself seems perilous. New techniques — more sophisticated computer facilities, closed-circuit television, automatic quotation services, the prospect of a composite national tape for all markets and perhaps an end of restrictions on off-floor trading — are catching on quickly.

Many specialists thought it unrealistic just at the moment to commit themselves to centralizing the Pacific Stock Exchange floor either in Los Angeles or in San Francisco. No one is sure that floors will have a function in stock exchange operations two or three years from now. As Professor John McDonald of Stanford's Graduate School of Business put it, "We think of the market system these days as communication lines, not as places."

Edward Wedbush, a Los Angeles broker who is chairman of the exchange's board of governors, suggested that some $400,000 a year in operating expenses and probably another $300,000 in electronic costs could be saved by merging the floors. Most of his support seemed to come from firms in southern California, around Los Angeles.

In San Francisco, however, the plan was seen as sugar coating for the abandonment of the city as a market. Members of a group of brokerage firms based in San Francisco, including Dean Witter & Company and Sutro & Company, circulated a letter urging postponement of talk about "consolidation." Warren Berl, chairman of the board of Sutro, emphasized that they thought the timing of any change — coming, as it did, just ahead of major regulatory changes by the SEC — thoroughly inappropriate. The opponents managed to block the plan; but many of them were irritated by the degree of pressure exerted on members to support the Los Angeles initiative. A majority of the 444 votes (representing both small and large firms) approved the single floor concept, but, with numerous abstentions and 155 votes against, the necessary two-thirds approval could not be obtained.

The Pacific coast stock exchange is the largest regional exchange in the country and the fastest growing. The San Francisco floor first opened as a local exchange in 1882, the Los Angeles one five years later. Since 1973 they have formed a single market served by an identical wire, with all transactions instantly communicated to both floors.

Hang-Sheng Cheng, an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, who undertook a recent study of the west coast as an international financial center, says he found it impossible to unravel the lines of command in offices spanning both cities or to identify major decision-making as coming exclusively from one or the other.

What he did find was tremendous growth in international banking on the west coast. Foreign assets of its banks (most of them in California) grew from $7 billion in 1969 to $32 billion in 1975 and the number of foreign banks with agencies or branches on the west coast grew from 16 in 1969 to 50 in 1975. This rise in the Pacific coast as an international financial center, he said, has been "remarkably rapid . . . and largely undaunted by the recession."

Shopper receives lesson

NEW YORK (AP) — While our thoughts followed the world's leaders to the summit, where high above the storm clouds they proclaimed the ideal of economic cooperation, more ordinary events continued in the rainy valleys.

—On Lexington Avenue in New York a shopper received an unforgetable lesson in why some people, despite talent and hard work, can't seem to make a living. Or was the lesson that of the effectiveness of mass production?

The shopper's quest was a metal picture frame, one foot by one foot, unassembled, for which he was quoted a price of $12, glass included.

While the proprietor measured the glass for cutting, the customer inquired about the price of a print, already matted and glass-enclosed in the identical frame.

"Seven-fifty," he was told.

"Do you mean this print, along with a mat, and the frame already assembled, costs $4.50 less than an unassembled frame with no mat and no print?"

"Yes."

"Then why should I pay $12?"

"You shouldn't. We buy the frames at wholesale and the print is thrown in."

"Which leaves one wondering: While the value of volume buying is obviously beneficial, what in the world is left for the artist, whose major contribution, it seems, is to lower the price of the frame?

NOW accounts costing banks

BOSTON (AP) — Some banks in New England say they are losing money on the free NOW checking accounts that pay 5 per cent interest to nearly 1.4 million customers.

And the banks say customers with NOW — Negotiable Order of Withdrawal accounts are going to have to start paying, either through service charges or minimum balance requirements.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston says the 5 per cent interest payments more than double the approximately 4 per cent it costs banks to offer checking accounts.

James Howell, chief economist for the First National Bank of Boston, says NOW accounts were a key reason that 1975 bank profits fell 35 per cent in Massachusetts and 27 per cent in New Hampshire, compared to a drop of 1.6 per cent for the nation.

Some of that expense is being passed on to consumers.

The First National Bank of Boston will require a minimum balance of $400 on NOW accounts starting July 1. When the balance falls below that, the charge will be 25 cents per check.

Federal law restricts the interest-bearing NOW accounts to the six New England states, but Congress is considering authorizing them nationwide.

Consumers aren't complaining about the NOW accounts, which spread rapidly in 1974 when Congress allowed them in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Other New England states got them early in 1976.

"I think it's the best consumer product since sliced bread," said Richard Hill, chairman of the First Boston Corp., the holding company that owns the First National Bank of Boston.

Started by the Consumer Savings Bank of Worcester, which had to go to court for the right to offer them, NOW accounts have been heavily advertised in New England. One result has been fierce competition among banks.

"Most of us have had no choice but to fight and fight hard to maintain or perhaps modestly enhance our position," a recent banking seminar was told by William M. Crozier Jr., chairman of BayBanks, Inc., which claims the world's largest market share of NOW accounts in its 180 offices.

The cost of providing NOW accounts was cited by Crozier last winter as "the overriding reason" for the pullout of five BayBanks subsidiary banks from the Federal Reserve System.

What happened to your breakfast? The food you eat gives your body the energy it needs to work and grow. But food must be digested before it can be used.

As you ate breakfast, your teeth chewed the food into small pieces. Saliva from your mouth moistened the food so you could swallow it easily.

When the food reached your stomach, powerful muscles in the walls of the stomach churned the food and thoroughly mixed it with digestive juices that poured out of glands in the stomach lining. The partly digested food then passed from the stomach into the small intestine where it was mixed with more digestive juices.

When completely digested, the food particles were absorbed by the blood vessels of the small intestine and then carried by the blood to all parts of the body where the food is used for energy.

The parts of food that cannot be digested or used leave the body as waste.

National meeting set by valley Girl Scouts

A 12-day national conference on public relations and other communication arts is being sponsored by the Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council at Scripps College for Women in Claremont beginning Saturday. There will be 150 selected Senior Girl Scouts from 43 states attending the event, "Tomorrow's Woman in Public Relations."

According to information received from the council headquarters in Pomona, over 60 speakers and workshop leaders from the professional ranks in public relations, television, radio, newspapers, graphic arts, photography, magazines and other media, have volunteered to lend their time and expertise in the largest scale career-exploration event sponsored by Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council.

"The cooperation we have received from the Inland Empire, Orange County and Los Angeles Chapters of The Public Relations Society of America is incredible," said Vashti Fleming, program chairman for the conference.

"And members of The Press Club of Southern California have also been generous in volunteering their time to introduce our participants to various areas of the media."

The workshop schedule will be interspersed with visits to Disneyland, the Music Center in Los Angeles and field trips to KTTV and KNBC, as well as scouting activities.

"Because our participants are from all over the country, our program was designed to give them an opportunity to do some serious career exploration and at the same time to enjoy Southern California and to share Girl Scouting activities," Mrs. Fleming added.

SHOULDER BAG — Mrs. Edith Laskowski, chairman of Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council involvement committee, left, Shelley Roseboro, senior scout member of steering committee, and Al Dubiel, steering committee chairman display one of shoulder bags to be presented to 150 senior scouts who will attend conference here.

What does she remember?

'Exorcist' star looks back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The movie ads proclaim: "It's four years later... What does she remember?"

If you really care about the answer, you'll have to see "Exorcist II: The Heretic," latest in what appears to be a long line of films aiming to cash in on previous hits. The "she" in the ad is Regan MacNeil, the girl who went through the agonies of hell, literally, to eradicate a demon from her system.

And what about Linda Blair — what does she remember? It has been four years since the unknown actress astounded the movie world with her performance as Regan in "The Exorcist," which remained the biggest film moneymaker until "Jaws." With a little help from Warner Brothers' special effects and Mercedes McCambridge's vocal effects, won an Academy nomination as best supporting actress.

"I remember 'The Exorcist' as being long, hard and physical," said Miss Blair, who was 14 during the making of the film. "I remember sitting in a freezing cold room and then under the hot lights. The work wasn't scary, just exhausting. The new picture was also long, but not as physical."

Linda Blair has changed in the four years. The physical change is obvious in a woman of 18. She giggles less often. The maturity is expectable, although she was surprisingly level-headed at 14. She now smokes filtertips and wears her hair in a frizzled, Bette Midler style.

She graduated from high school two years ago, still lives with her parents and older brother and sister in Connecticut, but plans to get her own house soon — "it's time to leave the nest." When she came west for a business and publicity trip, she was accompanied by boyfriend Teddy Hartlett, a 19-year-old rock musician, and another young couple.

DEMONS RE-VISITED — Linda Blair, star of "The Exorcist," undergoes hypnosis experiments in the sequel, "Exorcist II: The Heretic," to determine how much she remembers about her possession.

Since "The Exorcist," Linda has appeared in another sequel, "Airport '75," and three television movies, "Born Innocent," "Sweet Savage" and "Victory at Entebbe." When the second "Excorcist" was proposed, her reaction was: "Ho ho ho!"

"But then I got the script, and I was really surprised," she added. "It's a real juicer."

Warner Brothers added more juice to the project by hiring director John Boorman ("Deliverance") and casting Richard Burton as a Jesuit priest assigned to validate the earlier exorcism, Oscar winner Louise Fletcher as the psychiatrist treating Regan, and Max Von Sydow, appearing in flashbacks as the fated Father Merrin.

Linda was well compensated for returning to the land of the demons. How well? There have been reports of $750,000. She is understandably mute on the matter, remarking with a giggle: "How much you make is your business, how much I make is my business."

She has seen "The Heretic," and commented: "I didn't think it would be quite so scary. I must say, it gave me chills. The first picture didn't. It was my first time on the big screen, and I was too conscious of having filmed the scenes.

"The new picture has no repossession. It is four years later, and Regan is a straight-forward teen-ager with no apparent results from her experience. The demon has left her, and yet she was not exorcised; the demon transferred to Father Merrin.

"Regan is fighting it on her own. She has weird dreams and there is a sense of evilness lurking throughout. She is gifted, even psychic in a sense. But she is keeping it all inside. The film is a story of her fight for survival."

"The Heretic" explains many things that were eliminated in the cutting of the first film. But, she added, "there didn't have to be an 'Exorcist' for you to understand the new film."

What about the next four years and beyond for Linda Blair?

"I'm going to take the next year off to show my horses," said the actress, who owns four jumpers. "I have no plans to go to college. I have the grades to go — I got B-minuses and A-pluses—but I don't think you need college for acting. The best education is to go out and do it.

"There are a lot of things I want to do with my lifetime. I want to have a family some day. I want to get deeper into acting, do some directing, too. But I will never overwork. I will pick my projects carefully.

"Another 'Exorcist'? I hope not. I don't know what more we can do."

MTAC slates meeting

The annual convention of the Music Teachers' Association of California will be held at the Hyatt House in San Jose Friday through Tuesday.

The theme is "Around the State in 80 Years," commemorating the 80th anniversary of incorporation for MTAC. There will be concerts, master classes, demonstrations, lectures, exhibits, competitions, study sessions and performances by noted artists for music teachers and students from the 53 branches of MTAC.

Delegates from the Pomona Valley branch will be Leota Waters, president, and Genevieve Barber, treasurer. Alternates will be Eloise Wilder and Marguerite Green.

Scott Edwards, graduating senior at Claremont High School, has been selected to play in Lili Kraus' Piano Master Class on Tuesday, June 28. He will perform the fourth movement of the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 2 No. 3. Scott's teacher is Yvonne Gordon.

Also selected from the Pomona Valley branch to play at the convention is David Brown, pupil of Marguerite Green. He will play the Toccata in D Minor by J.S. Bach on Friday in the Panel Honors Recital.

The Music Teachers' Association of California, established in 1897, is a professional organization devoted to elevating the educational and reaching standards of its members and to providing superior music training for students.

Rock and gem show due at Great Western

The third annual Los Angeles Treasure-Rock-Gem & Mineral Show will be held at the Great Western Exhibit Center in Commerce July 9 and 10.

The show will feature ancient and modern mining equipment, the former dating back to 1849 when gold was discovered at Sutter's Mill in Northern California, and the latter of the type used today, including metal detectors, some adapted to operations on land, others to diving for treasure hundreds of feet below the surface of the sea. Also on display will be examples of precious and semi-precious stones: gold and silver nuggets, fine specimens of opal, saphires, rubies and turquoise, the latter fashioned into Indian jewelry. Many of the gems on display are in their natural state.

John Korty

Director is different

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Korty, the Emmy-winning director of CBS' "Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," does things a bit differently. For starters, his office is near San Francisco, not in Hollywood.

And in a boom era for half-hour situation comedies, with 27 set for next fall on the networks, a sit-com idea of his called "The Transport of Delight" may wind up on public TV in several years.

It's being pitched by station KQED in San Francisco to officials at the Corporation for Public Broadcasting as a candidate for partial underwriting for a pilot show that could lead to a series, KQED says.

"Transport" is about young folks of differing races who form a moving and trucking company, and advertise in foreign-language and underground newspapers, a station spokeswoman says.

"Well, I guess it's because I'm a little crazy," Korty said when asked why he didn't take his wares to NBC, CBS or ABC. "I had the idea for three years ... but I didn't want to do a commercial series."

He said he only wanted to do 13 episodes a year. But if his series was on a feared the network would demand the usual 24 or so episodes annually, leaving him no time for other projects.

His comedy idea sat idle until an old friend, Chloe Aaron, a Public Broadcasting Service program executive, mentioned a need for comedy on public TV, "so I decided to try it," he said.

Should CPB tell "Transport" to start trucking, he says, he won't take it to Hollywood. He'll tape the series on location around the City by the Bay, avoiding the conventional studio and audience therein.

"And I want to use, as much as possible, Bay-area writers, actors and directors," he added in a phone interview from his office in Mill Valley, just north of San Francisco.

"There are a lot of good people up here who find it very hard to crack the Hollywood scene. And yet they're very talented and know what they're doing."

Korty, 40, a transplanted New Yorker born in Lafayette, Ind., is among the small, but growing, colony of San Francisco film folk who've cracked the Hollywood scene with spectacular success.

Others who call the Bay area home include Francis Coppola of "Godfather" fame; George Lucas, director-writer of the hit "Star Wars," and Lee Mendelson.

SQUEEZED OUT? — Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, and Olympic ice skating star Dorothy Hamill, left, may soon become the new symbols of Florida orange juice. The Florida Citrus Commission is taking a poll to find out if orange juice queen Anita Bryant should be asked to leave her $100,000-a-year job as the orange juice symbol in commercials because of her anti-gay campaign. The commission has made backup commercials.

Wants to rock Cuba

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock entrepeneur Bill Graham has reportedly asked Cuban officials permission to stage a Carlos Santana concert in Havana.

Travel restrictions on American citizens wanting to go to Cuba were lifted last March, but because of trade limits still in effect, Graham would have to hand over all proceeds from the concert to the Cuban government.

"I heard that we were sending basketball teams over there and decided the time might be right," Graham told Rolling Stone magazine. "Carlos has always wanted to play there."

THE CRUSADERS — Angela Horine, right, holds her 1-year-old daughter, Sarah, as daughter Alisa, center, 14, holds a wire with a bit of cloth in flame of torch held by Catherine Clement, testing fabric to determine if it contains Tris, suspected of causing cancer. Women crusade against Tris

By MARY GANZ
Associated Press Writer

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — Angela Horine spent Mother's Day this year snipping tiny samples of fabric from her children's nightgowns, wrapping the clippings in copper wire and burning them.

Every time she saw a spurt of green flame, she knew this nightie or that sleeper she'd been putting on her 1½-year-old daughter probably contained the chemical Tris, suspected of causing cancer.

"It wreaks my heart because I remember the baby, how sweet she looked in those pajamas, and now we find out they have Tris in them," she says. "They have known it would probably cause cancer for at least two years now. If they'd done something then, my baby could have avoided all that exposure.

Mrs. Horine and a neighbor, Catherine Clement, have mounted a crusade to inform parents about the dangers of the chemical, banned in April by the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission as a flame retardant in children's clothing.

Mrs. Horine, 35, has written articles for local newspapers and for newsletters put out by her husband's electronics company and her 14-year-old's junior high school. A friend posted the warnings in her pediatrician's examining rooms.

Mrs. Horine's campaign has enjoyed some modest success. She says she convinced one disbelieving executive of a children's clothing company to test all his son's pajamas. She has received encouraging letters from government officials, and friends call her to check out new sleepwear purchases for their own children.

"People are very misinformed about the dangers of Tris," says Mrs. Horine. "Some people say, 'Oh, everything causes cancer. I'm not going to bother to go through all my kids' pajamas.'

"But I think if you're not upset, you really don't know the facts."

How real is the danger? Since cancer experiments cannot be performed on humans, nobody knows for sure. But tests by the National Cancer Institute showed Tris to be a potent carcinogen in rats and mice, and other experiments have shown that Tris rubbed off from clothing can be readily absorbed into the skin.

Dr. Bruce Ames, a University of California biochemist whose tests first spotted Tris as a potential carcinogen two years ago, has estimated that 17,000 of every million children who wore Tris-treated pajamas might develop kidney tumors by the time they reach their 20s.

Other scientists estimate a lower human risk factor — 200 kidney cancers per million male children by one study, 6,000 per million in another. In these studies, the risk factor for young girls was estimated to be about one fifth that for boys.

After 1972, when flammability standards went into effect for children's nightwear, Tris was used as a flame retardant in all acetate, triacetate and most 100 per cent polyester pajamas up to size 6. In 1975, the standards were extended to cover sizes 7-14.

Mrs. Horine, who had saved nightgowns from each of her five daughters for passing along to the next, couldn't remember what she'd purchased when.

So she and a chemist friend developed a simple test: Wrap a tiny snippet of fabric in copper or brass wire and hold it in a steady flame in a well-ventilated room. If the flame burned green, Mrs. Horine says, she knew the fabric contained one of several chemicals, the most likely being Tris.

If she saw the green flame, she put the garment aside and wrote to the manufacturer to be sure.

When she finished with the sleepwear, she started on the bedding. She found Tris in blankets, pillows, comforters and one of her daughter's sleeping bags.

"Then I thought I was done and I tucked my 6-year-old in bed that night and thought, 'Here you are in your Tris-free pajamas and your tris-free bed and you're safe.'"

That was before she tested Rosy, the ancient stuffed giraffe she tucked into bed with 6-year-old Jennifer every night. The flame burned bright green.

So it was back to the torch with all the doll clothes, dolls and stuffed animals accumulated over 14 years by five girls. Mrs. Horine got a positive test in half the dolls' hair or clothes.

"The thing that scares me is that it has not been banned in dolls or in blankets and comforters," she says. "There are still little babies out there sucking on their Tris-treated animals."

Robert Poth, compliance officer for the Consumer Product Safety Commission in Bethesda, Md., says the staff is compiling information on health hazards of Tris used in materials other than children's clothing.

The commission recently sent Mrs. Horine a list of Tris-treated products not covered by the ban. Included were toy sewing kits, home insulation materials, auto upholstery fabric, Christmas decorations and polyester thread used by the garment industry.

Mrs. Horine and Mrs. Clement were not convinced by the commission's recommendation that Tris-treated children's clothing would be safe after it was washed three times.

"I got a strong green flame on things I'd washed hundreds of times," Mrs. Horine says.

Dr. Robert Harris of the Environmental Defense Fund in Washington says his group thinks even laundered Tris-treated clothing is dangerous. The EDF is suing the Consumer Product Safety Commission in an effort to force a ban on all clothing and fabric treated with the chemical.

The EDF also has asked the commission to order cancer tests on other chemicals — some of them chemically similar to Tris — used as flame retardants in children's sleepwear.

Mrs. Horine threw out all the Tris-treated items she found in her house. Mrs. Clement went even further: She threw out everything that might have been washed with her daughter's Tris-treated garments.

"I had to wait a long time to have a baby," says Mrs. Clement, 36, as she watched her dark-eyed 20-month-old daughter playing in Mrs. Horine's yard. "I refuse to take any chances."

Bad luck continues

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — Tom Nickell's bad luck ranged rapidly from water to fire over the weekend.

His boat was swamped on Lake Ming and he gave up water skiing. So he towed the boat home and was cleaning the engine in his garage when a spark ignited gasoline fumes.

The fire Sunday burned Nickell and destroyed the boat, trailer and garage, as well as well as damaging his house. Total damage was estimated at $13,500.

Nickell was treated for burns on his hands and arms.

License ban

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Board of Supervisors has unanimously approved a moratorium on the issuing of business licenses for county stores which sell sexually explicit material.

Supervisor Pete Schabarum asked Tuesday for the action until a county ordinance controlling proliferation of such stores in unincorporated areas is drafted.

Child abuse plan okayed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Board of Supervisors has unanimously approved a program that would involve law enforcement agencies, courts, public services, schools and the state to help fight child abuse.

To help curb the 45,000 child abuse cases recorded annually in the county, the board voted Tuesday to establish a toll-free hot-line for reporting such cases, mandatory classes in state prisons for convicted child abusers, and programs to inform public school students that harsh punishment is not normal.

ZONE CHANGE NO. 191

A-1 TO M-1

ORDINANCE NO. 576

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS AMENDING THE SAN DIMAS CITY ZONING ORDINANCE BY AMENDING THE OFFICIAL ZONING MAP (ZONE CHANGE CASE NO. 191)

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. Section 308 of the "San Dimas Zoning Ordinance" is hereby amended by amending the official zoning of the City of San Dimas as shown on the map attached hereto.

SECTION 2. This Ordinance shall take effect thirty (30) days after its final passage, and within fifteen (15) days after its passage, the City Clerk shall cause it to be published in the Progress Bulletin, a newspaper of general circulation in the City of San Dimas, and hereby designated for that purpose.

Marvin Ersher, M.D.
MAYOR OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS

Pamela Jean Jackson, Deputy
CITY CLERK

I, RUTH V. FOSTER, City Clerk of the City of San Dimas, do hereby certify that the foregoing Ordinance No. 576 was regularly introduced at the regular meeting of the City Council on May 24, 1977, and was thereafter adopted and passed at a regular meeting held on June 14, 1977 by the following vote:

AYES: Councilmen Dipple, Lough, McLean, Wax, Ersher
NOES: None
ABSENT: None

I DO FURTHER CERTIFY that within fifteen (15) days from the date of its passage, I caused a copy of said Ordinance No. 576 to be published in the Progress Bulletin.

Pamela Jean Jackson, Deputy
CITY CLERK

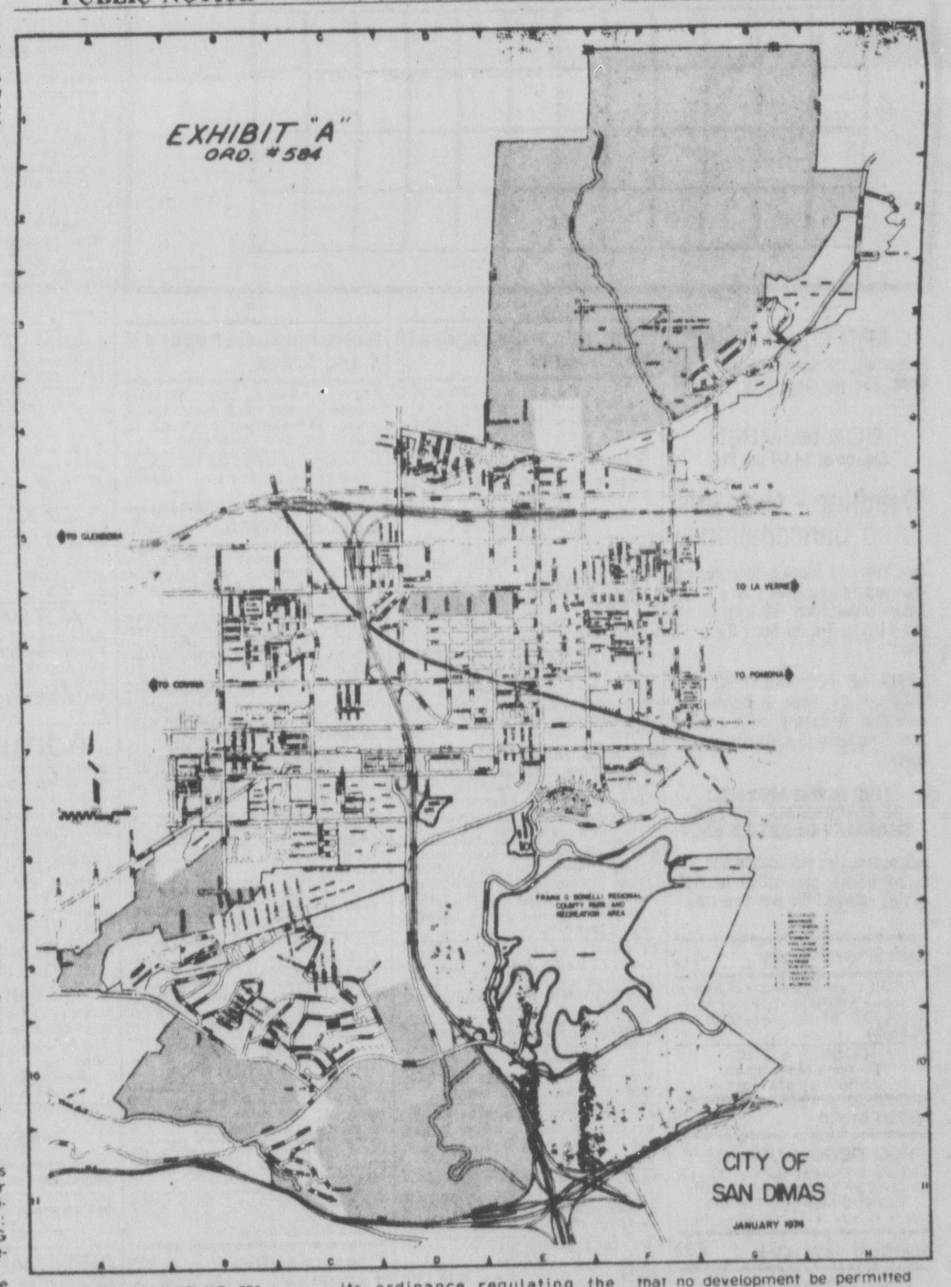
PUBLIC NOTICE



ORDINANCE NO. 584

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS PROHIBITING THE ISSUANCE OF ANY PERMITS RELATIVE TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF CERTAIN PROPERTIES AND THE FILING AND/OR CONSIDERATION OF ANY SUBDIVISION OR PARCEL MAPS RELATIVE TO CERTAIN PROPERTIES AND PROVIDING FOR ITS ADOPTION AS AN URGENCY ORDINANCE

SECTION 1. Notwithstanding any other provision of the San Dimas Municipal Code, no permits shall be issued for the development or improvement of the properties described in Exhibit "A" nor for the construction of any building or structure requiring a permit on any of the properties described in Exhibit "A", nor shall any subdivision maps or parcel maps be accepted for filing relative to the properties described in Exhibit "A" nor shall any subdivision maps or parcel maps filed relative to said properties on the effective date of this Ordinance, be processed, considered for subdivision review or set for hearing before the San Dimas Planning Commission or City Council until the City of San Dimas has adopted an ordinance to provide for the development and control of the hillside areas in the City of San Dimas and in particular those areas described in Exhibit "A", or until four months has passed, whichever occurs first, unless this Ordinance is extended.

SECTION 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of the San Dimas Municipal Code, any subdivision maps filed with the City on the date that this Ordinance is effective, shall be deemed denied without prejudice to their being refiled after the City of San Dimas has adopted its ordinance regulating the development of the hillside areas.

SECTION 3. The City of San Dimas has an adopted general plan to provide for the orderly growth and development of the City. This general plan contemplates a mixture of traditional land uses and the City Planning Commission and City Council have embarked upon a program to change the zoning classification for real property in this City to conform with the land use designations set forth in the general plan, and in addition to develop those zoning regulations which are necessary in order to implement the development controls referenced in the City's general plan so that the community's goals can be realized. Much development has occurred within the cities and it has become apparent that the remaining areas of property and which are generally described in the attached Exhibit "A", are among the more difficult terrain to develop. The properties described in Exhibit "A" are, for the most part, very hilly and any development that does occur within these areas will, unless considerable control is exercised over the type of development , have a potential to negatively impact the entire community for generations to come.

The City Council has authorized the retention of a consultant to meet with the City Staff and to assist it in the preparation of development controls which should apply to the hillside development in this City. In order to permit the planning staff, the consultant, the property owners, the public and the Planning Commission the opportunity to review the various alternative types of development controls which might be suggested to determine the one which is most appropriate for the remaining hillside properties in the City of San Dimas, it is necessary that no development be permitted for any of the properties described in Exhibit "A" and that no maps, subdivisions or parcel map, be filed or processed relative to the properties described in Exhibit "A" until the ordinances are prepared and approved by the City Council.

In order to promote the public peace, health and general welfare and preserve the status quo and permit the Planning Commission the opportunity to consider thoroughly a matter which is of such impact upon the community and far reaching in its effects, the City Council deems it appropriate to adopt this Ordinance pursuant to the provisions of S65858 of the Government Code as an Interim Zoning Ordinance and the same shall take effect immediately upon its adoption.

PASSED, MOVED AND ADOPTED this 14th Day of June, 1977.

Marvin Ersher
MAYOR

I, RUTH V. FOSTER, City Clerk of this City of San Dimas, do hereby certify that this Ordinance, being Ordinance No. 584, was adopted by the City Council at their regular meeting held June 14, 1977, by the following roll call vote:

AYES: Councilmen Dipple, Lough, McLean, Wax, Ersher
NOES: None
ABSENT: None

Pamela Jean Jackson, Deputy
CITY CLERK

I DO FURTHER CERTIFY that within fifteen (15) days from the date of its passage, I caused a copy of said Ordinance No. 584 to be published in the Progress-Bulletin.

Pamela Jean Jackson, Deputy
CITY CLERK

U.S. hails OAS adoption of human rights resolution

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — The Organization of American States has "reaffirmed its commitment to the priority of human rights and to that extent we in this hemisphere lead the world," U.S. Ambassador Gale McGee said following OAS adoption of a U.S. human rights resolution.

The resolution was approved Wednesday at the final session of the seventh OAS general assembly by 14 of the 25 nations, one more than the majority required for adoption. Eight nations abstained and three were absent.

With the resolution, the OAS became the first international body to go on record in support of President Carter's campaign to improve human rights around the globe.

"If it weren't for the United States, the human rights issue would never have come up," said one Latin American diplomat.

The resolution calls on all OAS members to reaffirm their commitment to "the pursuit and achievement of human rights and to undertake to secure the termination of any such violation of human rights as may exist within its borders."

It also increases the financial support for the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, which investigates reported violations of human rights in the hemisphere and reports on them to the OAS.

It was the major issue at the 10-day annual meeting.

The United States and eight other countries that co-sponsored the resolution successfully beat back a last-minute effort by Latin America's military governments, especially Argentina and Chile, to link human rights and terrorism in a single measure.

Argentina and Chile argued that terrorists also violate human rights, and that it is sometimes necessary to abridge human rights to combat terrorism.

"It certainly is true that the rights of persons can be violated by terrorists," said Deputy U.S. Ambassador Robert White. "But ... their actions may be a legitimate form of dissent against taking away the liberties of a people."

Voting for the resolution in addition to the United States were Peru, Mexico, Venezuela, Ecuador, Panama, the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbados, Granada, Surinam, Costa Rica and Haiti.

The eight abstainers were Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, Colombia, Guatemala and El Salvador. Absent were Bolivia, Nicaragua and Honduras.

By unanimous vote, the delegates then ratified a resolution by the Dominican Republic asking the OAS Permanent Council to study terrorism.

The organization also decided it has no right to investigate violations of human rights in Cuba because Fidel Castro's government has been expelled from the OAS. Some diplomats saw this as a new "hands off" policy but White, who is to head the U.S. liaison office in Havana when it opens later this summer, said: "The real question is whether Cuba should regain status in the organization as an active member."

Explosion spills raw sewage in street

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A sewer line exploded early today six blocks from the downtown area. The blast left a 75-foot-wide crater with raw sewage spewing into the street, and there were reports it may have resulted from vandalism.

Fire Lt. Robert Lord said an executive at the Patch Rubber Co., where workers were on strike, told officials that vandals had broken into the firm's cementing plant and opened valves to a tank of solvent. Lord said he was told that 3,000 gallons of petronaptha, a substance with highly flammable fumes, spilled into the sewer system.

Though the spillage occurred some distance from the area of the blast in the five-foot main sewer line, Lord said "we think that's it."

"There is a river of sewage as wide as a three-lane road out there," said Fritz Warren, a cemetery superintendent who reported he felt the blast about 2:30 a.m. "A foul odor has permeated everything." He said some windows of his house were shattered.

There were no reports of injuries but a police patrol car parked near one of the manhole covers and a car owned by Warren were damaged.

The explosion blew manhole covers along the sewer line as high as 100 feet into the air and upset covers for a block either side of the line, police said.

Akron police Sgt. Hugh Bennett said a 12-block area was sealed off and about 40 residents were asked to leave their homes.

Lover's chase ends in death

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — An automobile chase punctuated with gunfire that police say stemmed from a lover's quarrel has resulted in the death of a bystander and injuries to five others, including four children.

One car involved in the chase ran across a lawn Wednesday and through a group of women and children drawn outside by the noise of gunfire and squealing tires.

Although both cars sped away from the scene, police said, Ellinor Wright, 23, and Larry Harvey, 28, later turned themselves in and were charged with murder.

Chief of Detectives Matt Touchton said the two quarrelled when Mrs. Wright asked Harvey why he hadn't come home Tuesday night to the apartment they shared.

Harvey took off in his car and she followed in hers, firing a pistol as she chased him, police said. No one was struck by the bullets.

"As far as we know, he did not shoot back," Touchton said. "She didn't mean for that to happen," he said of the death. "I think she is basically a good person who just let the situation get out of hand and it ended with tragic consequences."

Jerlene Waller, 28, was killed.

Peggy Forshee, 23, was hospitalized with a broken hip and leg. Mrs. Waller's children, Larrell, 5, and Larry, 4, were hospitalized with bruises and cuts but reported in satisfactory condition.

Mrs. Forshee's children, Sherry, 6, and Michelle, 2, were released after hospital treatment.

Carter to speak at Demo dinner

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is addressing a Democratic fund raising dinner in New York which reportedly has $1 million in advance tickets sales, enough to pay off about a quarter of the party's debt from past campaigns.

Carter speaks at the dinner tonight at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. His aides say the President's address will be more partisan than policy and will promote some of his major proposals.

Purchase would protect agricultural programs

State budget includes $2 million for land acquisition by Cal Poly

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Two million dollars has been included in the 1977-78 state budget to allow Cal Poly Pomona to acquire 100 acres of hillside land adjacent to the campus.

Assemblyman William McVittie, D-Upland, announced today that the land desired by the university to protect its agricultural programs has been included in the budget.

Hugh O. LaBounty Jr., acting president of Cal Poly Pomona, said this morning that the university has no immediate plans for expansion of the land, but wants to protect its student programs.

"The 100 acres of hilly land is located between our present agricultural units and Forest Lawn Covina Hills," LaBounty explained.

"The land owned by Via Verde Development Co. is being held for us until Aug. 15 to see if the purchase was possible," La Bounty continued. "It is also being considered for residential development.

"If this land was to be developed for homes, the university's beef, swine, lamb and poultry programs would be endangered since we all realize that agricultural and residential developments have problems co-existing."

LaBounty added that the area will be used for ecological studies by students.

"If enrollment continues to grow, it may be needed for future expansion of the campus, but now it will be a protection for existing programs."

French slayer of young girl dies on guillotine

DOUAI, France (AP) — Jerome Carrein, 36, died on the guillotine at dawn today for the murder of an 8-year-old girl. He was the second person executed in France since President Valery Giscard d'Estaing took office three years ago.

Carrein was beheaded in the prison courtyard in this northern French town. He was sentenced to death twice for the slaying in 1975 of Cathy Petit, daughter of the owners of a tavern he frequented near Paulluel, 10 miles from Douai.

According to testimony at his trial, he met the child after school, persuaded her to accompany him to a swamp, tried to rape her and drowned her when she resisted.

The man returned to the bar and reported the child died accidentally. The parents were suspicious and called the police.

Carrein was convicted last July 12, but the Court of Appeals found a technical error in the trial and ordered a new trial. The Douai Court of Assizes on Feb. 1 sentenced Carrein to death for the second time after again finding him guilty of kidnaping a minor, attempted rape and murder.

It was not learned whether the sentence was appealed to President Giscard d'Estaing although this is usually automatic.

The death sentence is mandatory for persons convicted of murder unless the jury finds mitigating circumstances. It has been the practice in France since the time of President Charles de Gaulle to refuse clemency when children and prison officials are the victims.

An estimated 4,600 persons have been guillotined since the machine came into use in France about 200 years ago. It was invented as a substitute for hanging, which often left victims to strangle slowly. It has a 132-pound blade which falls nine feet between two grooved beams.

Soviets accuse Spain's Red chief of hurting movement

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has accused Spanish Communist party leader Santiago Carrillo of trying to split the international Communist movement and of playing into the hands of "reactionary imperialist forces."

The condemnation was contained in a 6,000-word editorial in the weekly New Times and based on a review of Carrillo's book, "Eurocommunism and the State." The editorial also was carried by the Soviet news agency TASS.

Carrillo was not immediately available for comment. A Spanish Communist party spokesman in Madrid said, "It will be up to Don Santiago to answer.'

The editorial was the most vigorous condemnation of any foreign Communist leader in recent years, surpassing criticism last December of French Communist leader George Marchais who was rebuked for criticizing Soviet handling of dissidents.

Tass said the book analyzes the Soviet Communist system in a way that "accords solely with the interests of imperialism, the forces of agression and reaction.

"If applied in practice it would lead to a split in the international Communist movement, the very goal the reactionary imperialist forces have aspired to for so many decades.

"The underlying idea of the author is the union of Western Europe on what is in effect an anti-Soviet platform," New Times said.

Court ruling deals prison unions jolt

WASHINGTON (AP) — State prison officials can prohibit prisoners from asking fellow inmates to join a union and refuse to distribute to inmates bulk mailings from outside union organizers, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The court reversed a lower court ruling that North Carolina officials violated the constitutional rights of prisoners by barring such union activity.

Today's decision did not ban unions in prisons, but the justices refused to give such unions privileges enjoyed by unions outside prisons.

The North Carolina prison regulations prohibit unions from using prison facilities for meetings, soliciting fellow inmates or receiving bulk mailings from union organizers outside the prison.

EPA plans to require noise labels on many appliances

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the roar of the lawn mower to the whine of the hair dryer the government is battling to keep the din down.

And where that can't be done, there will be a label to warn you how loud your new appliance will be when you start it up.

The Environmental Protection agency announced Wednesday it is planning to require noise labels on a variety of products.

Final decisions haven't been made about which products will have to carry the labels, but leading candidates are reported to be vacuum cleaners, air conditioners, shop tools, dishwashers and powered lawn and garden equipment.

Also included will be labels for products which reduce noise, such as ear protectors and acoustic tile. Those labels will contain information on how helpful the products are in keeping down noise.

"The newly proposed labeling program will permit informed consumer decisions by making possible comparisons of products related to noise or noise reducing characteristics," said EPA Administrator Douglas M. Costle.

Costle said the first product for which a labeling standard has been prepared is ear protectors.

"In this case the label will bear a number between 0 and 31. The higher the number, the greater the product's effectiveness in excluding noise from a person's ear," he said.

Similar labeling standards for noise-producing products are still being developed, and no decision has been made whether to use a system of numbers, letters or symbols, officials said.

"For consumer products the labeling program should, with a minimum of federal involvement, provide accurate and understandable information to purchasers and permit them to decide for themselves if they want a quieter personal environment.

"If consumers make it plain they want quieter products, the marketplace will in all likelihood respond," Costle said.

Officials said the labeling program is in response to congressional directions to reduce the level of background noise in the country.

For products over which individuals have little or no control, such as bulldozers, trucks, motorcycles and buses, EPA is setting allowable noise levels for manufacturers to meet.

The General Services Administration also is trying to reduce noice. It has purchased 10,000 power lawnmowers with noise levels reduced by 10 decibels. The mowers will be for use by federal agencies.

Since the decibel system for measuring noise is a geometric rather than an arithmetic scale, the 10-decibel reduction — from 92 to 82 decibels — means the noise level is being cut in half.

The EPA is seeking comments and suggestions from the public on it's noise labeling program and officials said public hearings will be scheduled if there is sufficient interest.

Persons wishing to comment should write, by Sept. 20, to the Director, Standards and Regulations Division, Office of Noise Abatement and Control (AW471), Attn. Product Noise Labeling, Docket No. ONAC 778, U. S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C., 20460.

Neutron bomb gets go-ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The full Senate is facing a decision on whether a lethal neutron bomb that kills people but leaves buildings intact should become part of the U.S. nuclear weapons arsenal.

The Senate Appropriations Committee rejected on Wednesday a move by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to ban production of the device.

Although its details are mostly secret, the proposed bomb is reportedly designed to kill people through the release of highly radioactive neutrons while doing a minimum amount of damage to structures.

The legislation, already approved by the House, now goes to the full Senate.

AMA calls for sale, warning of saccharin

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Warning: this product contains saccharin, which may be a cause of increased incidence of cancer in animals and humans."

A cautionary label along these lines would be placed on diet drinks and other products containing the artificial sweetener under an American Medical Association resolution aimed at preventing a federal ban on saccharin.

The physicians' organization, at its annual meeting, agreed Wednesday to support continued sales of the sweetener. A related resolution passed by the 249-member House of Delegates advocated efforts to amend the federal law on cancer-causing food additives under which the Food and Drug Administration plans to take saccharin off the market.

"We want to develop a longrange plan to amend the Delaney Amendment and a shortterm regulatory or legislative attempt to keep saccharin on the market," said Dr. Alfred Faber of Illinois, whose committee wrote the resolution.

Many physicians feel the case against saccharin as a cause of cancer is inconclusive and that saccharin is a badly needed dietary aid in treating diseases such as diabetes, in which sugar intake must be limited.

"I hope my diabetic patients live long enough to get cancer of the bladder from saccharin," said one physician during debate on the resolution.

The AMA body adopted a statement saying that the physicians would support a measure to "permit the marketing of saccharin as a food additive or an over-the-counter product with labeling warning of the potential increase in the incidence of cancer in animals and humans based on the currently available evidence."

In addition, the AMA voted to seek a change in the Food Additive Act, or Delaney Amendment, so that clearer evidence of possible cancer causation by a food additive would be required for the government to ban a substance like saccharin.

Under the current law, said Dr. Paul Friedman of Philadelphia, "artificial doses are being used in experiments that have no relation to normal human consumption."

The doctors agreed that the law should be changed so that a substance could be taken off the market only if there was evidence that cancer could result from ingesting the additive in amounts equivalent to "normal daily consumption for humans."

Brown prison proposal gets into trouble

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. can't build new prisons in 1977-78 if the legislature's budget committee gets its way, because a Republican lawmaker says there's no proof they are needed.

The joint committee of the Assembly and Senate completed work Wednesday on a more than $14.6-billion state budget proposal and refused to include $92 million Brown wants to build two new prisons.

Assemblyman Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, who cast the deciding vote to reject prison-building funds, said in an interview:

"To put a lump sum in for the purpose of showing the public how intent we are to keep people behind bars doesn't seem kosher to me until we have studies to justify it."

The committee also reversed an earlier decision and allowed the University of California to raise student fees $48 this fall without loss of state funds.

The budget, about $400 million more than Brown proposed in January, is expected to come up for full Assembly and Senate votes Friday. Brown has until July 1 to sign it after cutting individual spending items.

Combined with pending bills on property tax relief and school finance, the state would spend about $16.3 billion in the coming fiscal year.

State briefs

Emergency room liability

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation easing liability limits on emergency room doctors has won Assembly passage despite foes' arguments it curbed patients' legal rights too much.

Wednesday's 43-24 vote on AB 1301 by Assemblyman Vic Fazio, D-Sacramento, sent it to the state Senate.

Backers said the bill was needed because doctors in emergency situations shouldn't have to stop and worry about suits when patients need quick help.

Fazio won passage of the measure last week also, but opponents held it up for a second vote by a parliamentary maneuver.

"This will almost be a bar to liability so in the long run I don't think it will provide better services," said Assemblyman Julian Dixon, D-Los Angeles.

The measure would remove "negligence" as a grounds for filing suit against emergency room doctors and nurses and against paramedics and firemen on the scene of an emergency.

It would leave grounds of "gross negligence" which the bill's supporters said was sufficient redress against poorly performed care.

Delay on tax, school bills

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. and Democratic leaders of the legislature say they have agreed to delay final action on property tax and school finance bills to take a closer look at the costs involved.

An agreement to continue work on the school and tax bills during the legislature's summer recess was made during a series of meetings at the Democratic governor's office Wednesday.

Special conference committees involving a total of six senators and six assemblymen were being selected to work on the two billion-dollar-plus proposals while the legislature's other 108 members take vacations beginning next week.

Collecting hospital bills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County officials have created a special task force to collect up to $15.3 million in unpaid hospital bills.

"There's been a problem in following up on bills that are collectible," auditor-controller Mark H. Bloodgood said Wednesday. "We want to concentrate hardest on sending timely bills to individuals and insurance companies and on following through on them promptly."

The $15.3-million figure represents "potentially collectible revenue" from individuals, insurance companies and MediCal out of a total of $370 million in deliquent medical bills as of last April 30, officials said. Most of the remaining bills are owed by indigents who cannot afford to pay them, Bloodgood said.

Emergency radio network

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A new emergency radio network to alleviate "chaos" in ambulance communications has been ordered by the county.

The new network will coordinate radio transmissions between all private and public paramedic units and hospitals in the county, officials said.

Edward W. Messigner, head of the county's Department of Communications, said the system was needed because ambulance calls from San Diego County freqeuntly interrupted emergency transmissions here.

"Occasionnaly the system got so jammed that a doctor would end up talking to paramedics who were giving medical treatment to some other physician's patient," Messinger said.

The radio network, which will cost an estimated $4 million, has been on the drawing boards for 18 months. Private companies will contribute $1.2 million, state and federal agencies $1.5 million, and the county $1.3 million, officials said.

By Upland City Council

Growth plan adopted

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Upland City Council has adopted a growth management plan that not only controls the amount of residential growth within the city but also determines where it will be located.

Councilwoman Ina Petokas was absent when the council voted 4-0 to endorse the 127-point system explained by City Engineer Fred Blanchard on Monday.

Blanchard said the staff felt that handling 125 residential units per month would result in an organized, fair development plan. The growth control calls for not more than 500 units to be considered in six months with a maximum of 900 units a year in the city.

The growth management plan does not include single-family homes on existing lots.

Blanchard added that the point system would encourage developers to submit well-prepared plans. He said this has not always been true in the past, resulting in an extra work load for city staff members.

The point system includes many factors, such as schools in the vicinity, parks and public services available.

The maximum of 900 units a year is substantially less than units reviewed recently. Upland approved 1,282 residential units during the 1975-76 year and 1,322 units from July 1, 1976, to May 1, 1977, an 11-month period, Blanchard added.

Some 2,400 units were approved by the city during the 18 months prior to 120-day moratorium which went into effect Feb. 7.

The city's concern over control of growth beyond services available was coupled with the moratorium by the state Water Quality Control Board based on the operating capacity of the Chino Basin Municipal Water District's sewage plant which serves Upland.

The growth management plans were approved by Bob Mills, representing the Upland Chamber of Commerce, and several area contractors.

The plans are flexible and can be changed by council resolution later if necessary, Blanchard said.

Chaffey College personnel gains 6.5% pay raise

Classified personnel at Chaffey College received 6.5 per cent pay raises during a special board of trustees meeting Wednesday noon.

The action by the trustees followed similar raises for certificated staff members and the adoption of the tentative budget last Week.

The salary and benefit package for the classified staff had been delayed several days at the request of the Chaffey College Chapter of the California School Employes Association (CSEA) representatives so the chapter's attorneys could inspect the offer.

The salary increases for 328 employes will add about $650,000 to the proposed budget of just over $18 million.

The tentative budget adopted is about $538,467 less than the 1976-77 college budget due to a drop in the enrollment.

After additional refinements, the 1977-78 publication budget will be considered at the July 14 board meeting and the final budget for the next fiscal year will be considered on Aug. 4.

Nuclear bankruptcy viewed with apprehension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bankruptcy proceedings filed by a federal agency against a key producer of atomic fuel may disrupt nuclear programs in foreign countries and could lead to millions of dollars in international lawsuits.

Carter administration officials said Wednesday that experts from the State Department and Justice Department are investigating international and legal problems arising from the failure of the U.S. Nuclear Corp. of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

A bankruptcy petition against the firm was filed without fanfare by the federal Energy Research and Development Agency last month.

Sources say Brazil, South Africa and some other long-time buyers of the company's highly enriched uranium are asking the State Department about the bankruptcy proceeding and obviously are concerned that their major source of a special type of reactor fuel may be cut off.

Brazil and South Africa already had made down payments to U.S. Nuclear for future deliveries of nuclear fuel, sources say. Now the countries may find their money and fuel tied up in bankruptcy court.

ERDA, the corporation's biggest creditor, filed the bankruptcy petition May 4, officials said. U.S. Nuclear was closed, but its supply of enriched uranium, already processed for export, was properly stored and sealed, the officials said.

U.S. Nuclear, State Department officials say, is the only U.S. firm using a special metallurgical process to produce fuel elements for a particular kind of research reactor exported by the United States.

An ERDA team from Washington now is checking into the corporation's records to determine how many countries paid U.S. Nuclear for fuel not yet delivered. Sources say they believe at least a dozen countries have been dealing through the closed company.

Shutdown of U.S. Nuclear complicates the task of various government agencies that must advise President Carter when he decides whether or not to approve sales of enriched uranium to foreign countries. Carter said in April he personally will screen large orders for enriched uranium, which can be used to build nuclear weapons.

Some of the foreign requests for nuclear fuel now being considered are loaded with heavy political overtones and friendly countries already annoyed with government-prompted delays may be irate over what will amount to a new legal roadblock to needed nuclear fuel.

For example, South Africa, whose race policies have been denounced by the U.S. government, put in a bid more than two years ago for 55 pounds of enriched uranium at a total cost of about $500,000. The uranium was prepared by U.S. Nuclear, but the sale was never cleared by the Carter administration and now is entangled in the bankruptcy case.

Brazil, assailed by Carter on the issue of human rights, also had asked to buy a new shipment of uranium from U.S. Nuclear. Brazil's research reactor is similar to South Africa's reactor.

CHURCH BUILDING COLLAPSES

Workers try desperately to help William Rivers as he lies among twisted steel beams in the collapse of a church under construction in Tallahassee Wednesday. Rivers, one of eight persons injured in the mishap, was listed in serious condition.

Welfare fraud poses threat

CHICAGO (AP) — Massive welfare fraud by government workers such as that alleged in Detroit and Chicago could be a major problem in every large city in the nation, a federal prosecutor says.

U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner said Wednesday that he will urge U.S. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and Department of Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano to launch a nationwide investigation to determine if public employes are illegally collecting welfare.

His announcement was made Wednesday after a federal grand jury indicted 92 local and federal agency workers for lying and cheating to illegally obtain welfare payments. Some of those indicted earned up to $17,500 a year and their average Civil Service pay was $12,000, Skinner said.

"I've never seen anything like it," he said. "It is the most serious law enforcement problem I've seen and I've been around the U.S. attorney's office for nine years," he said. "How in the world can they receive $12,000 a year or more from their public job ... and expect the taxpayers to pay them for welfare fraud and lie and cheat year after year to get away with it?"

Some $10 million has been siphoned off over the years as a result of the fraud, Skinner estimated. He said some of those who collected the payments hold charge accounts at Chicago's most expensive retail shops and drive high-priced, late-model cars. One had $20,000 in a savings account.

He also said that "many of these people are working mothers who have good jobs and report no father in the home. It's very unfortunate" but said he would seek stiff jail sentences in the most aggravated cases as a deterrent.

Skinner said the massive fraud charged in the indictments was similar to large-scale welfare chiseling recently found among public payroll workers in Detroit, where 30 indictments were returned as a result of a Michigan investigation.

The fraud was discovered after payrolls were checked against names of welfare recipients.

"We're hitting two for two," Skinner said at a news conference. "In Detroit they did it and found a major problem. In Illinois, we did it and found a major problem. I think it could be a major problem in every large city in the country."

Meanwhile, Gov. James R. Thompson said he will appoint a task force to investigate the charges and recommend ways to tighten up on welfare fraud in Illinois.

"The indictments are a triple disgrace," Thompson declared at a news conference in his Chicago office. "Service to the people is impaired, the names and reputations of honest and efficient public employes are besmirched and the taxpayers take it on the chin and get ripped off."

Skinner said all 92 persons indicted accepted monthly welfare checks while drawing government salaries.

Skinner said indictments were sought only in the most serious cases and they conclude the first phase of a year-long investigation which showed "an astonishing lack of respect by public employes for the law."

Ike, Mamie didn't think of divorcing

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — The son of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower says his parents had problems during World War II but that his father never considered divorce.

John S. D. Eisenhower says his mother, Mamie, wrote to Eisenhower asking about his purported affair with the late Kay Summersby, the then-general's driver and secretary.

"Mother was under a lot of strain," Eisenhower said. "I don't know if she believed the rumors, but she thought enough of them to bring it up in her letters."

The Eisenhower family has released some of the wartime correspondence between Eisenhower and his wife in reaction to a upcoming ABC television program that depicts Eisenhower's rumored affair with Miss Summersby.

Eisenhower's son, an author and historian, said in an interview Wednesday that he did not know the full details of the Eisenhower-Summersby relationship.

Eisenhower said he also released the letters to refute "hogwash" in Merle Miller's book, "Plain Speaking." In the book Miller includes an account by Harry Truman of a story that Eisenhower planned to divorce Mamie and marry Miss Summersby.

Man-hour cost of search for two runaways tabulated

Civilian searchers and Pomona police drove more than 5,000 miles and expended more than 1,300 man-hours looking for two young runaway children who were found safe Tuesday night in downtown Los Angeles.

A final tabulation of figures Wednesday revealed that members of the California Citizens Alert Patrol (C-CAP) alone put in 1,050 hours searching for the children. Fifty C-CAP members volunteered to assist the police Monday afternoon and night and 65 took part in the Tuesday operation.

Besides the members of C-CAP, 20 citizens not connected with any organization assisted in the search. Many had citizens band radios and used them to inform truck drivers to be alert for the missing children along the state's highways. It was reported that within a 30-minute period Monday, descriptions of the children were broadcast by truckers using CB radios all the way from San Diego to Sacramento.

The children hopped a ride into Los Angeles on a railway flatcar Monday, it was learned after they were found.

Mitchell jeered by inmates at prison

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — John Mitchell today puts on a prison uniform and begins to acquaint himself with what will be his home for at least the next 30 months.

The dormitory he shares with other inmates at the federal prison camp at Maxwell Air Force Base differs drastically from the plush Justice Department office he once occupied as attorney general.

Instead of rubbing elbows with the rich and powerful, Mitchell will be living with drug smugglers, income tax evaders and bootleggers.

Many of those prisoners jeered Wednesday when Mitchell arrived at the minimum security facility to begin serving his sentence for involvement in the Watergate scandal that brought down the administration of Richard Nixon.

During his 45-minute indoctrination, Mitchell exchanged his dark green business suit for a brown work uniform. He was photographed, fingerprinted, given prison number 24171 157 and assigned to one of the seven military-like dormitories that house inmates.

Grunska said no attempt was made to preselect Mitchell's roommates.

Amin alive; it's declared officially

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Uganda's President Idi Amin was officially declared alive but resting by Radio Uganda today.

The radio, quoting a military spokesman said : "Amin has been resting after a long period of hard work."

It is understood that any announcements about Amin on the Uganda radio are approved beforehand by Amin himself.

Like a cancer ward, says Colson

Prisons not country clubs

WINCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — The prisons where two former top Nixon aides began serving time this week are far from being country clubs, says former White House special counsel Charles Colson.

"Living in constant noise and in overwhelming depression is like living in a terminal cancer ward," Colson told a group of high school students in this Boston suburb.

Colson spoke only hours after John Mitchell, 63, entered prison at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama on Wednesday, the first former U.S. attorney general to go to prison. Colson was also jailed there.

Mitchell became the 25th person jailed in connection with the Watergate scandal. He was imprisoned five years and five days after the break-in at the Democratic National Committee's headquarters at the Watergate building in Washington.

Former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman surrendered on Tuesday at the federal prison at Lompoc, Calif. Both men are serving 2½-to-8-year sentences, as is former domestic adviser John Ehrlichman, imprisoned since last October at Safford, Ariz.

"Everyone (in the prison) has family problems, and no hope for the future," Colson said, calling the dormitories "filthy beyond belief and smelling like urine."

"Taking men like Mitchell and Haldeman and thrusting them into a situation like that... You can call it a country club if you like," he said to dispute such descriptions.

Colson, who served seven months of a sentence for obstructing justice in the scandal that toppled the administration of former President Richard M. Nixon, spoke to 21 Winchester High School juniors at the end of a four-week class on Watergate.

After throwing questions at Colson for three hours, the 21 students said they were unsatisfied.

Several described him as "very defensive."

"I'm a little disappointed," said Mary Budd, 16. "He seemed to dodge most of my questions."

Colson "used his sense of humor as a way out" of answering many questions, said Bob Brosnan, 17.

The Colson interview was recorded on video tape by a Washington, D.C., firm that supplied materials for the class. It hopes to turn this and five other tapes into a television documentary and possibly a classroom film.

During the interview, Colson warned the students against trying to "legislate morality."

"The minute you think you're incapable of a Watergate, man, that is when you're in deep trouble," he said.

Christie mystery saves tot

LONDON (AP) — Agatha Christie's 16-year-old detective story "The Pale Horse" saved the life of a 19-month-old girl dying of a mysterious condition that baffled London doctors, the British Journal of Hospital Medicine reported today.

The Arab baby was flown from Qatar, on the Persian Gulf, for treatment and was semiconscious when admitted to London's Hammersmith Hospital. Despite intensive care, her blood pressure increased, her breathing became increasingly difficult and she appeared on the brink of death, but the doctors could not diagnose her illness.

As the doctors were making their morning rounds of the wards, Nurse Marsha Maitland suggested that her tiny patient might have been poisoned by a compound of thallium, a soft bluish-white metal whose salts are poisonous. Nurse Maitland said she was reading "The Pale Horse" and the baby's symptoms were remarkably similar to those of a thallium case in the book.

The doctors decided to test the theory. Thallium is rarely found in Britain, and the hospital lacked the necessary testing equipment. The doctors went to Scotland Yard, which referred them to a laboratory with the equipment. Tests confirmed thallium poisoning, and the baby recovered after getting the right treatment.

The article in the medical journal suggested that a thallium preparation had been used to kill roaches and rats around the child's home.

Bees added to livestock

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Hitch up Old Paint outside, partner, and check your sixshooters at the door! Things have changed out on the range.

The state Assembly on Wednesday unanimously approved a measure aimed at redefining livestock tc include bees.

Junk food ban okayed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation forbidding sale of "junk food" in elementary and junior high schools has won Assembly approval after its author lashed out at cavities and obesity.

Assemblyman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles, said Wednesday the bill would help fuel the fight against tooth decay and fatness.

Soweto students massing

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police shot and killed one black and wounded another in Soweto today and arrested about 130 others in central Johannesburg as black students protested the continued preventive detention of their leaders by South Africa's white government.

Police sources said large groups of students were massing all over Soweto, the segregated township of more than a million blacks 10 miles southwest of Johannesburg. The police were reported breaking up the groups with tear gas.

BRONC RIDING — This is one act which will be repeated at the Fourth of July rodeo at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona, sponsored by the Pomona Firemen's Association and City of Pomona. A fireworks show will be presented immediately following the evening rodeo performance.

Two July 4 rodeos slated at fairgrounds

Two rodeo performances have been scheduled at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona July 4.

The rodeo, sponsored by the Pomona Fireman's Association and the City of Pomona, will be produced by Rodeo Stock Contractors of Clements. Six events, approved by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys' Association, will be bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, team roping and bull riding.

The Girl's Rodeo Association will sanction a cloverleaf barrel race.

Local contestants may enter at Pomona Fire Station, 925 E. Lexington Ave. For further information call 620-2205. The deadline for local contestants to enter the rodeo is noon, Wednesday.

It is expected that more than 150 professional contestants will be vying for a purse of $7,500.

The purse makes this rodeo the largest July 4th Rodeo in California this year.

There will be musical entertainment and free pony rides for children.

An aerial fireworks display is planned immediately following the evening rodeo.

Performance times will be 2 and 7 p.m. Gates will open at 12:30 and 5:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at all Pomona fire stations. Tickets will also be sold at the grandstand entrance on July 4. They are $3 for adults and $2 for children under 12. Children 3 and under will be admitted free.

Reserved seat tickets will be available at the grandstand entrance on July 4 for an additional $2.

'Adults only' trips planned

Five "adults only" trips are being planned this summer by the San Dimas Recreation Department.

Reservations are being accepted for trips to Solvang on July 7, Laguna Arts Festival July 20, Ports O'Call Aug. 9, Dodgers game Aug. 27 and Hawaii from Sept. 16 to Sept. 25.

Cost for the Hawaiian trip is $554 per person. Reservation fees are being accepted at San Dimas City Hall, 245 E. Bonita Ave.

Parents claim daughters got V.D. at school

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona school board Tuesday night heard a report from two district residents who claimed their daughters had been infected with gonorrhea from the toilet seats at Washington Elementary School.

The incident first arose three weeks ago when a school district nurse discovered an apparent infection in four girls at the school and recommended the children see their family physicians and the doctors at the county health department.

District officials immediately notified the county health department and the press, informing both of the situation.

Initially, it was thought the children had contracted the disease from the toilet seats at the school, but later opinions by physicians have just about completely discounted the possibility of that. Most physicians consulted in the matter by the district and parents agree that it is impossible to contract gonorrhea from a toilet seat due to the fragile nature of the germ which is even difficult to culture in a laboratory environment.

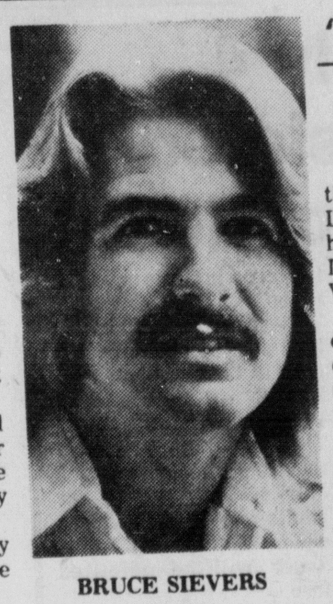
While initial investigations into the case concluded in the gonorrhea diagnosis, the initial child in the case was treated with penicillin. Subsequent tests on the four children for the disease by county health officials then proved negative.

The parents told trustees that "filthy bathrooms" at the school were responsible for the infection. They claimed the original doctor who treated the girls maintains the children were suffering from gonorrhea.

Supt. Charles Carpenter said his health staff was and continues to be in contact with the health department.

Board President Don Donnelly told the parents that "a full and complete investigation into the incident has been conducted by the district. He invited parents to meet with the district's professional nursing staff to discuss any additional problems they may have.

Carpenter told the audience of about 60 persons, "I in no way want to create the impression that all the restrooms in the Pomona school district are in grade A shape all the time. That simply would not be correct."



BRUCE SIEVERS

S.D. Library group hosts poet Sievers

The Friends of San Dimas Library will hold their annual meeting on June 29 at 7 p.m. in the community room of the library.

Poet Bruce Sievers will be the guest speaker. His program, "An American in love with his country," tells of Sievers' search for meaning in people and himself.

One of Sievers' poems, "America," has been entered into the Congressional Record.

The public is invited to attend the annual meeting. Admission is free and refreshments will be served. Further information is available by calling 599-6738.

In addition, movies will be shown every Friday from 3 to 5 p.m. These are free.

'Country Rainbows' is the theme

Miss La Verne pageant set for July 2

"Country Rainbows" is the theme for the 1977 Miss La Verne Pageant to be held July 2 at 7 p.m. in the Dailey Theater at La Verne College.

Six La Verne coeds are competing for the title currently held by Cal Poly student Cherlyn Wanamaker. They are:

—Lori Swank, who is interested in the performing arts and plans to attend Cal State Fullerton where she will be seeking a credential to teach asthmatic children.

—Scherrei Collins, who plans a career in kindergarten level education and is the reigning Miss Los Angeles County Liberty.

—Sheila Palmer, who enjoys outdoor sports and wants to attend Azusa Pacific College and major in nursing.

—Linda Witherspoon, who is involved in the musical program at her church and wants to become a real estate agent working for her father.

—Lori Blackwell, a member of the Young Americans who plans to attend California Institute of the Arts to study for a career in the entertainment field.

—Lisa Whitridge, who is a seamstress and will be attending Mt. San Antonio College majoring in photography and drafting.

Each contestant will be judged in an interview, in street dresses, swim suits, and evening gowns, and will present an "Achievement." Judges will be Helen Sauser, owner of Chancery Lane Book Shop; Cathy Madlin, teen instructor of Madlin's Modeling School, Palm Springs, and former Miss Bikini International; Anna Brooks, instructor at Studio Seven Modeling School in Covina; Bruce Van Note, musical director at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Pomona; and Michael D. Osborn, director of the Miss Orange County Pageant.

R.G. Harris, owner of Liberty Ford, La Verne, will be the master of ceremonies and guest vocalists will include Miss California Cindy Landis, former Miss La Verne Carole Young, and "His song," a musical group from La Habra.

The La Verne Businessmen's and Merchants Association is co-sponsoring the pageant with other La Verne industries, clubs and organizations.

Tastee Freeze in La Verne has hosted the contestants at a publicity luncheon. The contestants will also be attending a dinner hosted by Taco Kitchen in La Verne. Pioneer Chicken of San Dimas will be hosting the judges' and contestants' buffet dinner prior to the pageant. Crowns and tiaras are furnished by Chic Accessories in Montclair Plaza, jewelry by La Verne Jewelers, and swim suits by Sea Fashions, Inc. in Los Angeles.

The pageant is planned by Pageant Chairman La Verne N. Burns and former Miss La Verne, Robin Benedict Espinoza, pageant coordinator.

Retiring educators honored

Retiring educators from the Chaffey and Ontario-Montclair school districts were honored recently at the annual public schools week dinner at the Masonic Lodge in Ontario.

More than 200 educators and community members attended the dinner to honor the educators.

Each received a plaque, courtesy of the Masons, for their years of service.

Retirees include Agnes Brennan, teacher at Mission School; Esther Brewster, psychologist, Chaffey schools; Guy Elsea, teacher at Vernon Junior High School; Charles Fleming, teacher at Chaffey High; Ellen Law, Bon View teacher; Helen Lewis, Monte Vista teacher; Ferne Peck, Euclid School teacher; Arthur Peck, El Camino teacher; Hermoise Pettitt, Chaffey High teacher; Marvin Tate, Monte Vista School principal.

Also, Margaret Thrasher, Kingsley School teacher; and Carolyn Vanderploeg, Ontario High teacher.

Other retirees who were unable to attend the dinner include Marjorie Jennings, Montclair High; Kathryn Johnson, Montclair High; Marion McKissen, Chaffey High; Ruby Nicholson, Alta Loma High; Nell Paige, Ramona; Gladys Davis, Ontario High; Wayne Hanawalt, Vernon Junior High; and Katherine Uebelhart, Vernon Junior High.

Bus service changes will begin July 10

Bus service changes on Southern California Rapid Transit District bus routes affecting the valley will begin July 10.

"These service refinements are part of previously announced economy measures to meet budget limitations the district currently faces," said Charles Storing, RTD board member.

The district cost-cutting program's major targets are weekend and night service (after 7 p.m.) on lines where chronic low patronage has caused operational inefficiency. The changes include:

—Line 451 (Garey Avenue-Foothill Boulevard) and Line 453 (Indian Hill Boulevard-Reservoir Street). All night service will be discontinued. These lines serve Pomona and Claremont.

—Line 482 (Los Angeles-Hacienda Heights-Pomona via Colima Road). Night service on weekdays and Saturday will be reduced from the current 30 minutes to every hour. This serves Los Angeles, El Monte, South El Monte, Industry, Hacienda Heights, Rowland Heights, Diamond Bar and Pomona.

—Line 484 (Los Angeles-La Puente-Pomona-Ontario International Airport via Valley Boulevard). Night service between downtown Los Angeles and El Monte will change from its current 30 minutes to every hour. Line service between El Monte and Ontario International Airport remains unchanged.

—Line 486 (Los Angeles-Puente Hills Mall via Amar Road). Night service on weekdays and Saturday will be changed from the current 30 minutes to every hour. The line serves Los Angeles, El Monte, Baldwin Park, Valinda, West Covina, La Puente and Industry.

Big Brothers inviting men

Men who are 21 years and older are invited to join the Catholic Big Brothers on a volunteer basis.

Men are needed to spend a few hours each week developing a one-to-one relationship with a fatherless boy.

Information on the program is available by contacting Peter Adler, the area director, at (213) 266-3950.

Single mothers looking for a Catholic Big Brother for a son are also invited to contact Adler.

Pomona Library board appoints new librarian

Halbert Watson has been appointed Pomona City Librarian by the Pomona Public Library Board of Trustees.

An employe of the library for the past seven years, Watson succeeds Brad Simon, who left Pomona for a similar position in Newport Beach.

"I am very honored the library board showed such faith in me and it is my goal to maintain the library as one of the great assets of the city," said Watson.

Watson, who has been acting librarian since Simon's departure, joined the library in 1970 as public service director. In 1973 he was named assistant librarian.

Prior to coming to Pomona, Watson was a research analyst for Resource Management Corp. in Bethesda, Md., and head reference librarian for System Development Corp.

He is a graduate of UC Berkeley, and received his master's degree in library science from USC.

A resident of Pomona, Watson is active in the American Library Association, California Library Association, California Librarian Black Caucus, Pomona Municipal Management Club and the Pomona Breakfast Lions Club.

Reading club is under way

Pomona Public Library's annual summer reading club for youths is under way and will continue through the end of August.

Children of all ages may participate in the club, which has a theme of "You and Me and Our Heritage Tree."

Each week the program will feature new crafts, movies, special guests, storyhours, projects, and treats courtesy of McDonalds.

For information, persons may call 620-2017.

Publication of tax rolls to continue

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors has agreed to continue publishing tax assessment rolls in local newspapers this year, despite the contention of Chairman Ed Edelman that it was a "waste of money."

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said the community newspapers serve as "automatic watchdogs" by carrying the annual paid lists.

By studying the lists, owners could see how their properties are valued in comparison with other real estate in their area, he added.

Supervisor Peter Schabarum declared it was important for people to have a chance to compare their assessments with those of their neighbors and "a legal notice, as an alternative, is not sufficient to do that."

Under the present policy, county Assessor Philip Watson has been publishing reassessed areas in newspapers which serve those areas for the past 10 years.

Last year, the county paid $394,000 for publication of those lists.

However, Carmine Bellino, a special investigator hired to streamline the operation of Watson's office, last March recommended the county abandon the practice because "the costs did not warrant the service."

Tuesday, Supervisor Baxter Ward said that while he agreed with Bellino's recommendation, he believed this was not the right time to cut the service.

There are still "some clouds over Watson's assessment practices and until all doubt is dispelled, I am for publishing lists," he added.

Pomona council settles squabble in project bid

The Pomona City Council found itself in the middle of a squabble between the builder of a city project and one of his subcontractors this week.

The owner of Martin J. Jaska Inc., contractor for the construction of a city heliport and police helicopter hangar at Brackett Field in La Verne, appeared before the council to request its permission to substitute electrical subcontractors for the project.

Jaska told the council the change was needed to correct a clerical error in his company's bids for the project. He said he inadvertently submitted the bid of one subcontractor while listing the name of another.

The subcontractor erroneously listed, Walterscheid Electric Co., challenged the change. A representative of the company told the council it should remain as the subcontractor for the project.

Council members eventually decided to allow the change, as state law allows, on condition that Jaska provide all the legal expenses if a lawsuit results.

The project is already under construction and the electrical work is being performed by Hughes Electric, whose low bid was submitted to the city by Jaska.

In other business this week, the council appointed Councilman G. Stanton Selby as the city's representative on a Rapid Transit District advisory committee, which includes members from La Verne and Claremont.

The new committee will be looking at possible ways the three cities can achieve their goal of withdrawing from the Southern California Rapid Transit District.

In a related comment, Mayor Charles Bader asked that a presentation be prepared showing how the city would be served by the West Valley Transit Authority.

Film series on health scheduled

The film series, "Eat Right to Your Heart's Delight," provided by Blue Cross of Southern California, will be the basis for a special six-week nutrition education program at the Pomona Health Center.

The weekly classes, held Friday from 2 to 3 p.m., will show persons how to implement a healthy diet designed to lower calories.

Films and lectures will show how to make the best selections in the supermarket, how to store and prepare food to preserve flavor and nutrients, and at the same time encourage desirable food practices that will lower the risk of obesity and atherosclerotic heart disease.

The first class, Friday, will present, "Low Fat Meat Preparation."

Other films in the series, which won a 19th Annual International Film Festival award for 1976, are "Meatless Menus," "New Ways with Chicken," "Modifying Recipes to Control Saturated Fats and Calories," "Seafood Specialties," and "Meals in a Half Hour."

Persons may call Sheila Jelly, nutritionist at 623-6811 ext. 525.

Jones to be speaker at Pomona C of C installation dinner

Thomas V. Jones, chairman and chief executive officer of Northrop Corp., will be guest speaker at the Pomona Chamber of Commerce installation dinner June 29 at Cal Poly's Kellogg West. The cocktail hour will begin at 6:30 p.m. with dinner at 7:30.

Jones joined Northrop in 1953 as assistant chief engineer and was named senior vice president for development planning in 1958. He was elected president in 1959, chief executive officer in 1960 and chairman of the board in 1963. From 1963 to 1975, he served in all three capacities.

He served the Brazilian government from 1947 to 1951 as technical adviser to the Brazilian Air Ministry. Concurrently, he was a professor and department head in the Brazilian Institute of Technology.

He was a Douglas Aircraft Co. engineer during and after World War II.

Jones was born in Pomona July 21, 1920. He was graduated from Stanford University in 1942, magna cum laude, in engineering, and received an honorary doctor of laws degree from George Washington University in Washington, D.C., in 1967.

D.B. Women's Club to hold rabies clinic

The Diamond Bar Women's Club will sponsor a rabies vaccination clinic July 8 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Lorbeer Junior High School in Diamond Bar.

Co-sponsor will be the Southern California Veterinary Medical Association. The clinic will be coordinated by the Los Angeles County Department of Animal Control.

State, county and city laws require the immunization of all dogs over the age of four months.

The vaccination fee is $2 per dog.

Burrowers

The term "Terrier" was formerly applied to dogs who pursued small game into burrows.

Claremonters' son gains high honors in dentistry

Noel Sheldon Smith, son of Diana and Bowen Smith of Claremont, graduated from the School of Dentistry, College of Physicians and Surgeons, University of the Pacific, San Francisco, as class valedictorian.

At the graduation awards banquet, Dr. Smith was presented the California Academy of General Dentistry award as the most versatile student of the graduating class; the Arthur McDowell Scholarship Fund Award, for having achieved the highest grade Council of the Alpha Omega Fraternity award for having attained the highest grade point average; and the Tau Kappa Omega National Dental Honor Society Award for academic achievement.

On July 1, Dr. Smith will begin a one-year residency at the Veteran's Administration Hospital in San Francisco which is a post-doctoral educational, clinical and surgical program in conjunction with the UC Dental School.

Dr. Smith resides in Tiburon. A 1969 graduate of Claremont High School, he did his undergraduate studies at the U.C. Irvine, receiving a B.S. degree and graduating with honors in biological sciences in 1973. The following year, he attended UCLA Graduate School of Public Health.

Real estate taxes due June 30

Real estate taxes not paid on or before June 30, will carry additional penalties, warned H.B. Alvord, Los Angeles County tax collector.

He said all unpaid taxes will require the payment of a 6 per cent penalty and $3 per parcel costs for preparing the delinquent list.

Property on which delinquent taxes have not been paid by June 30 will be sold to the state. Additional penalties of 1 per cent per month and a redemption fee of $2 per parcel will then be added.

Alvord said notices of delinquent taxes have been mailed to property owners by his office. There are several thousand notices which have not reached owners because of incorrect or unknown addresses.

If a property owner has not paid his taxes, and a bill or delinquent notice has not been received, he should call the tax collector's office at (213) 974-2111 to obtain a bill.

Payments may be made by sending the tax stub and a check or money order to H.B. Alvord, 225 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, 90012.

Re-forestation program

600 trees replanted at Bonelli Park

A unique project to re-forest undeveloped areas of Los Angeles County regional parks continued this week with the planting of 600 smog-resistant trees in Bonelli Park, San Dimas.

One hundred elementary school children planted the trees as part of a new program called "The Growing Concern."

When fully mature, the fast-growing Aleppo and Canary Island pines will reach heights of 65 to 120 feet.

The plantings are supervised by the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation in association with the California Conservation Project, a non-profit organization dedicated to environmental education and re-forestation.

"The Growing Concern" is a community project sponsored by Atlantic Richfield Co. which expects to have some 4,000 trees planted in Los Angeles County regional parks by the end of the year. A similar project is planned for Orange County.

For the Bonelli Park program, elementary school children from the valley assisted. Each child received a tree to plant at home as a momento of the occasion.

Teachers to attend conventions

Members of the Associated Pomona Teachers will attend conventions this summer in Minneapolis, Minn.

Steven W. Enoch, president and Delbert Pfeifer, executive director, will attend the National Conference of Urban Education Associations in Minneapolis on June 28-30. Pfeifer will also attend the session sponsored by the National League of Professional Staff Associations on June 28-30.

Seven teachers will attend the representative assembly of the National Education Association as state and local delegates in Minneapolis from July 1-7.

They are:

Will Bollinger — teacher, Ganesha High; Bus Ellis — teacher, Simons Jr. High; Judd Ellson — teacher, Simons Jr. High; Steve Enoch — teacher, Armstrong Elementary; Jim Ervin — counselor, Marshall Jr. High; Susan Espinoza — teacher, Simons Jr. High; Dorothy Goldsmith — librarian, Marshall Jr. High; and Ada Jeppesen — teacher, Pomona High.

The services, programs and policy positions for the National Education Association for 1977-78 school year will be the major topics under consideration in Minneapolis. Pomona will be represented by more delegates than any other city in the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys.

NOSTALGIA — Franz Mittermeier of Talheim in upper Bavaria may cause a feeling of nostalgia in his neighbors as he cultivates his field with a horse-drawn sowing machine such as his ancestors used 50 years ago. He's one of the few West German farmers who still use oat-burning power plants on their farm equipment.

Pounding pavement still one of best ways to land summer job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There are plenty of summer jobs out there looking for students, says Dick Peterson, who runs one of the state's biggest youth employment programs. Here are some of his tips on how to find an opening, charm the interviewer and keep the job once you've got it.

Peterson is coordinator of Youth Opportunities Unlimited, a joint effort of the Los Angeles Greater Unified School District and the Greater Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce. YOU channels jobs from employers to student counselors, known these days as "work experience coordinators," in local high schools.

Most California school districts have similar programs throughout the summer months, and job coordination services are also available through the state's Employment Development Department. The phone number of your local EDD office is listed under "State of California" in the White Pages. Peterson says, however, that one of the best bets is the old pounding the pavement routine.

"Go to companies, dress appropriately, and fill out a lot of applications," he advises. "Many of the fast-food companies have continual hiring programs, as do many of the amusement parks. Talk to friends, neighbors and relatives who may know of a position open."

Peterson offers these "Do's and Don't" for student job seekers:

—Get a sample application form, fill it out at home and take it with you to job interviews. That way you'll have the dates of your elementary, junior high and high school graduations and the names and addresses of your references ready to be copied onto the company's form.

—If you're applying directly to a company, find out something about the firm and its product. Check out what kind of clothes the employes wear and dress accordingly. Go alone — not with your friends — and find out ahead of time exactly where you're going and the name of the person you should see.

—Manners, poise and self-confidence are the key things to remember in the actual interview, but don't turn them on just for that. If you behave badly while you're waiting, you may not be able to make it up in the interview. If the personnel officer asks what you can do, don't say "anything." You should know your skills and abilities before you apply.

—You should be 16, and you must have a Social Security number and a work permit in order for an employer to hire you. Your high school can supply you with the Social Security application form.

Uplanders fattening falcon(s)

Bird swoops down for food out of hands

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

A young falcon in Upland has his fat and his freedom, too.

Mrs. Ann Ascher, 2233 Palm Way, and her young neighbor, Peter Lassalette, 2225 Palm Way, have been adopted by one — or possibly two — striking birds with rose-pink and blue-gray feathers.

"We assumed for a long time that it was just one bird that came down to be fed," Mrs. Ascher reported. "But now, we think it may be a female and male which are almost identical in coloring and size.

"The falcon was first spotted about a year ago, just after we moved into this new neighborhood," adds Mrs. Ascher.

At first, Mrs. Ascher tossed bread, cheese or other tidbits into the air. The bird would sweep down and grab the food and fly onto the garage roof to enjoy his snack.

It was a butcher who told the Upland woman that falcons love fat. He gave her some to try.

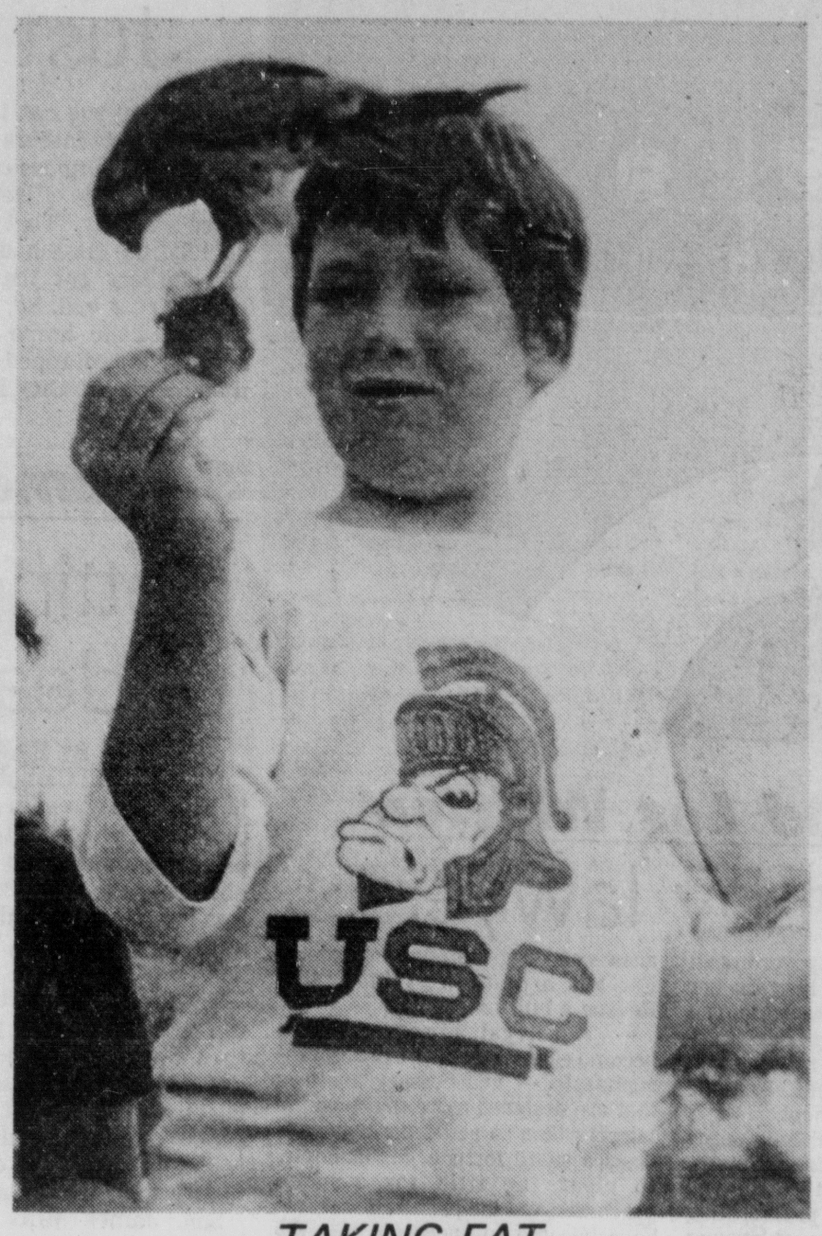
Sure enough, the falcon wanted the fat so much that he would land on her hand and pull the food from her fingers.

"Now, the falcon sits on the rooftops or telephone wires and watches for someone with food. I whistle, and he sweeps down to sit on my hand.

"Our feathered friend (or friends) has a very impatient nature," adds Mrs. Ascher. "If we don't come out of the house when he expect us, he comes down and hits against the Windows."

At first, only the Aschers' windows were brushed by the bird, but now that Peter has taken up feeding the falcon, windows at his home have been hit.

"We've photographed the bird several times and really love him, but have not given him a name. Maybe we will consider a pet name, but a falcon represents freedom, so maybe a name would be too civilized."



TAKING FAT

Peter Lassalette, 2225 Palm Way, Upland, feeds fat to a young falcon who has learned to attract attention by brushing against two windows of two Upland homes.

MSAC board freezes salaries of teachers, classified employes

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Trustees at Mt. San Antonio College in an unexpected action Wednesday night froze the salary structure for 700 full-time teachers and classified employes at the present levels.

The board also moved ahead with implementation of an instructional program that will give the trustees more control over the faculty an as well as over what is taught at the college.

The two moves apparently were made in response to unfair labor charges filed by the Faculty Association with the Educational Employment Relations Board (EERB) nearly three weeks ago.

Wednesday's action means there will be no pay raises on July 1 to start the new fiscal year. Whether the raises will come forth later depends on resumption of contract negotiations which have come to an impasse as of now.

There was an indication that the trustees' position on the salaries may change later. They approved pay raises for management and confidential employes amounting, according to a college official, to an average of about 6 per cent.

As for the instructional program, the board approved implementation starting Sept. 1 over the objection of the teachers.

Carter Doran, president of the faculty senate, asked the trustees to continue studying the proposal and to set up a new committee that would give the trustees feedback. But he got no place.

"I don't want any more committees working on this," board member William Temple declared. "We've had committees consider this for five years now. I see no reason for any more delays."

Then the board approved a management audit for the college — including the new instructional program that would merge the present department system into divisions — starting in the fall.

It was a highly charged meeting with the teachers asking for concessions and the board staying aloof — a complete change over past years.

An indication of the extent of the rift came when Pat Perez, president of the faculty, asked for a copy of the contract between the board and its consultant, John Wagner. Trustees instructed the administration to charge for copying the four-page public document.

Earlier in the evening, the board approved a $25,914,273 tentative budget, a reduction of $56,000 over last year. But last year's budget included pay raises for the teachers.

James Simpson, vice president in charge of business services, said a pay raise would necessitate either a drain on the district's $3 million surplus or an increase in the current tax rate of $.7073 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Judges hope to get aid from Assembly on fight for more jurists

The fight of the legal profession to get more judges for the Los Angeles County Superior Court apparently is far from over.

Undaunted by the refusal of the county Board of Supervisors to support the addition of 34 more judges, the jurists have now gone to the state Assembly for help — and there is a good chance that they'll get it.

An emergency bill introduced by Los Angeles Assemblyman Art Torres which offers the county $2 million in state aid to add any number of judges up to 34 was narrowly defeated Tuesday.

Approval fell just two votes short of a two-thirds majority needed to carry the emergency measure.

But Torres said he will try again today or Friday to push the bill through, even though the majority of the county supervisors has already turned the offer down.

If the measure passes, it will then go before the state Senate for consideration.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, whose vote turned the tide against more judges, says he is "surprised" at the action taken first by the Ways and Means Committee and then by the Assembly.

"It is an unusual move, to say the least, to approve judges which the Board of Supervisors doesn't want," he declared. "The legislature's policy has always been to subsidize more judges only at the request of either the Grand Jury or the supervisors."

Hahn said the board refused the judges' request by a 3-2 margin last week for two reasons: It was too expensive, and it failed to guarantee "sorely needed" court reforms.

The supervisor claimed that even though the state would pay the salaries of the judges, the support staff — clerks, bailiffs, court reporters, district attorneys and public defenders — would cost the county more than $4 million.

Moreover, Hahn is upset because the judges declined to join him in supporting a merger of the Municipal and Superior courts into one system.

As a result of that refusal, the supervisors appealed to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to lead the fight to reorganize the courts.

Hahn was joined by supervisors Peter Schabarum and Baxter Ward in calling for a constitutional amendment to put the merger proposal on the June, 1978 ballot.

They said the merger would save $50 million a year in court costs throughout the state.

Right now, there are 171 Superior Court judges in Los Angeles County, including eight in Pomona. Court officials said if the 34 judges are approved, Pomona will get one or two more.

William Hogoboom, presiding judge of the Superior Court, said the judges are opposed to a merger with the Municipal Court because their system is different and the merger would not work.

He pointed out that while the county has one Superior Court system, there are 27 Municipal Court districts throughout the county, and before any merger could be considered those districts would have to be consolidated into one system.

Meanwhile, Samuel Shore, president of the Los Angeles Trial Lawyers Association, launched a bitter attack against Hahn for refusing to support the bid for the additional judges.

He charged that Hahn as well as Schabarum and Ward have "denied justice to the people" by their action.

He accused Hahn of attempting to make the court system "a political tool in his manipulation of the courts to serve personal interests."

Shore said litigants already have to wait three years for civil trials. Without additional judges, he warned, the civil courts may soon have to shut down.

Pomonan will receive Eagle award today

Jerry Nicholas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald G. Nicholas of Pomona, will receive his Eagle Scout Award during court of honor ceremonies today at the Pomona First Baptist Church.

Nicholas, a June graduate of Lutheran High School, La Verne, is a member of Boy Scout Troop 101, sponsored by the First Baptist Church of Pomona. Bob Rose is his scoutmaster.

For his Eagle project, Nicholas reseeded a burned area in Bonelli Regional Park, and planted walnut and oak trees.

He is a football letterman. His scout service has included patrol leader, assistant patrol leader and senior patrol leader. He attended the 13th Buckskin Conference in 1973.

He was an honor student in high school.

Citizen group speaks up against Expo 81 in area

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

"We have no money. We have no consultants. We do have an understandable desire to save the communities where we live from unwanted exploitation."

Thus Louise French, spokesman for the Citizens Against Expo 81, explained the group's goal and function to Ontario City Council members late Tuesday night. Mrs. French spoke at nearly midnight and received applause from the 20 plus supporters in the audience; and a gavel pounding for silence from Mayor Paul Treadway.

The anti-Expo 81 remarks were received reluctantly by council members. Treadway, in whispered conversations with other council members and administrators, attempted to have the item removed from the agenda when Expo 81 Corp. representatives didn't show as expected. Councilwoman Faye Dastrup pushed the issue of Expo and finally won consensus to allow the item to remain.

Irene Rice of Ontario, a vocal opponent to the international fair, first approached the podium. Treadway told her "There is no business to be handled by the City Council this evening" regarding Expo 81. Nonetheless, Mrs. Rice offered a few comments before turning the microphone over to Mrs. French.

The Upland woman pointed out several "notable misgivings" shared by members of the Citizens Against Expo 81 who lived primarily between the La Verne-San Dimas and Riverside-San Bernardino areas. Questioning the "advisability" of Expo 81, she mentioned such concerns as future land use, management and growth, economic and business climate, impact on air and water resources and financial requirements to be imposed on taxpayers.

She cited a range of services — police, fire, paramedic, camping facilities at Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park, street, planning — that would have to be provided the exposition from the public tax rolls. Mrs. French charged that "financiers from New York and concessionaries" would enjoy the profits, not valley residents.

"With so many already greatly needed projects in Ontario, how can we divert funds to these costly additional expenditures?" Mrs. French asked.

Jerry Clemans, Expo 81 Corp. public relations director, explained that the Expo promoters did not attend the council session as scheduled because "we had no reason to be there."

Clemans said the new financial proposal for a tax exempt revenue bond does not alter the agreement Expo 81 currently has with the city and Ontario Motor Speedway nonprofit board.

"There's nothing at this point that we're asking the city to change. We're really not asking the City Council to vote on anything and not asking that the contract be changed at this time.

"We'll appear before the council and further explain it (the financial proposal) after (City Atty.) Sam Crowe and Bear, Stearns and Co. attorneys reach agreement. That's the key to the thing," Clemans added.

The Citizens Against Expo 81 includes members of the Claremont League of Women Voters, United Democrats of Pomona Valley, Clean Air Now, the Sierra Club and other organizations and private individuals.

In her closing remarks, Mrs. French stated that the group is conducting research on and circulating petitions against the exposition. Both will be presented to the council "in due time," she said.

Chino will celebrate anniversary

The City of Chino will celebrate its 90th anniversary this July.

As part of the planned recognition of the historic event, the Chino Branch Library and the Chino Valley Historical Society will present a series of local history programs concerning the Chino Valley.

The programs will span the historical period of Chino's development starting in the 1700s and continuing through the actual development as a city in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Further information may be obtained by calling 628-1604.

Pomona man shot in hand

A young Pomona man was wounded in one hand Tuesday night in an unexplained shooting incident near Sharkie Park, Main Street and Grand Avenue, police reported.

The victim, 21, went to Pomona Valley Community Hospital but declined treatment, authorities said. They said he supplied them with no information about the incident.

No injuries or damage in 4.7 Bay Area jolt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — No serious injuries or major damages were reported after a "moderate" earthquake shook the San Francisco Bay Area.

The earthquake was recorded just after 7:30 p.m. PDT Monday.

University of California seismologist Bruce Bolt termed the quake "moderate" and said it was centered six miles east of Livermore, a city about 40 miles east of Oakland. Bolt's preliminary figures put the quake's magnitude at 4.7 on the Richter scale.

The National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., measured the quake at 4.9.

Earthquakes of that magnitude are capable of causing damage, according to seismologists.

The Alameda County sheriff's office said no reports of injuries or damages had been received from the Livermore area.

Bonita wage dispute unchanged

Bonita school board members and district teachers apparently are no closer to a settlement of their wage dispute, despite release of a factfinding report on salaries Wednesday night.

The chairman of the factfinding panel essentially agreed with the district's position that only a small (1 or 2 per cent) salary raise could be given for 1976-77 school year, with a larger raise for 1977-78.

Robert M. Leventhal, the panel chairman, told the school board that $50,000 was available for raises this year, and $250,000 for 1977-78.

He recommended a 5 per cent raise, retroactive to May 1, 1977. This would amount to the same as a 1 per cent boost for 1976-77 and 4 per cent for 1977-78, according to Supt. James Johnson.

However, the factfinding report is not binding on the teachers or the district, and teachers have strongly disagreed with it.

Teachers had been asking for a 6.8 per cent boost for 1976-77, retroactive to July Sept. 1, 1976. They also wanted a 5.3 per cent raise for next year, but the district had offered only 2 per cent for 1976-77 and had not discussed the following year.

Johnson said the factfinding report "proves we don't have the money" for the raises the teachers requested.

However, the factfinder who represented teachers on the panel, Thomas L. Brown, said he "respectfully dissents with the chairman's findings in virtually every respect.

"Certainly, the chairman and the board's factfinder knows the report is totally unacceptable to the teachers . . ."

Judging from Brown's response, Johnson said he expects the salary dispute to continue.

A factfinding panel is one of the processes in negotiations determined by the state's Educational Employment Relations Board (EERB) when the two parties fail to reach agreement. The panel decides whether there is money available for increases.

Sorry record on noise

One afternoon a week or so ago, a government secretary sat in her Washington office typing letters, answering the phones and chatting with a visitor. In the space of an hour, three trains rolled past her window, drowning all conversation.

"Doesn't that racket drive you crazy?" her visitor asked.

"Not really," the secretary replied. "I don't even hear it anymore."

Her response, while perfectly typical for someone regularly subjected to intense but intermittent noise, was slightly ironic. The secretary works for a House subcommittee which has just concluded that the government's program to combat noise pollution is essentially a flop.

It has been five years since Congress enacted the Noise Control Act of 1972, and the country is as noisy as ever.

Trains, buses, trucks, airplanes, construction equipment, kitchen gadgets, electric tools, lawn mowers and other types of machinery assault our ears and fray our nerves.

An estimated 16 million Americans suffer from some degree of hearing loss directly attributable to noise. Another 13 million live in urban areas where the average noise level is intense enough to be rated as harmful to their health, according to government reports, and nearly half of our entire population — an estimated 100 million people — is subjected to average noise levels the government defines as annoying.

Most of us, like the congressional secretary, tend to adopt a "grin and bear it" attitude to noise, accepting it as an irritating but necessary price of modern technology.

But Congress decided five years ago that the cacophony could and should be reduced, and it gave the Environmental Protection Agency primary responsibility for doing so.

The agency's response has been less than dazzling, according to both a recent report by the General Accounting Office, the watchdog arm of Congress, and testimony at a hearing by a House Commerce subcommittee chaired by Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-Pa.

In five years, EPA has identified only 11 products as major noise sources and has issued final regulations for just two: newly manufactured portable air compressors and medium- and heavy-duty trucks.

The agency has also issued regulations for interstate motor carriers and for interstate railroads, but the latter will have little immediate impact since it applies only to new locomotives — not existing ones.

Airplane noise, an intense irritant to millions of people who live near airports, continues virtually unabated while EPA and the Federal Aviation Administration battle over jurisdictional questions.

And along with all this, the federal government's spending for noise research has actually decreased over the past five years.

Not surprisingly, the government's sorry track record on muffling the noise in our technological society has angered Rooney and members of his subcommittee, who are reviewing the program's funding authorization.

Ordinarily, a few stinging press releases would be the only result of such congressional ire. But Rooney has seized upon a considerably more effective means of spurring EPA to greater efforts: He plans to withhold any additional funding for the noise control program until the agency shapes up.

If he can persuade the rest of Congress to go along, he will in effect put EPA on "probation" for a year, at its existing funding level, while closely monitoring the agency's noise pollution control program.

If a few more congressional committees would be equally hard-nosed in reviewing the effectiveness of programs Congress has enacted over the years, who knows what might result? We might even get a government that works.

Society overrun by lawyers

WASHINGTON — Not long ago, the Shah of Iran spoke to Chief Justice Warren Burger about modernizing the judicial processes in his country. Apologetically, the Shah explained that Iran's system of justice was primitive. In the villages, he said, disputes were resolved by councils of elders. There were no courts, no lawyers, no judicial review.

The Chief Justice confided afterward that he would like to send a legal team to Iran to investigate village justice. The American experts, he suggested, might learn something.

Burger has become increasingly dismayed with the complex legal system in the United States. The lawyers are entangling the populace in litigation, bogging down the courts and substituting legal manipulation for justice.

"The harsh truth," he warned the American Bar Association last month, "is that . . . we may well be on our way to a society overrun by hordes of lawyers, hungry as locusts, and brigades of judges in numbers never before contemplated."

Across the land, lawyers lurk behind the bushes waiting to pounce upon the passers-by, drag them into court and drain them of their assets. Most lawsuits benefit only the lawyers, who collect fat fees and leave both parties worse off.

Attorneys also dominate the government. The founding fathers intended that Congress, for example, should be representative of the people. But the lawyers have taken it over; they hold more than 300 of the 535 seats.

Attorneys also populate the various federal agencies, boards, commissions, committees and councils. Both in and out of government, Washington has more lawyers per capita than any city in the world. The lawyers in government produce complex legislation and regulations, which create business for the lawyers out of government.

Today, the confused citizen needs an attorney to make out a tax return, sell a home, settle an estate and protect him from the proliferating pitfalls that the government lawyers produce. Here are our observations:

— The nation is overrun with lawyers who, lured by the scent of the green, congregate where the big money is. They thrive, for example, on corporate law. Indeed, many a corporate president began as the general counsel. Yet the nation's 29 million poor are suffering from a lawyer shortage. An estimated 85 per cent of their legal needs are still unmet.

— All too often, the legal decision goes to the client with the most money. He can outmaneuver and outlast his poorer opponent in the courts. It is not uncommon, corporate attorneys tell us, for complex cases to drag on for more than a decade. The client who has to count his money may not survive the legal skirmishing. The poor often cannot afford to seek redress of grievances for even the most basic injustices.

— Most lawyers price themselves out of the average American's range. Their hourly rates start around $35, quickly reach $100 and continue on up into the stratosphere. Once the eminent Washington attorney, Clark Clifford, made a rare appearance on Capitol Hill for Charles Revson, the head of Revlon cosmetics. Clifford coached his client carefully, then sat silently at his side while Revson answered congressmen's questions. For this appearance, Clifford sent Revson a bill for $25,000.

— The legal processes have become encumbered with procedural rigmarole — unnecessary routines that are designed more to enrich the lawyers than to serve the public. It costs a small fortune, for example, to clear the title for a home purchase. And the probate processes have become so encrusted that the attorneys often wind up with a greater share of an inheritance than the heirs.

— Attorneys are supposed to be society's peacemakers and problem solvers. Too many devote themselves to the opposite; they are troublemakers who create problems. They operate on the theory, apparently, that the more trouble they can stir up, the more law business there will be. The wise judge Learned Hand once remarked: "I must say that as a litigant I should dread a lawsuit beyond almost anything else short of sickness and death."

— Most lawyers, in the opinion of the judges who watch them in action, are incompetent. Chief Justice Burger has noted: "Many judges in general jurisdiction trial courts have stated to me that fewer than 25 per cent of the lawyers appearing before them are genuinely qualified."

— Some 28,000 young graduates will pour out of the nation's law schools this year. This is nearly double the number who graduated 10 years ago. With few exceptions, they are licensed, according to Burger, "without the slightest inquiry into their capacity to perform the practical functions of a counselor or an advocate."

Young, sophisticated superfly

Andy Young is no longer an enigma.

It took a while for us to recognize what he was up to.

At first it appeared to make no sense for a diplomat to be moving about Africa in the undiplomatic role of a gadfly.

The very idea that the chief of the United States' U.N. delegation should be going around Africa fanning smouldering passions into flame — it didn't seem to make sense.

It does now.

Our U.N. Ambassador Andy Young, in the name of "human rights," told black Africans to boycott white merchants; called the British "chicken" on racial matters; implied black American troops would refuse to fight on the side of South African whites.

All this table pounding made no difference whatever to the principals involved.

Africans cannot boycott white merchants any more than they have.

Britain demanded and got a fine-print apology.

There never was any question about our military involvement in South Africa.

Then why all the inflammatory rhetoric?

We all tend to be reassured when any policy-making national official of our country sounds off in behalf of something in which we believe.

This is no less true of blacks in the United States.

When they see in headlines a black official telling off whites, they are reassured that their interests are receiving official attention.

It is an artful political device for taking the heat off the homefront.

Andy Young has utterly defanged stateside agitators for black rights.

The Abernathys and the Browns and the Jacksons have been effectively gelded by this Administration superstar focusing all black-white race resentment "elsewhere."

"Human rights" is the best of all issues with which to unify the electorate. It cannot offend. It mollifies the masses.

President Carter, subscribing entirely to the declamations of Andy Young, predicts that Young will one day be "a Third World hero."

I suggest the parallel purpose is to create a homefront hero whose protestations tend to shush dissent.

How long has it been since you've heard of an race-related picketing or other demonstrating in the United States?

As governor of Georgia, Jimmy Carter was similarly skillful — sacrificing home-state support on the race issue in order to build the only kind of a national reputation that could win national office. Andy Young, then and now, has helped with elegance and eloquence to establish and sustain that image.

This may be the first-ever Administration in our nation which has managed to neuter domestic race restiveness by — in effect — moving the race problems to Africa.

Think on these things

Sometimes we are forced to think for ourselves — and that's not at all bad. As much as we would like to depend on other people and trust in their guidance and wisdom, the responsibility is still ours.

Most of us like the thought that we have someone on whom we can rely without hesitation. It's comforting to know we're not alone — but dangerous to lose our ability to think and cope. It is something of an art to keep one's mind clear and sharp, and that is impossible without exercising it regularly. Too much dependency robs us of gifts that need to be polished by frequent use.

Surely there's a middle ground where avid thought is highly useful without having to do it just to survive.

Our man in Washington

Carter and Congress not in tune

By TERRY WADE
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter is not pleased with Congress and the feeling is mutual. Congress is losing confidence in the President and, interestingly, Democrats are leading the retreat.

Democrats, who only a few weeks ago were giddy with the potential of the situation, now lament dealing with the President of their own party. It was an uneasy relationship from day one, but Carter was given the benefit of the doubt — after all, he was a fellow Democrat.

Carter didn't give Congress the same break. An anti-Washington candidate, he continued to reflect distrust that has apparently resulted in poor White House-Capitol Hill communications. The resulting missed signals and misunderstandings are a root cause for the waning confidence Congress has in the President.

The communications problem is accentuated by the early mistrust and an increasing realization that the new Congress is different than the Congresses of the pre-Watergate era. What was once perceived as a natural combativeness between a Democratic Congress and a Republican president is now seen between the same Congress and a Democratic president.

Congress is no longer content with simply disposing of presidential proposals. Policy making is more exciting and the legislative body is interested in a little of that action. So, all of these things have conspired to cause Mr. Carter problems.

There is little wonder he is displeased. None of his major initiatives have been implemented. In fact, most of his proposals have been ignored or gutted by Congress and the prospects for future legislation look bleak.

Congress, on the other hand, also has a legitimate complaint. This man (President Carter), whom they originally tried to work with, has left them in the lurch on such issues as the tax rebate and subsidized home insulation. In other cases, Carter has offered major legislation without so much as a how-do-you-do to Congress.

Both sides are beginning to re-evaluate their positions, but the White House will have to make the major concessions. Congress is certain it is right. What the President must do, if his administration is to be effective, is very simple. He must learn that the people on Capitol Hill are important to him. If he learns that lesson, then his administration will be worthwhile.

If he does not learn to bend before he is forced to, the Republicans will have a good shot at a lot of House seats in 1978 and at Carter's job two years later.

Just in jest

Who says you can't fight City Hall? — Time and again the city fathers of Alameda, Calif., had failed to heed the impassioned arguments and protestations of an irate citizen. But where there's a weapon there's a way. That frustrated individual finally decided the time had come to make certain those city fathers got the message straight from the horse's rear end. So, to convince them they should show a little horse sense instead of just horse around, he dumped five cubic yards of horse manure on the City Hall steps.

Getting rid of dead wood

By EARL G. WATERS

Did Sen. Bill Campbell get his head under the tent in his efforts to gain adoption by the legislature of the "sunset" concept in state government? The surprise approval of SB 5 by the Senate, which would eliminate the Department of Insurance by 1981 unless it can convince the legislature that it performs necessary functions, would make it seem that he has.

The idea of "sunset" legislation was presented to the legislature two years ago by Sen. Campbell, then a member of the Assembly. It started a panic among bureaucrats and his bill failed in committee. Elected to the Senate last year, Campbell promptly renewed the proposal to automatically eliminate all regulatory agencies of government which failed to justify their continuance each five years.

Sen. James Mills countered with a resolution ordering Legislative Analyst Alan Post to study the idea and report back next year. Campbell, a conservative Republican, viewed that as an effort to head off "sunset" legislation. He may have been right, for Post is on record against the idea, saying he thinks sunsetting would "exacerbate" the problem rather than help.

And, although Campbell hasn't given up on his bill (SB 62), a dark horse in the form of SB 5, authored by liberal Democrat Omer Rains, is the measure which gained Senate approval. It merely singles out the Insurance Commissioner for a "pilot test" of the sunset concept. Since Campbell fully supported Rains' bill, his idea can be said to be taking hold.

That the time has come for cutbacks in government regulatory programs is obvious as the public complaints of too much government grow louder across the nation and even President Carter found it a convincing argument in his campaign last year.

Colorado, the first state to adopt sunset laws, now has tangible results with four of its state agencies recently abolished. Fourteen other states have enacted similar legislation and a sunset proposal is before Congress.

Rains' selection of the Insurance Commissioner as a pilot may not be the best test if elimination of an agency is the sole goal of sunset for it can hardly be contended that insurance companies shouldn't be regulated by the state. But Rains saw it as an opportunity to compel an agency which he feels is not doing an adequate job to undergo a complete accounting to the legislature. In this instance the aim of sunset is to make an agency "shape up."

Perhaps Campbell should narrow his proposal down also and single out a half dozen agencies which everyone knows serve no real purpose, using them as "pilot tests" to show that sunsetting will work to eliminate "dead wood" in government.

For despite the skepticism of Post and others who feel the legislature already has the power and the tools to review questionable state programs, the beauty of "sunset" is that the legislature must go on record with a majority vote to permit continuance of each agency. As it stands, without sunset laws, a majority must vote "aye" to eliminate any agency.

As everyone knows, including the bureaucrats who will fight sunset laws to the bitter end, it is 10 times easier to get "no" votes on any issue than it is to get a majority of "aye" votes. That has been the chief reason for the inability of the lawmakers to trim government up to this point. If sunset can work in nearly one-third of the states of the nation, it deserves a try in California.

Ann Landers

I feel like a clumsy ox

Dear Ann Landers: My problem in three words — I'm a klutz. The embarrassment and shame I've suffered from spilling things, breaking things, dropping things, stumbling, falling — is more than I can take.

Everthing I do screams "KLUTZ." When I shuffle cards, serve a glass of water, walk into a room, I feel like a clumsy ox — inept and left-footed.

Life would be a breeze instead of a hurricane if I were more graceful — or at least a little better coordinated. Please don't send me to ballet school, just tell me how to develop poise at home. — Klutzy Carol (Age 19)

Dear Carol: Most klutziness is the result of (a) hurrying, (b) being absent-minded — no concentration on what one is doing.

Slow down and make a conscious effort to do every small thing as gracefully as possible. You're bound to see an improvement, Lovey.

P.S. Can it be that you are subconsciously klutzing it up a little to call attention to yourself? Some people would rather be laughed at than ignored. Think of these things.

Dear Ann Landers: A continuing family problem prompts my first letter to your column, regarding the writer from Philadelphia who keeps sending gifts and checks and gets no thanks or acknowledgments from nieces and nephews.

Out of a family of four children we have a 12-year-old boy (I can sit down and guide him through the thank you's, no problem), an 18-year-old girl who responds warmly, and promptly, without prodding, a 22-year-old who responds warmly, but not too promptly, and a 20-year-old son who stubbornly refuses to write a thank-you note, no matter how I beg or plead and try to shame him into it.

When I see a relative who has sent a gift to this impossible boy I make some feeble attempt to apologize. It goes against my grain but I feel I must say something.

If you have a solution to the problem I would love to hear it. In the meantime, I resent the accusation that I did not raise him properly. He knows what to do. He just won't do it. — Not Guilty In Endwell, N.Y.

Dear Not Guilty: Can it be that your 20-year-old clod refuses to acknowledge gifts because he likes to bug you?

I suggest the following: When a gift for him arrives, phone the sender — tell him or her it was a lovely, thoughtful gesture.

Also say, "Unfortunately the young man is very remiss when it comes to acknowledging gifts and this, of course, distresses me. Please don't send him another gift ever again, if he fails to say thank you for this one. I, as his mother, would consider it a great favor."

Dear Ann Landers: A friend of mine is married to the youngest son of a large family. Her husband, Ferdinand, has five brothers — all older. Their wives seem to produce nothing but girls. At last count Ferdinand and Cheryl had 17 nieces.

Cheryl became pregnant recently. She is determined to have a boy and has been eating herbs and root food (carrots, turnips and beets) like mad. Her grandmother says this will produce a male child. True or false. — Big Q

Dear Q: The sex of a child is determined at the moment of conception. Whatever she is carrying has already been decided.

Patrick Henry's will to widow

Our Love and War man is disturbed by the fact that the American orator Patrick Henry became more famous than the American statesman Gouverneur Morris. In Henry's last will and testament, he provided most generously for his widow Dorothea, but only on the condition that she never remarry. In Morris' last will and testament, he provided most generously for his widow Ann, but with the proviso that her income would be doubled should she decide to remarry. "Clearly, Morris was a larger figure than Henry," says our L. and W. man.

Question arises as to which uses the most hot water, a clothes washer, an automatic dishwasher or a tub bath. No doubt about it, the clothes washer. It takes between 30 and 40 gallons. Figure 10 to 16 gallons for the dishwasher. And Maybe 25 gallons for the bath.

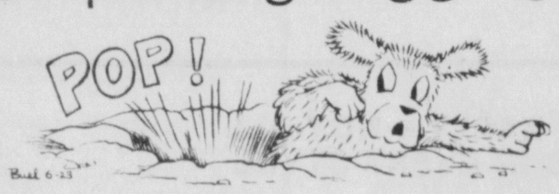
Dr. Miller

Balloon popping stops dog digging



DEAR DR. MILLER: Since your constant harping through the column about keeping your dog confined had a lot to do with our decision to keep Buddy in the backyard, well, our problem is partly your responsibility, so we feel justified in asking for help. Buddy was good at first in the backyard, but now he's discovered the "joys" of digging to China. He's dug this huge hole. We filled it up several times, and he opened it up again. The only way we could stop him was to lay heavy planks over it, and now he's in the process of digging a brand new hole. Our neighbors said they stopped their dog by filling the hole with water, and holding the dog's face in it. Well, we just couldn't do that to our Buddy. There's got to be a better way. Doesn't there? Help! — C.W.

DEAR C.W.: I'd consider blown-up balloons a better way for Buddy. Simply place a blown-up balloon in the hole, and when he starts digging, he'll probably pop it, then replace it with a second. It's unlikely Buddy would be back for a third. Consider, however, that in denying him the joys of his underground excursions, it behooves you to provide him with another outlet for his energy. Fetching a ball in the backyard might be adequate, or it might take jogging on a leash. Whatever, it's always wise when one activity is blocked because it's undesirable, to try to provide a satisfactory substitute. Otherwise, the resourceful pet's likely to find a new source of amusement which may be even worse, from your standpoint, than the last game.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Chinny, my nearly-adult male Siamese, is a wool eater. He's chewed up countless wool sweaters, a few socks and a blanket. My only consolation is it's summer. Still, if I can't cure him by winter, it's going to be a cold one for me. I've tried wool fat, gum massage, more attention, diet changes, and you name it — I've tried it. He still chews wool. I'm still trying. Any other suggestions? Please — V.P.

DEAR V.P.: Some wool chewers will switch allegiance from wool to sprouted grass. Additional exercise or distractions provided by another cat will do it for some. Frequent and somewhat intensive gum massage works occasionally. A cure more consistently effective is the addition of thyroid to the Siamese diet. Check with your own veterinarian to see if he'd approve the use of thyroid in Chinny's case.

Erma Bombeck

Doctor-sickee mediator

One of the chores that was never mentioned in my job description when I became a wife and mother was that of mediator between the Family Doctor and the Family Sickee.

You know how it goes. Your child comes in from play and says, "I don't feel well. My legs feel like they got little needles all over them, my head hurts real bad, I got a big pain right here on my side, and I can't see real well. Everything turns black and I'm dizzy and burning up and then I got this real chill and sometimes there's a ringing in my ears and . . ."

As you herd the child into bed, your blood turns to ice as you hurriedly call the doctor.

"Could you bring him to the office around 3:00?" he asks.

Every maternal hair on your neck stands up. "You are assuming that he will last until 3:00. I want you to come here!"

Sometimes my performance is so convincing a doctor will actually stop off on his way home. He enters the room of the Sickee.

At the sight of the doctor the kid starts to move about like a Japanese volleyball team. He springs into the air, falls on the mattress on his face, giggling and laughing, hiding behind the pillow, bring out his puppets, turning on the record player, dancing and singing into the doctor's stethoscope.

"Is this the child who is going to that big playroom in the sky?" he asks tiredly. Then turning to the child he asks, "Is there a pain here?"

The child falls down giggling.

"What about here?"

He shakes his head no until I think he will screw himself into the bed.

"A laxative should do it," says the doctor, closing the bag.

My husband is no better. After he relates all his symptoms to me, I relate them to the doctor and then report, "The doctor says he would like to meet you in the emergency ward of the hospital."

"That's ridiculous," he says. "I'm not in THAT much pain. What did you tell him?"

"I used your words, 'You're young. I want you to marry again.'"

"And for THAT he wanted me to come to the hospital?"

I have been put in the middle so many times that I am sometimes reluctant to call the doctor. The last time my son complained of a knee injury I put it aside for a day or so. When we finally got to the doctor he said, "Didn't the boy complain?"

"Actually, he did," I said, "but I thought I could pull it off as the final billing date ends the 30th."

I have seen the look he gave me on only one other occasion. It was when Gen. Yoshijiro Umeza tried to shake Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hand when Japan surrendered at the end of World War II.

Dr. Lamb

Aneurysm blowout danger

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have an inflated place in the aorta. One doctor's advice is to operate. Two others don't encourage it yet. What are the dangers?

I feel some discomfort on the inside of the left leg. I have been careful about pressing on the inflated aorta. It looks like by being careful I could manage if there wouldn't be another reason to operate. I would appreciate your comment.

DEAR READER — You are talking about an aneurysm of the large artery that goes down the middle of the body near the spine and supplies blood to most of the body. The dilitation is caused by a weakening of the elastic tissue that normally exists in this tube like structure. A good way to think of it is as if it were an inner tube.

That stretched, diseased aorta is about as safe as a stretched, weakened inner tube and the danger in both cases is that it will have a blow out. Unfortunately, rather than just having a flat tire if your aorta blows you are likely to hemmorrhage to death before you can get adequate medical help. This risk is so great and so unpredictable that most doctors today think that if there is no contra-indication that it is better to do the surgery. Incidentally, in skilled hands the surgery is fairly simple if the aneurysm is in the abdomen, as I presume from your letter yours is.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Haven't heard much about hair transplants for some time. How successful have they been? Can they be done when the man's hair is just thinning at the temples? Is the head bandaged after the transplant? Does the hair line look natural afterwards? Can one continue his daily work while this is being done?

DEAR READER — They are being done fairly regularly now. Most hair transplant procedures are the punch biopsy type. A small clump of hair follicles are removed from the side of the head where hair is abundant and transplanted or seeded in the bald areas where a new hair line is to be established.

Another procedure pioneered by Dr. Jose Juri in Buenos Aires is being done by a limited number of doctors in the United States. It is a three stage operation. A skin flap with hair is raised from the back side of the scalp. The flap is about one and a half inches wide and eight or nine inches long. The technique is similar to the skin graft techniques worked out in treating burn patients. The flap is raised, rotated and sewed into place along the new hair line in three stages. You must wait a week between each phase of the operation. It produces a thicker growth of hair than the punch biopsies. It is also more complicated.

You should expect to have bandages with either procedure. The exact management will vary with your surgeon. You could probably get the punch biopsy method done by any number of plastic surgeons in your area.

If you don't mind being seen with a bandaged head you could certainly go about your work with most of these procedures except the third stage of the flap transplant. That stage requires general anesthesia and it might be a number of days before you would want to be back at work.

Your skin has a lot to do with your appearance, for information about it send 50 cents for The Health Letter 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing with your request to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Astrographs

For Friday, June 24, 1977
Your Birthday, June 24, 1977

A departure from the norm that would bring about changes in your basic lifestyle is likely this year. The things you aim for will provide you with more fun and greater enjoyment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unless you tactfully handle those under your wing today, you'll get results opposite from what you hoped for. They can be guided, but not bullied. To find out more about yourself send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today may not go as well as it could. The reason is you'll do things to impress another, rather than follow the dictates of your conscience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Stay away from the high rollers today. You could spend beyond your means to keep up with the crowd.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Challenges tend to intimidate you today. You may back off out of fear. If you get into the action, you'll find they are only paper tigers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) One who expounds his ideas boldly and dramatically may give you an inferiority complex today. Analyzing his words will debunk the illusion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It would be unwise today to enter a joint venture where you're in the minority position. Unless the roles are equal, don't play.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Underestimating your opposition today could lead to undesirable results. Recognize the true caliber of those you joust with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's vitally important to maintain a positive attitude toward your work today. If you inflate the size of the task, your initiative will suffer.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Business matters should be treated realistically today. Don't feel that others are looking out for anything else but their own survival.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Make it a point to support your mate in front of others today, even though you don't agree. It'll save you from an argument later.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Rather than try to impose your ideas on coworkers today, hear them out. They may have thoughts that complement yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your purse could suffer today because you think only of gratifying immediate whims. If you spend foolishly, you'll later have buyer's remorse.

Opening lead — 2 ♣

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

South won the trump lead with the seven and counted winners. There were six sidesuit winners and if he could take seven trump tricks he would have his grand slam. It looked easy to him as long as he could ruff two diamonds in dummy.

So he cashed the ace and king of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, cashed dummy's ace and king of hearts, ruffed a heart, ruffed his last diamond, ruffed dummy's last heart, started to run his last three trumps and suddenly found that the hand had collapsed because West had started with four trumps.

A little extra thought at an early stage of the play would have saved the grand slam. The essence of any cross ruff-type hand is to cash your sidesuit winners before you start your cross ruff.

Correct technique would be for South to cash all the ace-kings as tricks two to seven. After that he could have cross ruffed losers in any order. At some stage of the proceedings West would have been forced to start using his trumps to ruff but South would simply overruff. West would never be able to score with one of them.

Ask the Jacobys

A Maryland reader wants to know the best way to play 9 8 7 6 opposite A K 10 4 to win four tricks.

The answer is to lead the nine and let it ride if not covered. If it is covered, win, go back to dummy, lead the eight and let it ride unless it's covered. This wins when both queen and jack are to the right of the ace-king.

Rabbi tells congregation: Your solemn duty to take to streets to protest Nazi march

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Rabbi Lawrence Montrose, a quiet man not noted as a political activist, has told all 640 families in his congregation that it is their "solemn duty" to take to the streets on July 4 to protest a march by American Nazis.

The rabbi said in a letter that he was seeking a peaceful gathering as a "show of strength" to demonstrate opposition to the march planned by a Nazi group in this Chicago suburb of 69,000 persons.

One Skokie resident, Erna Gans, whose parents and two brothers died in Hitler's concentration camps, said "it is the responsibility of the 7,000 survivors of the holocaust living in Skokie to prevent Nazis from marching here."

Harvey Schwartz, the village attorney, warns there is "a great probability" of violence if uniformed members of the National Socialist Party of America demonstrate as planned.

"We are soldiers, soldiers take risks," replied Nazi leader Frank Collin when told his march could spark violence. "The violence won't come from us. If there's violence it will show the Jews' true colors."

Collin, national coordinator of the National Socialist Congress, said "up to 100" party members from Illinois, California, Missouri, New Jersey, Nebraska, Ohio, Oklahoma and Texas will march in Skokie.

Rabbi Montrose, of the Skokie Central Traditional Congregation, said he realized that bringing together groups of Jews and Nazis held great potential for violence, but he said he felt a visible demonstration of opposition to Nazism was essential.

He said he decided to write to his congregation because "we know from the early 1930s that remaining silent isn't an effective weapon ... and because we must join the survivors of the holocaust in a visible demonstration that we will not allow a small group of fanatics to do in America what they did in Germany ..."

Skokie has adopted three ordinances designed to block the march, but the U.S. Supreme Court recently overturned an injunction which would have prevented it.

The American Civil Liberties Union, representing the Nazis, says the Constitution permits persons to demonstrate on behalf of their political beliefs, however odious they may be.

"I've never seen a clearer case of First Amendment protection than the Skokie case," said David Hamlin of the Chicago ACLU. He said the three ordinances should be reversed easily in court.

But Mrs. Gans said, "The courts will protect us. The courts have a duty to protect the people as well as the murderers. The First Amendment doesn't give anyone the right to tell me they want to kill me."

She said she has met with other holocaust survivors, rabbis and civic leaders, and "the overwhelming belief is that we must not be silent, we must oppose them publicly."

Several Jews said one explanation why so many holocaust survivors settled in Skokie was that they felt more comfortable living among other Jews in an area where synagogues and Jewish cultural institutions already existed at the end of World War II.

It was this large number of Jews that prompted the Nazis to bring their march to Skokie.

Vance will visit China in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will visit China August 22-26 in hopes of making progress toward normalized diplomatic relations between the two countries, the State Department said Wednesday.

In making the announcement, spokesman Hodding Carter refused to speculate on whether Vance expects his trip to result in establishment of diplomatic relations.

The only other stop Vance plans is a one-or two-day visit to Japan after his stay in China, Carter said.

The purpose of the China trip is to "continue our conversations in light of the Shanghai communique toward normalizing relations," he said.

Since the communique was signed in 1972, achievement of that goal has eluded the past three administrations.

Six weeks ago President Carter reaffirmed his committment to that objective but added, "the one obstacle — the major obstacle, obviously — is the relationship we've always had with Taiwan.

"We don't want the Taiwanese people punished or attacked and if we can resolve that major difficulty I would move expeditiously to normalizing relations with China," the President said.

This statement drew an angry reaction three days later from Chinese Vice Premier Chi Teng-kuei, who told a group of Japanese journalists that Carter's conditions are unacceptable.

"To liberate Taiwan in a peaceful way or by armed force — this is China's domestic affair and not a U.S. affair," he was quoted as saying.

School board-council feud over federal funds for civic center plan

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

Ontario City Council members and administrators voiced angry indignation Tuesday about a unanimous vote of the Ontario-Montclair school board to attempt to bump the city's Civic Center project funding.

City Manager Roger Hughbanks was noticeably peeved when he reported that the school board had decided to submit an application to the Economic Development Administration with a central kitchen facility as the number one project for the Ontario planning target area. The EDA of the U.S. Commerce Department administers the Public Works Act of 1976.

The act is designed to stimulate employment and longlasting public works projects for local municipalities. The second phase allocation targets were announced two weeks ago and Ontario is earmarked for $2,258,000.

The City of Ontario submitted two projects in the first round of competition, a $3.5 million Civic Center request and a backup project for a $2.1 million city yard. In the first phase, the EDA approved specific projects. This present stage calls for cities and school district officials to determine priorities and submit these project priorities to EDA for further scrutiny and approval.

Mayor Paul Treadway blasted school board members and the city manager embellished upon his remarks.

"Do you believe the school district thinks a central kitchen is more important than a new City Hall?" asked Treadway, a teacher at Ontario's Imperial Junior High School. He said the district already has equipment that is "operative and functioning."

Hughbanks called the board decision "uncomprehensible and indefensible." Pointing out that the schools had not competed originally and failed to submit any project proposals, he described their present actions as "selfish" and "unfair" because it threatens final approval of the Ontario Civic Center complex. City staff now occupies cramped, inadequate buildings and portables at 225 S. Euclid Ave.

"It is vital to city government to have an efficient building to work in," Hughbanks said. "The center would rejuevenate downtown Ontario. We viewed this grant as the culmination of years and years of work.

"The O-M board this afternoon agreed to make its prothe board, Assistant City Manager John Porter quipped "we don't have time to horse around writing letters back and forth." He suggested a joint meeting between the council and board "so we can sit down and explain the facts of life. We can't afford the luxury of correspondence back and forth."

The city has 28 days or until July 11 to re-submit the project proposal for the Ontario planning area.

The council instructed staff to contact O-M officials and attempt to arrange a joint meeting for 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Supt. Jack Jones explained the school board vote this morning, saying that the district was experiencing serious problems in providing lunches to students presently enrolled. The problem would be aggravated in the fall, he continued, if a law is implemented requiring school districts to also provide a hot meal to kindergarteners.

This latter could increase the volume of participants in the hot meal program by 17 per cent, he said.

"Although they realize a City Hall is needed in Ontario, they also feel a central kitchen is needed and this is a means of getting it," Jones said.

Fraud suit filed

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The district attorney's fraud unit says it is charging the two partners in Blue Pacific Equities with bilking nearly one-half million dollars from 20 persons, most of them elderly.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Robert J. O'Neill said Robert S. Domaille, 31, and Earl Bazzel, 54, are named in a complaint alleging grand theft, issuing securities without a permit and conspiracy to defraud.

O'Neill said the firm headed by the two men, who are scheduled for arraignment Friday, is in bankruptcy.

ONeill said an investigation showed investments from $2,000 to $116,000 were obtained from the 20 persons for use in real estate projects, most of which were not carried out.

The complaint alleges $473,00 was obtained in such fashion between 1972 and early 1975.

Expo 81 hires an investment company

Bear, Stearns and Co., one of the top 10 investment banking firms in the nation, has been hired by Expo 81 Corp. as the managing underwriters for the revenue bond to provide umbrella financing for the proposed international exposition.

Jerry Clemans, public relations director and press coordinator for Expo 81 Corp., said today that this is merely an "official announcement, but nothing particularly new." He noted that the New York City firm had been hired nearly a month ago to put together the details of the multi-million revenue bond.

The bond is a municipal type tax exempt issue, Clemans explained. He estimated that it will be offered sometime before the end of the year and will be in the range of $130 million.

"We can't give a specific figure yet because we're waiting for final analysis from the accounting firm," Clemans said.

He said Expo 81 Corp. has also retained the national accounting firm of Touche Ross and Co. as financial consultants and accountants to assist in structuring the proposed offering. Bear, Stearns and Co. will be responsible for actually selling the revenue bonds.

Mondale taxes OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service, in a "Dear Taxpayer" letter to Walter F. Mondale, says the vice president and his wife have their tax return in order.

"You will be pleased to know that our examination of your tax returns for the above period shows no change is required in the tax reported. Your returns are accepted as filed.

"Thank you for your cooperation," the IRS said in the form letter, made public Tuesday along with Mondale's return.

The return shows that Mondale and his wife, whose joint return was audited by the IRS, paid $17,726 in federal income taxes last year on a combined taxable income of $48,745.

Mondale filed his tax return with the IRS by the April 15 deadline. In contrast, President Carter and his wife have been given two extensions of the deadline, and a White House spokesman said Tuesday he did not know whether they had filed their return.

The White House has said the Carters' return eventually will be made public.

When it was revealed earlier this month that Carter's 1975 tax return was being audited, Mondale revealed that the IRS was going over his return as well.

Doubt begins to plague 2 lottery bugs

McMURRAY, Pa. (AP) — Tom and Philomena Drake, who vowed to win Pennsylvania's Instant Bingo Lottery even if it took all of their $20,000 savings, may throw in the towel by the end of the week.

"I'm sure if Rocky was here he'd understand. Even he probably would have reconsidered boxing if his opponents were allowed to fight without gloves," said Drake, referring to the movie character played by actor Sylvester Stallone.

The Drakes set out a month ago to find the one ticket in 35 million that will win them $1,000 a week for life.

"After visiting with the lottery commission in Harrisburg, some serious questions about the possibilities of winning were put in my mind," the 30-year-old realtor said Tuesday as he scratched the numbers off what may be his last $500 book of lottery tickets.

"When my wife and I have had the chance to discuss the matter further with lottery officials this week, we'll make the decision whether to go on," Drake said from the local pharmacy that has been headquarters for their venture.

Drake refused to elaborate on what lottery officials told him, but noted he "got an education" when he toured the state's lottery facilities after a misunderstanding over the rules.

So far, the Drakes say they've spent $3,500 on seven books of tickets. By Tuesday, their winnings totaled $700.

Lottery officials say the 20,000 tickets the Drakes intend to buy increase their odds to only 6 in 10,000 from 35 million to one.

Political arena

SEN. JOHN V. BRIGGS, R-Fullerton, said there are two key issues around which the current death penalty controversy in California revolves.

These are: Is the current law under consideration adequate to protect the people? And, is the legislature going to allow this matter — particularly Gov. Brown's opposition to a death penalty — to be buried this year, long before the voters will decide whether Brown is to continue as governor?

"I am thoroughly convinced that the current bill is far too weak; fails to provide any real protection for the common citizen against murderers; and allows enormous discretion for Brown-appointed trial judges to overturn a death sentence even after a jury has specifically determined that there are no mitigating circumstances and have voted for death for a given criminal," said Briggs.

The bill which Gov. Brown has vetoed is, in Briggs' view, restrictive and would allow the death sentence only in the "most narrowly-defined" circumstances.

"If a person kills a policeman he could receive a death sentence," Briggs continued. "If he were to murder you or me the death sentence could not apply, unless the murder occurred in connection with the commission of some other crime.

DOLLY PARTON WANTS A NEW IMAGE

For years Dolly Parton has had a huge following as the reigning queen of country music. Today, however, Dolly wants to broaden her audience even further by moving into the mainstream of rock and pop music, and she's determined not to let anything stand in her way. In our profile of her, we take a close look at exactly what she's done in an effort to create a new image. We also give the reader a revealing glimpse at the private side of Dolly: How is her love for garish clothes and jewelry related to her poor upbringing? How does she use her music as a retreat when things get rough? What role did her local church play in getting her started in music? What does she mean when she says she wants to be the "new Mother Goose?" What are her plans for children of her own? In short, Dolly Parton is a woman of many dimensions who is every bit as compelling off-stage as she is when she's performing. Moreover, our glimpse into her personal life will provide you with a clearer understanding of the motivation behind her desire to change the direction of her career.

Tension mounting in 11-month-old Kentucky strike

STEARNS, Ky. (AP) — Law officers fear this eastern Kentucky coal town may become the next "Harlan County, U.S.A." as tension mounts in the 11-month-old strike at the Stearns mine.

"I hope it ends because I'm afraid blood might be spilled if it don't," said Sheriff Joe Perry. "It's rough, I'll tell you. There ain't no doubt about it."

The coal company has bunkers, reinforced with sandbags, to protect its buildings. In turn, the nearby union hall has been fortified. There have been reports that helicopters, used to take company officials and guards to work, have been fired upon.

"It looks like a battlefield," said Perry. "And that's what it is."

Last week, Perry and more than 140 miners who have been on strike since July viewed the Oscar-winning movie, "Harlan County, U.S.A.," that documented a 13-month strike by miners at the Eastover Mining Co.'s Brook-side mine, also in eastern Kentucky.

That strike began in 1973 and ended when Eastover agreed to recognize the United Mine Workers as collective bargaining agent for the Brookside miners.

New York filmmaker Barbara Kopple, 30, filmed the Brookside dispute, and her cameras recorded the tension between strikers and "gun thugs" who helped men cross picket lines.

Perry said the miners appreciated the film "because it showed what can happen in a situation like we've got right here."

"I hope that it doesn't come to another Brookside," Perry said Tuesday. "I hope the people are smart enough to get together on the bargaining table rather than to settle with guns. Brookside was just mild compared to what can happen."

At Brookside, one picketer was killed before the UMW was recognized.

"I hope that won't have to happen here," Perry said. "But if this doesn't end soon, I'm afraid it will."

The dispute here centers on the miners' insistence that an employe-dominated safety committee be created that could call miners out of the pits when conditions are deemed dangerous. As long as that deadlock remains, says UMW organizer Lee Potter, there will be no settlement.

At Brookside, shots were exchanged on many occasions, and violence on or near the picket lines was common. At the Stearns' Justus mine, thousands of gunshots have been fired since the strike began, Perry said.

"I'd say about a hundred rounds are fired every night," Perry said. "Both sides are firing. I've had deputies down there when bullets were hailing around, and this is not a story. It's true."

He said someone shot out a headlight of one of his deputy's cars recently and that it "came from the direction of the security guards."

Stearns hired security guards earlier this year, and Potter says there was no trouble before that. Frank Thomas, an official of Blue Diamond Coal Co., which owns Stearns, said that's not so. He said the guards are needed to protect company personnel and property.

"I can't even work my garden in the middle of the day," said Chester Morgan, whose house is located near the picket line. "Some nights it's peaceful, but there's a lot of gunfire. It sounds like machine guns. Sometimes me, my wife and daughter have to go to the basement when it gets too hot."

Potter, who also helped organize the Brookside miners, said men "on both sides fire at each other.

"The men on the picket line are protecting their rights," he said. "I sure as hell wouldn't stand there.

"This is like Brookside, but the spirit is unreal," Potter said. "The unity here is stronger than anything I've ever seen. They get stronger every day instead of weaker."

About 130 miners, their wives and children plan to go to Knoxville, Tenn., Friday, in two buses to demonstrate in front of Blue Diamond's headquarters, Potter said.

Potter has been charged with first-degree assault, kidnaping and first-degree robbery in connection with the shooting of a mine security guard. He says the charges were "trumped up." Twenty-seven other men, mostly striking miners, are to be tried Oct. 25 on charges stemming from the shooting of two security guards. None of the guards was seriously hurt.

Both sides have reported that shooting has intensified. Robert Storm, head of the company's hired security agency, Storm Security System of London, Ky., charged that strikers fired more than 800 shots one night, and union leaders say more than 1,000 rounds were fired in a single night recently by guards.

Circuit Judge J.B. Johnson Jr. has limited the number of picketers and warned them not to carry guns. Sheriff Perry said he tried to arrest 10 guards for having guns but was told by "higher authority" not to do so.

Witnesses began testifying before the McCreary County Grand Jury this week in connection with the dispute.

AUCTIONEER CORNWALL EXAMINES TREASURES.

SLAIN HEIRESS — Marjorie Jackson is shown in a 1960s photo wearing expensive silver mink stole which went on auction block Wednesday in Indianapolis.

From furs to false teeth

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — About 2,500 bargain-hunters and treasure-seekers braved a chilly rain today as the belongings of slain grocery heiress Marjorie Jackson — including luxury cars, furs and gold-inlaid false teeth — went on the auction block.

The curious crowd, many gambling on bidding for an unopened box or a garbage bag that might contain some of the fabled Jackson fortune, began gathering at dawn. They spilled out of the tents and stood in the rain, protected by umbrellas and plastic trash bags with holes cut for their eyes and arms.

Auctioneer Earl Cornwell stood in a steady rain to sell the estate of Mrs. Jackson, who was found shot to death in her cash-littered home last month.

Minor household items were to be auctioned first. The first item sold, a marbletop chest of drawers, went to Beech Grove antique dealer Charles Stewart for $30.

When police found Mrs. Jackson's body, they also discovered more than $5 million in cash stuffed in drawers, vacuum cleaner bags, boxes and garbage cans. Last week, authorities speculated that some of the cash might still be among Mrs. Jackson's things.

Cornwell said all of the boxes and bags had been sorted by auction time, but "you never know. We might miss something. If someone bids $5 for a garbage bag full of money, it's theirs."

Everything — including the cheap burglar alarm and cap pistols she used to guard her privacy and her possessions — was up for grabs.

"I'm going to sell Marjorie Jackson's false teeth," Cornwell whispered. "There's a lot of gold in them."

Full-length minks, two late model Cadillacs, jewelry, oriental rugs, silver, china and crystal were among the more valuable items. There were about 40 Bibles — two of them with mother-of-pearl covers.

A lot of Mrs. Jackson's belongings were damaged by the fire police said her killers set to disguise their crime. Cornwell's wife and two helpers worked for almost two days washing the smoke smudges from glasses, plates and bric-a-brac.

Five rather ordinary drawers were stacked near the entrance to Earl's Auction Barn. Cornwell said some of the fortune was kept in them. And they too, were up for sale.

Six persons are in custody in connection with the Jackson murder and the theft of her money.

EYES ON BALL

Both David Beck, 10, and Linda Vancil, 13, show the power of concentration as they stroke away at tennis balls during junior competition in the Pomona Valley Campionships at the Claremont Tennis Club. Play in eight junior events will continue through finals matches Friday. The tournament's open titles will be decided this weekend.

Puzzling Halos still sputtering

CHICAGO (AP) — Norm Sherry doesn't know what it'll take to get his California Angels moving, but he's certain that performances like Chicago reliever Bart Johnson turned in Wednesday night won't help.

"Every time we start to put something together, we stop," Sherry said after watching Johnson scatter five hits in 6 2-3 innings of relief as the White Sox defeated the Angels 6-2. "Johnson was tough, but we were hitting the ball. We just couldn't score."

"You look out there. It's talent there, but we just can't get it going," Sherry said of his club. "We score runs in streaks, but the streaks are too far apart."

California banged out 10 hits, the same number as the Sox, but was only able to score on Terry Humphrey's second home run of the year, a solo shot in the third, and in the eighth when Bobby Bonds doubled and came home on Mario Guerrero's RBI-single.

The Angels dropped a 3-2 decision to the White Sox Tuesday night as Angels right-hander Nolan Ryan allowed only three hits — none after the second inning. But an inability to score runs, despite collecting six hits, spelled doom for the Angels who came into the Chicago series trailing the American League West leaders by three games.

"Nobody has the answer to the problem," said Sherry. "We score runs in streaks, but the streaks are too far apart."

How long can the Angels wait before making a run for the divisional lead?

"We can't get too far behind. We're behind these guys (White Sox) by five games now. We've got to stay within striking distance and get it going," Sherry said.

Jorge Orta drilled a two-run homer in the second to give the Sox a 2-0 lead against loser Ken Brett, 6-5, who was making his first start against his former teammates since being traded to the Angels last week.

"I'm disappointed. You always want to do well against your old team. Orta hit a terrible pitch and that was the story all night," said Brett.

Leading 2-1, Chicago starter Ken Kravec ran into trouble in the third when he yielded Humphrey's home run, a single to Gil Flores and a two-out walk to Don Baylor. That's when Johnson came on to put out the fire by getting Bonds to bounce into a force play.

"Bart's doing a fine job. Kravec just didn't have it tonight — didn't have his tools. He was struggling with his curve ball and I wanted to get him out of there before it was too late," said Chicago Manager Bob Lemon.

"Johnson was a lifesaver. It's encouraging to see a guy come out of the bullpen that way," Lemon added.

Chicago added a run in the fourth on Wayne Nordhagen's run-scoring single and scored three times in the sixth as one run came home on a wild pitch, another on a double by Nordhagen and the third on Brian Downing's RBI-single.

California sends Wayne Simpson, 3-4, to the mound today against Francisco Barrios, 6-3, as the teams conclude the three-game series.

Dodgers ready for Cincy

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — All the pressure is on the Cincinnati Reds this weekend when the Dodgers and Reds clash in a key four-game series along the banks of the Ohio River.

The Dodgers completed a successful homestand (7-2) Wednesday night by burying the St. Louis Cardinals, 12-1, to widen their lead in the National League West to 8 1/2 games over the Reds, who lost earlier in the evening at Philadelphia.

There's no question Cincinnati must gain some momentum this weekend if it ever hopes to catch the runaway Dodgers, who got well at home after seeing their pennant express slowed down on a 2-5 road trip to Chicago and St. Louis.

"We're ready for the Reds," exclaimed Dodger skipper Tom Lasorda after Wednesday's laugher. "It's a tremendous feeling to head into a series like that following a game like we had tonight."

The Dodgers could really open up daylight in the race with a good road trip which also includes eight games (four apiece) at Atlanta and San Francisco.

A big reason why the Dodgers get on their airplane today with optimism is the way the big bats have come alive.

Steve Garvey belted his first grand slam homer in his career and added three singles to raise his season RBI total to 60 while Ron Cey contributed a triple, single and sacrifice fly for 59 RBIs.

"We're certainly prepared for the Cincinnati series," Garvey, who has hit eight homers in the last 15 games, said. "After our last trip, I said all we needed was some home cooking."

Cey added, "All we can do is approach Cincinnati one game at a time. We're playing well now. Everyone in the lineup is contributing and I certainly hope it continues this weekend. I feel that an 8 1/2 game lead is a pretty good margin at this stage of the season."

Friday's opening game of the series in Cincinnati shapes up as a crucial one for the Reds since they have been saving pitching ace Tom Seaver for the Los Angeles invasion.

All four games from Cincinnati will be televised by KTTV (Channel 11). Friday's contest begins at 5 p.m. followed by an 11 a.m. start Saturday plus an 10 a.m. telecast of Sunday's doubleheader.

In addition, the Dodgers' Monday night game at Atlanta will be carried on ABC and the first three games at San Francisco on the Fourth of July weekend will be carried by KTTV.

The Dodgers had a picnic against St. Louis Wednesday in scoring six runs in the fourth inning followed by four more in the fifth.

It made an easy evening for Dodger starter Burt Hooton, who picked up his first victory of the month. He pitched a strong eight innings with Mike Garman finishing up the ninth.

St. Louis' only run came across in the fourth inning and it was unearned because of an error by shortstop Bill Russell. Catcher Ted Simmons' single scored Jerry Mumphrey but Hooton struck out Lou Brock and got Ken Reitz on a pop-up to protect the 2-1 lead which was greatly extended in the bottom half of the inning.

The Dodgers batted around for the 14th time this season in the fourth when Garvey unloaded on his grand slam then batted around again in the fifth when Cey belted his triple.

The only controversy in the game came in the second inning when Simmons was out at the plate trying to score when Brock stole the 876th base of his career.

St. Louis manager Vern Rapp formally protested the game, claiming catcher Steve Yeager illegally blocked out Simmons on the latter's charge to the plate.

DODGER DATA — Wednesday's paid turnout of 39,247 gave the Dodgers an amazing total of 361,753 (average of 40,195) during the nine-game homestand and raises the season total to 1,276,368 (38,678 average).

Pitching match-ups in Cincy are: Friday - Tommy John (7-4) vs. Seaver (8-3); Saturday - Don Sutton (8-2) vs. Woodie Fryman (2-5); and Sunday - Rick Rhoden (10-3) and Doug Rau (6-1) vs. Fred Norman (7-3) and Jack Billingham (8-3).

Lee Lacy has been placed on the 15-day disabled list effective retroactive to Monday.

Lea Antonoplis wins 2nd match

Lea Antonopolis of Glendora won her second match Wednesday at Wimbledon.

Miss Antonopolis, 18, defeated C.F. Matison of Australia in straight sets, 7-5, 6-1

Austin plays like seasoned veteran

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The youngest competitor in the 100-year-history of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships performed like a seasoned veteran in her dream-come-true debut Wednesday.

Tracy Austin, a 14-year-old schoolgirl from Rolling Hills, Calif., breezed to a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Elly Vessies-Appel of The Netherlands in a women's singles match.

Her teeth in braces and her sun-streaked hair tied back by two pink bands, Tracy won the first point, the first game, the first set and the first match of her Wimbledon career, then told newsmen she had played it "just like any other match."

Ignoring the pressure of the occasion, she volleyed from the baseline like a Chris Evert and covered the court like a Billie Jean King.

Tracy is the American 14-year-old and under champion and has not been beaten by a girl in her own age group since she was seven.

She comes from a tennis family. Her father, George, a nuclear physicist, her mother and three brothers all are accomplished players.

Crowds flocked to the outside court as the eighth-grade youngster played her first match outside the United States, where her 128 tournament triumphs have boosted her into 23rd position in the women's rankings despite her youth.

Tracy's memorable start to her Wimbledon career may go no further, however. She is scheduled to meet Miss Evert, the defending champion, in the third round.

Can Tracy beat Miss Evert, ranked No. 1 in the world?

"Well," she said, pausing, "I don't think this year."

Her parents watched from the sidelines as Tracy rolled up her first win on Wimbledon's grass. Mrs. Austin, her eyes streaming with tears, said later, "Can you believe both Tracy and I are allergic to grass?"

Tracy appeared on court in a white outfit that looked like a French maid's apron—a big bow in the back and a large pocket at the front. She wore two tiny bracelets on her left arm and a gold necklace.

Warhurst gets San Dimas job

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

The new San Dimas High football coach carries a name most familar to valley grid fans.

The Bonita School District announced Wednesday night the appointment of Don G. Warhurst as the new skipper of the Saints' football fortunes.

Warhurst is the eldest son of Cal Poly athletic director Donald E. Warhurst.

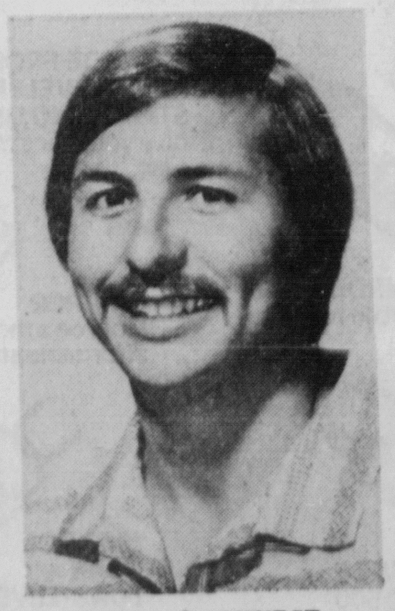
The younger Warhurst was a standout athlete at Cal Poly in the mid-1960's, and was the school's Athlete of the Year. He graduated from Poly in 1969, assisted at Nogales High for one season, and then joined Bob Baiz' staff at San Dimas in 1971 when the school first opened. He's been at the school as an assistant coach ever since.

"I'm just tickled pink to get the head coaching job at San Dimas," Warhurst said. "Being a head coach is something I've wanted a long time. I'm really pleased that it worked out so that I could stay at San Dimas and get the varsity position as well."

Warhurst was one of over 40 applicants for the Saints' chief mentor job, a post left vacant earlier this year when Baiz decided to devote all his attention to his athletic director duties at the school.

"I plan to run the team much like Bob did, although we will probably throw the football a bit more next fall," Warhurst indicated. "We only have two starters back, and only six guys altogether, from last year's championship team, so I've got my work cut out for me, that's for sure.

"At least having been at the school all this time, I know the kids and know what needs to be done to field a winning team. It will take a lot of work but I've got a great group of assistants. That's going to make things a lot easier."



DON WARHURST

Warhurst will be one of two rookie coaches in the Hacienda League when the football season opens. Ontario High recently hired Terry Roche as its varsity mentor.

It was also announced at the Bonita District meeting Wednesday that Gary Prestesater will be taking over as varsity baseball coach from Doyle Lyman.

Prestesater had been the junior varsity baseball coach at the school. He is a 1965 graduate of Azusa Pacific College where he was a standout in football, basketball and baseball. He played a couple years in the Chicago White Sox farm system prior to beginning his teaching career.

Here comes Seattle Slew

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Seattle Slew will return to the race track in the $300,000 Swaps Stakes on July 3 and the unbeaten Triple Crown winner doesn't figure to have much problem adding about $200,000 to his bankroll.

Hollywood Park officials said over the weekend that the Swaps Stakes purse would be increased from $200,000 to $300,000 if Seattle Slew entered. Co-owner Mickey Taylor made the expected announcement in New York Wednesday.

The Swaps Stakes, a 1¼-mile event on dirt for 3-year-olds, is expected to draw from seven to 12 entries, according to a Hollywood Park spokesman who said the winner will receive around $200,000.

Among the horses expected to run, the spokesman said, are J.O. Tobin, Text, Nordic Prince and Bad 'N' Big.

J.O. Tobin, the English 2-year-old champion last year, finished fifth to Seattle Slew in the Preakness on May 17. Text won the Argonaut Handicap at Hollywood Park earlier this month. Nordic Prince captured the Will Rogers Handicap here in May while Bad 'N' Big won the Caballero Handicap here last month.

Slew is unbeaten in nine starts, ending with the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

Stanky quits job after one day

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Eddie Stanky quit the Texas Rangers today after serving only one game as manager.

Stanky had replaced Frank Lucchesi as field boss of the Rangers Wednesday night and guided the team to a 10-8 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"Eddie Stanky has quit almost before he got started," Rangers General Manager and vice president Eddie Robinson told newsmen at the downtown Minneapolis hotel, where the American League team is staying.

Robinson said third base coach Connie Ryan would serve as temporary manager. The Rangers wind up a four-game series against the Twins at Metropolitan Stadium today.

Stanky, 59, apparently caught an early-morning flight for his home in Mobile, Ala.

Robinson said he was in the shower when Stanky called him from the airport at 8:15 a.m., CDT, to tell him he was leaving the team.

"You've got to be kidding," Robinson said he told Stanky.

Robinson said that Stanky responded that he had thought it over all night, decided that he couldn't leave his family and aged father.

"He had deep pangs of remorse," Robinson said.

Robinson said Stanky told him, "You've got a good ball club, you've given me a wonderful contract and I know what I'm turning down."

The general manager said he urged Stanky to stay at the airport until he could get there and discuss the matter. But Robinson said Stanky replied, "'No, I've made my decision. There will be no second thoughts.'"

Robinson said the Ranger players had not been told of Stanky's decision to leave the team. Two players in the hotel lobby said they knew nothing of the matter.

In the locker room after Wednesday night's game, the peppery pilot said, "I didn't do anything. I was just a spectator in the dugout. My coaches made out the batting order. They ran the game. Coach Connie Ryan had some tough decisions."

Stanky managed the St. Louis Cardinals for four years in the 1950s and the Chicago White Sox for three years in the late 1960s. He has been head baseball coach at South Alabama University for the past nine years and was reportedly returning to that post.

Robinson said Stanky was "tickled to death" when he was offered the job of Rangers manager earlier this week.

Bert Hawkins, the Rangers' traveling secretary, said he had been with Stanky after Wednesday night's game and that Stanky was "smiling and very happy" when he went to his hotel room.

At Mobile, Ala., Athletic Director Mel Lucas of the University of South Alabama said Stanky's wife, Dickie, told him of the sudden change of plans and "she was shocked as well as all of us." The Stankys have six children, including three still at home.

Stanky had startled many of his friends when he decided to leave South Alabama.

The athletic director said Stanky was "homesick" and found out fast he didn't want to go the major league route again.

Lucas was exuberant about Stanky's return to South Alabama and said "he's my man." But before he takes Stanky back, he said with a laugh, "I may have to interview him on a couple of things."

Stanky has been highly successful at South Alabama, compiling a 308-102 record and taking four teams to the NCAA playoffs.

He explained his return to the major leagues Wednesday by saying, "Once you get a taste of it, you've always got a hankering to get back.

But he said he had no illusions about the life of major league managers. "I feel like the man swimming in the ocean with a cut on his arm," he said. "Sooner or later, the shark is going to get you."

Gurney, Adams win All-CIF 3A honors

Montclair High topped off a banner baseball campaign by having two of its players win All-CIF 3A honors, it was revealed today.

The Cavaliers, who claimed their second straight San Antonio League title this spring, placed both catcher Kent Gurney and shortstop Rick Adams on the 3A first team.

Gurney, a junior, hammered opposing pitchers for an even .500 batting average this year, and was a defensive standout behind the dish. He was tabbed as the SAL's Most Valuable Player, an honor he also won as a sophomore.

Adams, a recent first-round pick by Houston in the major league draft, batted .384 for the Cavs.

The only other SAL player to make the 3A units was Pomona High third baseman Joey Chapa. Chapa recorded a .387 average for the Devils while being one of the steadiest defensive players in the valley.

Selected as 3A Player of the Year was Edgewood High pitcher/outfielder Mike Pill. Pill, a 6-2, 190-pound senior, compiled a perfect 14-0 mound mark for the Former caddy charts courses

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The Butler National Golf Club course, where the Western Open began today, extends 7,032 yards and every yard has been measured off by George Lucas.

Lucas is a former tour caddy, who is making a good living charting yardage at PGA tournament sites with steel wire. He walks the course, diagramming each hole, measuring yardage to the front and back edges of the greens from various spots along the fairways—such as a water sprinkler head, the end of a trap, a willow tree, a bush.

He prints his findings in pamphlet form and sells them for $5 to players when they arrive for a tournament.

Lucas' business was reported brisk at the Western Open, where most caddies were unfamiliar with the course.

Since the Western Golf Association bars tour (professional) caddies, the players are provided bag toters sent in from various clubs in the Chicago area.

This is as it should be, because receipts from the Western Open go to the Evans Scholars Foundation to put needy caddies through college. Most of the caddies are working toward such scholarships, including three teen-age girls who are packing for George Burns, Miller Barber and Don Iverson.

"Normally I have a tour caddy who goes over the course and gets the measurements, but I buy Lucas' books anyway," said U.S. Open champion Hubert Green.

JUNIOR IN ACTION — Claremont's Justy Hamilton, 13, hopes her forehand shot is on target as she competes in the girls 14 singles competition of the Pomona Valley Tennis Championships. Junior action concludes Friday.

Bolanos, Pineda featured

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Junior welterweights Tury Pineda and Ramiro Bolanos fight tonight in the featured 10-round main event at the Olympic Auditorium.

Pineda, of Mexicali, Mex., brings a 26-7-1 record with 22 knockouts into the bout while Bolanos, of Ecuador, is 54-11 with 34 knockouts.

Olympic matchmaker Don Chargin hopes to match the winner against No. 2-ranked junior welterweight Monroe Brooks in late July.

In a companion 10-rounder tonight, bantamweight Oscar Muniz fights Jose Antonio Rosa. Muniz, of Los Angeles, has a 7-1-1 record while Rosa, from Puerto Rico, is 19-4-2.

Post 78 nips La Verne

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

Claremont fans are used to cliff-hangers as the Post 78 squad won another (its fourth) tough game in its final at bat Wednesday night at La Verne College.

The Post 78 outfit improved its District 18 American Legion league record to 3-2 with its 10 inning 9-7 triumph over La Verne Post 330.

Claremont sent nine men to the plate in the 10th frame and scored three times with two out to take the three hour and 55 minute contest.

With two out, Dan Healey blooped a fly to leftfield which Dave Drury thought he caught for the final out of the inning. Jim Todd scored from third when the umpire ruled that Drury trapped the ball. Dick Bell added two insurance runs with a double to leftcenter.

Claremont had rallied from a 5-0 deficit as La Verne racked up five runs and 11 hits in the first three innings of action.

"We just keep coming back," said Claremont's Jack Helber. "Tonight was a good example of how we never give up when we're behind in 4 game. I was pleased with the way we bounced back to win after falling behind 5-0 to a good solid ballclub."

Leonard Peacock picked up his first victory in making his second appearance on the hill since injuring his arm on March 22.

Ron Lawson pitched a one hitter for Elks to beat Ries Refrigeration 4-1. Wendell Cador drove in two runs in fourth and scored in sixth along with Paul Munch for Elks.

Ries Refrigeration scored two in first but Gray's Painting came back with five in the fourth and went on to win 5-4.

Mark Sherfy tripled in first inning and scored, behind a no-hitter by Jeff Rich who also went 1-for-2 to hand Elks it's first loss of season 3-2.

Randy Turner tripled and Henry Gonzales doubled behind a three-hitter by Keith Andrews in scoring a 7-5 win for Drape-Rite over Gray's Painting. Ken Chapple and Jeff Wisham doubled in a losing cause for Gray's Painting.

Louis Johnson and Dietrich Chapple double behind Perry Castro's first pitching effort of the season, a seven inning three hit effort.

Highlights
Steve Castro had three doubles for McDonald's in 17-0 win over Peich Construction. Jim Bowers contributed two hits as did Chipper Johnson. Three McDonald's pitchers Castro, Steve Bullock and Kyle Avila allowed only one hit.

Ron Noggie went four-for-four for Gemco in 10-3 win over Elks. Sloan Lemon also had two hits.

Dennis King had two hits and Glenn Stanford hit a home run for Bondello's in 8-2 win over Elks. Ken Vanderlinden had two hits for Elks as did Tony Ludwig.

McDonald's pitcher Tony Davilla and Carlos Navarro fanned 13 Gemco batters in 10-1 victory. Steve Castro went four-for-four including a home run. Steve Bullock, Kevin Ivie and Davilla each had two hits.

Kerwin Wade and Jasso had two hits apiece for Pomona Police Association. Bondello's Dennis King had three hits while Brian Parnham and Bennett had two apiece.

Highlights
Bumstead's came from behind with 11 runs in the fifth inning to best Optimist's 16-2. Dennis Wren (3 for 4, including his first homer), David Gessaman (3 for 4), and Ricky Gessaman (2 for 2) led Bumstead's hitting, while George Van Es, Chris Van Es and Mark Allen each had a pair of hits for the losers.

Lloyd's used the extra base hit to advantage as half of their 10 hits went for extra bases in their 9-2 win over Pneudraulics. Andre Swan hit his first homer for Lloyd's and Roger Price hit his first for Pneudraulics.

Pizza Palace, led by Reyes Castaneda (4 for 5), blasted Montclair Bronze, 18 to 7. Marc Yoakum was 3 for 3 for Bronze.

League leading, Bruce Allyn Plumbing received a stellar performance from pitcher Jeff Dahlstrom as they topped second place, Mr. Dryclean, 6-0. Dahlstrom struckout the first 16 batters faced, walked the second batter in the sixth inning, then struckout the next 2 batters for a six inning total of 18, with only the walk marring a perfect game. Toby Walker (3 for 4) and Dahlstrom (3 for 3, including 2 homers and 6 RBI's) led the Bruce Allyn hitting attack.

Bud Harrington's first inning grand slam homer paved the way as Pneudraulics beat Optimist's, 9-5.

In a very quick (1 hr. 10 min.) game, Bumstead's slipped past Lloyd's, 4-2. The big blow came from Cliff Delasantos who cracked his first homer in the second inning. Doug Kirby struckout 12 in a losing cause. Mr. Dryclean, off to a slow start, came up with 6 runs in the third inning to overcome a Pizza Palace lad on their way to a 9 to 4 victory.

Mike Valdez and Ricky Rhinehart pitched Bruce Allyn Plumbing to their third consecutive shutout as they allowed only 1 hit in stopping Montclair Bronze, 9-0. They struck out 16 on the way to the win.

Quotes

"Those other years, when I'd get off to such a great start, I'd win two or three tournaments and I'd kind of lose interest. I wouldn't want to play...Now it's different. I've got something to work toward. I've got some work cut out for me." — Golfer Johnny Miller, experiencing an early-season slump.

Kicking around

with Adrian Mercado and Willy Keo

AT A RECENT COACHING WORKSHOP we referred to a visual aid that had been prepared in January.

It listed the number of AYSO coaches and assistant coaches as 13,000; we quickly had to make an on-the-spot update. In a few short months that number had risen to 16,000 with the numbers continuing to grow.

A just concluded survey corroborates what we already knew . . . almost all the new coaches have never played soccer. Because the need for coaches is ever greater, KICKIN' AROUND suggests that you begin looking around for possible coaching candidates this fall.

Before explaining the basic elements of tactics to the prospective coach, a review of youth coaching philosophy is recommended to hammer home the point that the program is primarily for the enjoyment of the youngsters, and that positive coaching is not only suggested, but is mandatory according to the AYSO Rules and Regulations.

Another basic rule should also be explained at this time . . . the "Everyone Plays" rule that guarantees every player that he will play at least one half of every game.

If the prospective coach doesn't balk at these regulations, and feels that he or she can abide by them you may then begin to explain the rules of soccer.

The quickest way to turn off your proteges or protegees is to overpower them with your knowledge of the 17 Laws of the Game. Reassure them that soccer is an uncomplicated sport that is played on a rectangular field.

Each team is allowed only 11 players on the field at any one time. The object of the game is to pass the ball through the opponent's goal. How the players are deployed on the field is up to the coach, but years of experimentation have shown that it is most helpful to have a goalkeeper (the only player allowed to touch the ball with the hands), a number of players committed to defend their goal against attacks by the opposing team, another number of players with the dual responsibility of defending when the other team has the ball and attacking when your team has the ball, and finally a number of players that will be primarily committed to the attack. These four groups of players are labeled: the goalkeeper, the fullback line, the midfield line, and the forward line.

Next week we will discuss the "best" system to use for deploying the players, and why "the best defense is a good defense" . . . when you win.

USC MAY BE CONFUSING SOCCER WITH WATER POLO. USC swim coach Peter Daland recently recruited three soccer players for soccer coach Joe Baker.

Because the maximum number of swimming scholarships is 11, three other potential world-class swimmers were recruited for USC under soccer scholarships.

Under the NCAA rules for a multi-sport athlete these three players must participate fully and regularly in organized practice with the squad . . . for the entire practice and playing season.

The Pac-8 swim coaches are concerned over these aquatic booters especially so because USC won the NCAA championship by almost 200 points with 11 swimmers on scholarship; fourteen swimmers on scholarship cannot but make them even stronger.

Meanwhile back on the USC soccer field coach Joe Baker is quoted as saying "My guess is they'll be as good as those we have coming back." USC's soccer record of 7-9-3 last year is nothing to boast about; giving out soccer scholarships to swimmers is certainly not the way to improve his team.

USC now has given out three "soccer" scholarships. KICKIN' AROUND finds no alternative but to "red card" the USC athletic department for conduct unbecoming a university. We will, however, give them an opportunity to redeem themselves by filling the remaining eight soccer scholarships with our local genuine bumper crop of excellent graduated booters.

FOR THE THIRD TIME IN FIVE YEARS the powerful Maccabees of Los Angeles have walked off with the U.S. Open Cup title by overwhelming the Philadelphia German/Hungarian club 5-0.

The Philly club was misnamed when you consider that all but one of its players were born in the USA and most of them hailing from the Kensington area near Philly. The Philadelphians were expected to provide tough opposition after wading thru Baltimore and Pittsburgh and the 4-time Open Cup champs, the Greek/Americans of New York City.

The Maccs had a much tougher time with the defending champion San Francisco Athletic Club here a few weeks ago and also with the St. Louis Ziegenhein in the battle to represent the west.

It is noticeable that the coaches of the 1976 Dewar Cup winners, the San Francisco Athletic Club and the Maccabees are also coaches of ranking college teams . . . Steve Negoesco being the coach of both the University of San Francisco team and the SFAC who last year walked off with the NCAA Division One title and the U.S. Open Cup, and Zvi Friedman who coaches Cal State Northridge and the Los Angeles Maccabees.

Friedman is also Chief Coach for AYSO, the American Youth group which now involves more than 150,000 boys and girls in 16 states. The Maccabee victory over Philadelphia brings to the far west its sixth U.S. Open Cup title since 1956 when the L.S. Kickers won the first. Five have been won by Los Angeles teams and one by San Francisco. The West is rising up.

DID YOU CATCH THE WEEKEND TV SOCCER PARADE? By this time you should be alerted to check your Saturday and Sunday schedules. Channel 34 gave us the Peru/Chile match Saturday and the Brazil/Poland game Sunday. In conflict with the Brazilian game was the Aztec/Minnesota coverage over channel 9 so you had to make a choice, or jump around during commercials. At 6 p.m. on Saturdays you don't have to worry about the commercials . . . the English games being on channel 28 which is not supported by commercials but by public subscription. And of course the fine German games are shown over channel 22 at 9:30 p.m. on Thursdays.

We didn't get to see the Cosmos/Tampa game but 62,394 lucky fans got into Giants Stadium in New Jersey to set a U.S. record for a soccer crowd and they were treated to a masterful showing by the Great Pele who came thru with a hat-trick (3 goals in one game) . . . only the 92nd hat-trick of his 22-year career and the second of the season! If the Cosmos make it to the NASL final this year there is no way a new crowd record can be set with the limited seating capacity of the Portland Stadium. It would be far wiser to make the final a home-and-away series in the home parks of the two finalists than by pre-designating a site as the NASL does. Last year Minnesota alone could have set the record even if opponents Toronto drew only their usual 5,000.

GEORGE BEST WAS AFIRE AGAIN in the Minnesota game last Sunday. His shooting, dribbling and pinpoint passing are making Steve David the top NASL scorer. Add a boost for hard-working Charlie Cooke who does a lot of ball picking-up in his midfield job and still manages to move forward for Best's passes. Charlie is a valuable man to the Aztecs. You can see these formidable warriors go against Pele and Beckenbauer on channel 9 Sunday from New Jersey and against Connecticut Wednesday night. You'd better check for particular times.

The Aztecs come back to the Coliseum for that great July 2 game against the Pele/Beckenbauer combine..truly a treat for the soccer fan.

AMERICAN LEAGUE ACTION finds the champ Skyhawks challenging the Sunshine at Santa Ana Bowl Saturday at 7:30 p.m.; and the New York Apollos doing a rerun of their title game vs. the Skyhawks at Van Nuys at 8 on Wednesday night.

DOWN SOUTH . . . WAY DOWN . . . Brazil beat Poland 3-1 before 90,000; Argentina and Scotland tied 1-1 after each had a player explulsed for fighting; and all South America primes for the Brazil/Peru/Bolivia World Cup playoffs July 10, 14 and 17. Sounds terrific.

DAVID GOMEZ

Rare play for boy in T-Ball

David Gomez pulled off a rare diamond feat last week in the Pomona Park and Recreation Department's youth T-Ball program.

Playing third base for the Angels in a game at Simons Junior High, eight-year old David completed an unassisted triple play.

He caught a line drive, stepped on third for a force play as the runner from third left early, and then proceeded to tag out the runner who had strayed off of second base.

The play was the first of its kind that league director Gene Knight could remember since the program's beginnings four years ago.

Youth T-Ball games are played Monday and Wednesday evenings at 5 p.m. at Simons. They are also played at Emerson Jr. High and at Westmont and Kennedy parks. League play concludes July 15 with a City Tournament set to begin July 18.

Debra Rising and Kristin Vandervoort hit triples for the Red Sox. The Red Sox clinched first place in their win over the Orioles with Tina Sanders hitting in the winning run. A key defensive play was made by Michele Brindley of the Red Sox to Marcia Zagorski to Lyndy Snow.

Robin Adams caught a fly ball in center field to save the win for the Giants. Also for the Giants Christine Stedman played an outstanding game as catcher, Denise Wiemann at second base made two outs and Janice Moore caught three flies in left field. Dodgers came from behind to edge the Cardinals with Kathy Niemeier driving in the winning run.

For 10 consecutive seasons, from 1967 through 1976, first baseman Tony Perez, now with Montreal but then with Cincinnati, drove in 90 runs or more.

Amateurs enter match play

PEBBLE BEACH (AP) — Tom Culligan, 35, of San Mateo, a former San Francisco city champion, held medalist honors as the 66th California State Amateur Golf Championship entered match play today at Pebble Beach.

Culligan, who reached the quarter-finals in two previous state amateur tournaments, is paired against former San Francisco 49er quarterback John Brodie for his opening match as 32 survivors from a starting field of 200 begin headto-head competition that ends with Saturday's 36-hole finals.

Wednesday's third-round of medal play left Culligan tied with Robert Isaacson Jr., 20, of San Jose at 222, six over par. In the playoff the two parred the 385-yard first hole, and Culligan holed out a 12-footer for a winning birdie on the next extra hole, the 507-yard, par-5 No. 2.

Isaacson's first match opponent in the lower bracket is John Cook of Palm Springs.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — Blue chips were weak as stocks struggled for direction early Thursday in active trading while institutions juggled their portfolios in preparation for the third quarter.

In addition, a number of investors were waiting for the Federal Reserve Board's weekly money supply figures later in the day which could have a bearing on Fed policy. The basic money supply spurted $1 billion last week.

Several observers were disturbed by Wednesday reports that the United States had a record $4.32 billion current account balance of payments deficit, most of it being spent for foreign oil. The government has predicted a $10 to $12 billion deficit for the year.

Some also were concerned that orders for non-defense items in May were down 0.7 per cent. The non-defense sector is considered a barometer of future economic activity.

Against that background, the Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 2.29 points Wednesday, was off 2.12 points to 924.19 shortly before noon EDT.

Market breadth figures reflected considerable investor uncertainty. Advances led declines, 576 to 497, among the 1,634 issues crossing the tape. There were 561 unchanged issues.

Volume at the two-hour mark amounted to about 9,700,000 shares, compared with 12,130,000 traded during the same period Wednesday.

The heavy trading of the past several days and the inability of the glamors and blue chips to move sharply higher has indicated institutions were adjusting their portfolios for the third quarter.

Avis Corp. was the most active NYSE issue, unchanged at 21½ following a block trade of 103,700 shares at 21½. Berkey Photo followed, off ⅛ to 4⅛ in trading that included a block of 136,000 shares at 4.

Exxon was the third most active issue, unchanged at 52¼. The Justice Department said it does not intend to oppose Exxon's proposed sale of servce stations to Checker Oil Co.

Kaiser Cement & Gypsum was ahead 1¼ after a delayed opening. The company late Wednesday raised its quarterly dividend payment to 16 cents a share from 12½ cents.

Becton Dickinson was ahead 1¾. Late Wednesday, the firm's directors voted to reject acquisition overtures made by several unnamed companies.

General Foods was off 1½. The company Wednesday said it would seek to increase its authorized common share to 100 million from 60 million.

St. Regis Paper was off 1¼, Crown Zellerbach ⅝ and International Paper ½ following published reports a major analyst has taken the issues off his recomended list.

Kaiser Industries was the second most active Amex issue, up ⅛ to 5. Vernitron was third, unchanged at 10¼.

Ontario International

Passenger volume up

The strong upward trend in passenger volume at Ontario International Airport continued in May as 130,492 air travelers used the airport to mark a 13.7 per cent increase over the same month last year.

While passenger volume rose, air cargo activity fell to 520,315 pounds for the month, a drop of 9.4 per cent from the previous May. Total operations (landings and take-offs) at OIA were also down 4.2 per cent to 13,420 compared to 14,004 in 1976.

John Dickinson, airport manager, predicted the May increase is indicative of a record-breaking summer in passenger volume. He attributed the expected increase to new services offered by the airport and the effects of an intense advertising program.

At least four of the nine airlines serving OIA will have additional flights during the summer months. He added that the Los Angeles Department of Airports, OIA operator, recently launched a public service advertising campaign to create a greater awareness of Ontario and help relieve the congestion at Los Angeles International.

Stockbroker fight

Exchange has growth pains

SAN FRANCISCO (LENS) — A fresh sign of the uncertainty that haunts stockbrokers about the future of their trade has appeared in the Pacific Stock Exchange. A management plan to save money by amalgamating the two closely linked Los Angeles and San Francisco trading floors was narrowly defeated last month.

The debate about the plan over the past three months, as one group of stockbrokers lobbied for the merger and another opposed it, has highlighted three developments in the financial world: the rapid growth of the Pacific area as a financial center, the growing primacy of Los Angeles in this market and the state of nerves into which technological change has plunged the brokerage houses.

The industry is already expecting changes in the regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission by the end of the year. But the future of on-floor trading itself seems perilous. New techniques — more sophisticated computer facilities, closed-circuit television, automatic quotation services, the prospect of a composite national tape for all markets and perhaps an end of restrictions on off-floor trading — are catching on quickly.

Many specialists thought it unrealistic just at the moment to commit themselves to centralizing the Pacific Stock Exchange floor either in Los Angeles or in San Francisco. No one is sure that floors will have a function in stock exchange operations two or three years from now. As Professor John McDonald of Stanford's Graduate School of Business put it, "We think of the market system these days as communication lines, not as places."

Edward Wedbush, a Los Angeles broker who is chairman of the exchange's board of governors, suggested that some $400,000 a year in operating expenses and probably another $300,000 in electronic costs could be saved by merging the floors. Most of his support seemed to come from firms in southern California, around Los Angeles.

In San Francisco, however, the plan was seen as sugar coating for the abandonment of the city as a market. Members of a group of brokerage firms based in San Francisco, including Dean Witter & Company and Sutro & Company, circulated a letter urging postponement of talk about "consolidation." Warren Berl, chairman of the board of Sutro, emphasized that they thought the timing of any change — coming, as it did, just ahead of major regulatory changes by the SEC — thoroughly inappropriate. The opponents managed to block the plan; but many of them were irritated by the degree of pressure exerted on members to support the Los Angeles initiative. A majority of the 444 votes (representing both small and large firms) approved the single floor concept, but, with numerous abstentions and 155 votes against, the necessary two-thirds approval could not be obtained.

The Pacific coast stock exchange is the largest regional exchange in the country and the fastest growing. The San Francisco floor first opened as a local exchange in 1882, the Los Angeles one five years later. Since 1973 they have formed a single market served by an identical wire, with all transactions instantly communicated to both floors.

Hang-Sheng Cheng, an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, who undertook a recent study of the west coast as an international financial center, says he found it impossible to unravel the lines of command in offices spanning both cities or to identify major decision-making as coming exclusively from one or the other.

What he did find was tremendous growth in international banking on the west coast. Foreign assets of its banks (most of them in California) grew from $7 billion in 1969 to $32 billion in 1975 and the number of foreign banks with agencies or branches on the west coast grew from 16 in 1969 to 50 in 1975. This rise in the Pacific coast as an international financial center, he said, has been "remarkably rapid . . . and largely undaunted by the recession."

Shopper receives lesson

NEW YORK (AP) — While our thoughts followed the world's leaders to the summit, where high above the storm clouds they proclaimed the ideal of economic cooperation, more ordinary events continued in the rainy valleys.

—On Lexington Avenue in New York a shopper received an unforgetable lesson in why some people, despite talent and hard work, can't seem to make a living. Or was the lesson that of the effectiveness of mass production?

The shopper's quest was a metal picture frame, one foot by one foot, unassembled, for which he was quoted a price of $12, glass included.

While the proprietor measured the glass for cutting, the customer inquired about the price of a print, already matted and glass-enclosed in the identical frame.

"Seven-fifty," he was told.

"Do you mean this print, along with a mat, and the frame already assembled, costs $4.50 less than an unassembled frame with no mat and no print?"

"Yes."

"Then why should I pay $12?"

"You shouldn't. We buy the frames at wholesale and the print is thrown in."

"Which leaves one wondering: While the value of volume buying is obviously beneficial, what in the world is left for the artist, whose major contribution, it seems, is to lower the price of the frame?

NOW accounts costing banks

BOSTON (AP) — Some banks in New England say they are losing money on the free NOW checking accounts that pay 5 per cent interest to nearly 1.4 million customers.

And the banks say customers with NOW — Negotiable Order of Withdrawal accounts are going to have to start paying, either through service charges or minimum balance requirements.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston says the 5 per cent interest payments more than double the approximately 4 per cent it costs banks to offer checking accounts.

James Howell, chief economist for the First National Bank of Boston, says NOW accounts were a key reason that 1975 bank profits fell 35 per cent in Massachusetts and 27 per cent in New Hampshire, compared to a drop of 1.6 per cent for the nation.

Some of that expense is being passed on to consumers.

The First National Bank of Boston will require a minimum balance of $400 on NOW accounts starting July 1. When the balance falls below that, the charge will be 25 cents per check.

Federal law restricts the interest-bearing NOW accounts to the six New England states, but Congress is considering authorizing them nationwide.

Consumers aren't complaining about the NOW accounts, which spread rapidly in 1974 when Congress allowed them in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Other New England states got them early in 1976.

"I think it's the best consumer product since sliced bread," said Richard Hill, chairman of the First Boston Corp., the holding company that owns the First National Bank of Boston.

Started by the Consumer Savings Bank of Worcester, which had to go to court for the right to offer them, NOW accounts have been heavily advertised in New England. One result has been fierce competition among banks.

"Most of us have had no choice but to fight and fight hard to maintain or perhaps modestly enhance our position," a recent banking seminar was told by William M. Crozier Jr., chairman of BayBanks, Inc., which claims the world's largest market share of NOW accounts in its 180 offices.

The cost of providing NOW accounts was cited by Crozier last winter as "the overriding reason" for the pullout of five BayBanks subsidiary banks from the Federal Reserve System.

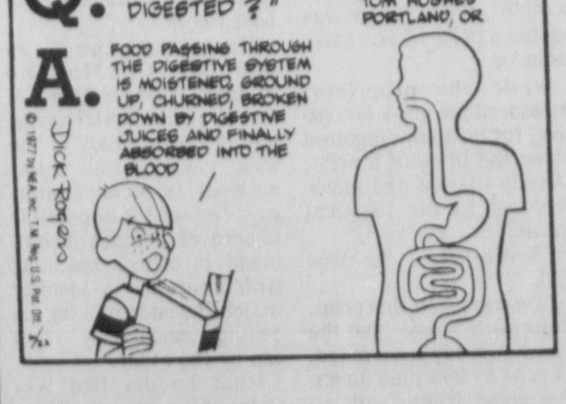
JOHNNY WONDER

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER



What happened to your breakfast? The food you eat gives your body the energy it needs to work and grow. But food must be digested before it can be used.

As you ate breakfast, your teeth chewed the food into small pieces. Saliva from your mouth moistened the food so you could swallow it easily.

When the food reached your stomach, powerful muscles in the walls of the stomach churned the food and thoroughly mixed it with digestive juices that poured out of glands in the stomach lining. The partly digested food then passed from the stomach into the small intestine where it was mixed with more digestive juices.

When completely digested, the food particles were absorbed by the blood vessels of the small intestine and then carried by the blood to all parts of the body where the food is used for energy.

The parts of food that cannot be digested or used leave the body as waste.

One week left to name your candidate for PB awards

Only one week remains for nominating Pomona Valley women for the Woman Achiever Awards program sponsored by the Progress Bulletin.

Deadline is June 28 for submitting nominations in a contest to select an outstanding woman achiever.

The contest is sponsored by the newspaper in conjunction with the 16th annual edition of Pomona Valley Women's clubs. Winners will be announced in the July 26 special edition.

Forms for club histories to be included in the annual edition have been mailed to presidents or club publicity chairmen and are also due on June 28. If any club has not received a form the president should call the Family Section editor at the Progress Bulletin immediately.

YWCA has swim lessons

Beginning Monday back yard swim lessons for children from six months of age to 12 years will be offered by the YWCA of Greater Pomona Valley.

Sessions of two weeks each are scheduled from 9 a.m. until noon and from 1 until 3 p.m.

Morning sessions are: 1, 465 Bregante St., Diamond Bar; 2, 1395 N. Palomares, Pomona; 3, 1938 Yorba Drive, Pomona; and 4, 812 E. Granada Court, Ontario.

All afternoon lessons will be at 2814 N. White Ave., La Verne.

Further information may be obtained by calling 622-1269.

National meeting set by valley Girl Scouts

A 12-day national conference on public relations and other communication arts is being sponsored by the Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council at Scripps College for Women in Claremont beginning Saturday. There will be 150 selected Senior Girl Scouts from 43 states attending the event, "Tomorrow's Woman in Public Relations."

According to information received from the council headquarters in Pomona, over 60 speakers and workshop leaders from the professional ranks in public relations, television, radio, newspapers, graphic arts, photography, magazines and other media, have volunteered to lend their time and expertise in the largest scale career-exploration event sponsored by Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council.

"The cooperation we have received from the Inland Empire, Orange County and Los Angeles Chapters of The Public Relations Society of America is incredible," said Vashti Fleming, program chairman for the conference.

"And members of The Press Club of Southern California have also been generous in volunteering their time to introduce our participants to various areas of the media."

The workshop schedule will be interspersed with visits to Disneyland, the Music Center in Los Angeles and field trips to KTTV and KNBC, as well as scouting activities.

"Because our participants are from all over the country, our program was designed to give them an opportunity to do some serious career exploration and at the same time to enjoy Southern California and to share Girl Scouting activities," Mrs. Fleming added.

SHOULDER BAG — Mrs. Edith Laskowski, chairman of Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council involvement committee, left, Shelley Roseboro, senior scout member of steering committee, and Al Dubiel, steering committee chairman display one of shoulder bags to be presented to 150 senior scouts who will attend conference here.

What does she remember?

'Exorcist' star looks back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The movie ads proclaim: "It's four years later... What does she remember?"

If you really care about the answer, you'll have to see "Exorcist II: The Heretic," latest in what appears to be a long line of films aiming to cash in on previous hits. The "she" in the ad is Regan MacNeil, the girl who went through the agonies of hell, literally, to eradicate a demon from her system.

And what about Linda Blair — what does she remember? It has been four years since the unknown actress astounded the movie world with her performance as Regan in "The Exorcist," which remained the biggest film moneymaker until "Jaws." With a little help from Warner Brothers' special effects and Mercedes McCambridge's vocal effects, won an Academy nomination as best supporting actress.

"I remember 'The Exorcist' as being long, hard and physical," said Miss Blair, who was 14 during the making of the film. "I remember sitting in a freezing cold room and then under the hot lights. The work wasn't scary, just exhausting. The new picture was also long, but not as physical."

Linda Blair has changed in the four years. The physical change is obvious in a woman of 18. She giggles less often. The maturity is expectable, although she was surprisingly level-headed at 14. She now smokes filtertips and wears her hair in a frizzled, Bette Midler style.

She graduated from high school two years ago, still lives with her parents and older brother and sister in Connecticut, but plans to get her own house soon — "it's time to leave the nest." When she came west for a business and publicity trip, she was accompanied by boyfriend Teddy Hartlett, a 19-year-old rock musician, and another young couple.

DEMONS RE-VISITED — Linda Blair, star of "The Exorcist," undergoes hypnosis experiments in the sequel, "Exorcist II: The Heretic," to determine how much she remembers about her possession.

Since "The Exorcist," Linda has appeared in another sequel, "Airport '75," and three television movies, "Born Innocent," "Sweet Savage" and "Victory at Entebbe." When the second "Excorcist" was proposed, her reaction was: "Ho ho ho!"

"But then I got the script, and I was really surprised," she added. "It's a real juicer."

Warner Brothers added more juice to the project by hiring director John Boorman ("Deliverance") and casting Richard Burton as a Jesuit priest assigned to validate the earlier exorcism, Oscar winner Louise Fletcher as the psychiatrist treating Regan, and Max Von Sydow, appearing in flashbacks as the fated Father Merrin.

Linda was well compensated for returning to the land of the demons. How well? There have been reports of $750,000. She is understandably mute on the matter, remarking with a giggle: "How much you make is your business, how much I make is my business."

She has seen "The Heretic," and commented: "I didn't think it would be quite so scary. I must say, it gave me chills. The first picture didn't. It was my first time on the big screen, and I was too conscious of having filmed the scenes.

"The new picture has no repossession. It is four years later, and Regan is a straight-forward teen-ager with no apparent results from her experience. The demon has left her, and yet she was not exorcised; the demon transferred to Father Merrin.

"Regan is fighting it on her own. She has weird dreams and there is a sense of evilness lurking throughout. She is gifted, even psychic in a sense. But she is keeping it all inside. The film is a story of her fight for survival."

"The Heretic" explains many things that were eliminated in the cutting of the first film. But, she added, "there didn't have to be an 'Exorcist' for you to understand the new film."

What about the next four years and beyond for Linda Blair?

"I'm going to take the next year off to show my horses," said the actress, who owns four jumpers. "I have no plans to go to college. I have the grades to go — I got B-minuses and A-pluses—but I don't think you need college for acting. The best education is to go out and do it.

"There are a lot of things I want to do with my lifetime. I want to have a family some day. I want to get deeper into acting, do some directing, too. But I will never overwork. I will pick my projects carefully.

"Another 'Exorcist'? I hope not. I don't know what more we can do."

MTAC slates meeting

The annual convention of the Music Teachers' Association of California will be held at the Hyatt House in San Jose Friday through Tuesday.

The theme is "Around the State in 80 Years," commemorating the 80th anniversary of incorporation for MTAC. There will be concerts, master classes, demonstrations, lectures, exhibits, competitions, study sessions and performances by noted artists for music teachers and students from the 53 branches of MTAC.

Delegates from the Pomona Valley branch will be Leota Waters, president, and Genevieve Barber, treasurer. Alternates will be Eloise Wilder and Marguerite Green.

Scott Edwards, graduating senior at Claremont High School, has been selected to play in Lili Kraus' Piano Master Class on Tuesday, June 28. He will perform the fourth movement of the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 2 No. 3. Scott's teacher is Yvonne Gordon.

Also selected from the Pomona Valley branch to play at the convention is David Brown, pupil of Marguerite Green. He will play the Toccata in D Minor by J.S. Bach on Friday in the Panel Honors Recital.

The Music Teachers' Association of California, established in 1897, is a professional organization devoted to elevating the educational and reaching standards of its members and to providing superior music training for students.

Rock and gem show due at Great Western

The third annual Los Angeles Treasure-Rock-Gem & Mineral Show will be held at the Great Western Exhibit Center in Commerce July 9 and 10.

The show will feature ancient and modern mining equipment, the former dating back to 1849 when gold was discovered at Sutter's Mill in Northern California, and the latter of the type used today, including metal detectors, some adapted to operations on land, others to diving for treasure hundreds of feet below the surface of the sea. Also on display will be examples of precious and semi-precious stones: gold and silver nuggets, fine specimens of opal, saphires, rubies and turquoise, the latter fashioned into Indian jewelry. Many of the gems on display are in their natural state.

John Korty

Director is different

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Korty, the Emmy-winning director of CBS' "Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," does things a bit differently. For starters, his office is near San Francisco, not in Hollywood.

And in a boom era for half-hour situation comedies, with 27 set for next fall on the networks, a sitcom idea of his called "The Transport of Delight" may wind up on public TV in several years.

It's being pitched by station KQED in San Francisco to officials at the Corporation for Public Broadcasting as a candidate for partial underwriting for a pilot show that could lead to a series, KQED says.

"Transport" is about young folks of differing races who form a moving and trucking company, and advertise in foreign-language and underground newspapers, a station spokeswoman says.

"Well, I guess it's because I'm a little crazy," Korty said when asked why he didn't take his wares to NBC, CBS or ABC. "I had the idea for three years ... but I didn't want to do a commercial series."

He said he only wanted to do 13 episodes a year. But if his series was on a feared the network would demand the usual 24 or so episodes annually, leaving him no time for other projects.

His comedy idea sat idle until an old friend, Chloe Aaron, a Public Broadcasting Service program executive, mentioned a need for comedy on public TV, "so I decided to try it," he said.

Should CPB tell "Transport" to start trucking, he says, he won't take it to Hollywood. He'll tape the series on location around the City by the Bay, avoiding the conventional studio and audience therein.

"And I want to use, as much as possible, Bay-area writers, actors and directors," he added in a phone interview from his office in Mill Valley, just north of San Francisco.

"There are a lot of good people up here who find it very hard to crack the Hollywood scene. And yet they're very talented and know what they're doing."

Korty, 40, a transplanted New Yorker born in Lafayette, Ind., is among the small, but growing, colony of San Francisco film folk who've cracked the Hollywood scene with spectacular success.

Others who call the Bay area home include Francis Coppola of "Godfather" fame; George Lucas, director-writer of the hit "Star Wars," and Lee Mendelson.

SQUEEZED OUT? — Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, and Olympic ice skating star Dorothy Hamill, left, may soon become the new symbols of Florida orange juice. The Florida Citrus Commission is taking a poll to find out if orange juice queen Anita Bryant should be asked to leave her $100,000-a-year job as the orange juice symbol in commercials because of her anti-gay campaign. The commission has made backup commercials.

Wants to rock Cuba

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock entrepeneur Bill Graham has reportedly asked Cuban officials permission to stage a Carlos Santana concert in Havana.

Travel restrictions on American citizens wanting to go to Cuba were lifted last March, but because of trade limits still in effect, Graham would have to hand over all proceeds from the concert to the Cuban government.

"I heard that we were sending basketball teams over there and decided the time might be right," Graham told Rolling Stone magazine. "Carlos has always wanted to play there."

THE CRUSADERS — Angela Horine, right, holds her 1-year-old daughter, Sarah, as daughter Alisa, center, 14, holds a wire with a bit of cloth in flame of torch held by Catherine Clement, testing fabric to determine if it contains Tris, suspected of causing cancer. Women crusade against Tris

By MARY GANZ
Associated Press Writer

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — Angela Horine spent Mother's Day this year snipping tiny samples of fabric from her children's nightgowns, wrapping the clippings in copper wire and burning them.

Every time she saw a spurt of green flame, she knew this nightie or that sleeper she'd been putting on her 1½-year-old daughter probably contained the chemical Tris, suspected of causing cancer.

"It wreaks my heart because I remember the baby, how sweet she looked in those pajamas, and now we find out they have Tris in them," she says. "They have known it would probably cause cancer for at least two years now. If they'd done something then, my baby could have avoided all that exposure.

Mrs. Horine and a neighbor, Catherine Clement, have mounted a crusade to inform parents about the dangers of the chemical, banned in April by the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission as a flame retardant in children's clothing.

Mrs. Horine, 35, has written articles for local newspapers and for newsletters put out by her husband's electronics company and her 14-year-old's junior high school. A friend posted the warnings in her pediatrician's examining rooms.

Mrs. Horine's campaign has enjoyed some modest success. She says she convinced one disbelieving executive of a children's clothing company to test all his son's pajamas. She has received encouraging letters from government officials, and friends call her to check out new sleepwear purchases for their own children.

"People are very misinformed about the dangers of Tris," says Mrs. Horine. "Some people say, 'Oh, everything causes cancer. I'm not going to bother to go through all my kids' pajamas.'

"But I think if you're not upset, you really don't know the facts."

How real is the danger? Since cancer experiments cannot be performed on humans, nobody knows for sure. But tests by the National Cancer Institute showed Tris to be a potent carcinogen in rats and mice, and other experiments have shown that Tris rubbed off from clothing can be readily absorbed into the skin.

Dr. Bruce Ames, a University of California biochemist whose tests first spotted Tris as a potential carcinogen two years ago, has estimated that 17,000 of every million children who wore Tris-treated pajamas might develop kidney tumors by the time they reach their 20s.

Other scientists estimate a lower human risk factor — 200 kidney cancers per million male children by one study, 6,000 per million in another. In these studies, the risk factor for young girls was estimated to be about one fifth that for boys.

After 1972, when flammability standards went into effect for children's nightwear, Tris was used as a flame retardant in all acetate, triacetate and most 100 per cent polyester pajamas up to size 6. In 1975, the standards were extended to cover sizes 7-14.

Mrs. Horine, who had saved nightgowns from each of her five daughters for passing along to the next, couldn't remember what she'd purchased when.

So she and a chemist friend developed a simple test: Wrap a tiny snippet of fabric in copper or brass wire and hold it in a steady flame in a well-ventilated room. If the flame burned green, Mrs. Horine says, she knew the fabric contained one of several chemicals, the most likely being Tris.

If she saw the green flame, she put the garment aside and wrote to the manufacturer to be sure.

When she finished with the sleepwear, she started on the bedding. She found Tris in blankets, pillows, comforters and one of her daughter's sleeping bags.

"Then I thought I was done and I tucked my 6-year-old in bed that night and thought, 'Here you are in your Tris-free pajamas and your tris-free bed and you're safe.'"

That was before she tested Rosy, the ancient stuffed giraffe she tucked into bed with 6-year-old Jennifer every night. The flame burned bright green.

So it was back to the torch with all the doll clothes, dolls and stuffed animals accumulated over 14 years by five girls. Mrs. Horine got a positive test in half the dolls' hair or clothes.

"The thing that scares me is that it has not been banned in dolls or in blankets and comforters," she says. "There are still little babies out there sucking on their Tris-treated animals."

Robert Poth, compliance officer for the Consumer Product Safety Commission in Bethesda, Md., says the staff is compiling information on health hazards of Tris used in materials other than children's clothing.

The commission recently sent Mrs. Horine a list of Tris-treated products not covered by the ban. Included were toy sewing kits, home insulation materials, auto upholstery fabric, Christmas decorations and polyester thread used by the garment industry.

Mrs. Horine and Mrs. Clement were not convinced by the commission's recommendation that Tris-treated children's clothing would be safe after it was washed three times.

"I got a strong green flame on things I'd washed hundreds of times," Mrs. Horine says.

Dr. Robert Harris of the Environmental Defense Fund in Washington says his group thinks even laundered Tris-treated clothing is dangerous. The EDF is suing the Consumer Product Safety Commission in an effort to force a ban on all clothing and fabric treated with the chemical.

The EDF also has asked the commission to order cancer tests on other chemicals — some of them chemically similar to Tris — used as flame retardants in children's sleepwear.

Mrs. Horine threw out all the Tris-treated items she found in her house. Mrs. Clement went even further: She threw out everything that might have been washed with her daughter's Tris-treated garments.

"I had to wait a long time to have a baby," says Mrs. Clement, 36, as she watched her dark-eyed 20-month-old daughter playing in Mrs. Horine's yard. "I refuse to take any chances."

Bad luck continues

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — Tom Nickell's bad luck ranged rapidly from water to fire over the weekend.

His boat was swamped on Lake Ming and he gave up water skiing. So he towed the boat home and was cleaning the engine in his garage when a spark ignited gasoline fumes.

The fire Sunday burned Nickell and destroyed the boat, trailer and garage, as well as well as damaging his house. Total damage was estimated at $13,500.

Nickell was treated for burns on his hands and arms.

License ban

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Board of Supervisors has unanimously approved a moratorium on the issuing of business licenses for county stores which sell sexually explicit material.

Supervisor Pete Schabarum asked Tuesday for the action until a county ordinance controlling proliferation of such stores in unincorporated areas is drafted.

Child abuse plan okayed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Board of Supervisors has unanimously approved a program that would involve law enforcement agencies, courts, public services, schools and the state to help fight child abuse.

To help curb the 45,000 child abuse cases recorded annually in the county, the board voted Tuesday to establish a toll-free hot-line for reporting such cases, mandatory classes in state prisons for convicted child abusers, and programs to inform public school students that harsh punishment is not normal.

Notwithstanding any other provision of the San Dimas Municipal Code, no permits shall be issued for the development or improvement of the properties described in Exhibit "A" nor for the construction of any building or structure requiring a permit on any of the properties described in Exhibit "A", nor shall any subdivision maps or parcel maps be accepted for filing relative to the properties described in Exhibit "A" nor shall any subdivision maps or parcel maps filed relative to said properties on the effective date of this Ordinance, be processed, considered for subdivision review or set for hearing before the San Dimas Planning Commission or City Council until the City of San Dimas has adopted an ordinance to provide for the development and control of the hillside areas in the City of San Dimas and in particular those areas described in Exhibit "A", or until four months has passed, whichever occurs first, unless this Ordinance is extended.

SECTION 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of the San Dimas Municipal Code, any subdivision maps filed with the City on the date that this Ordinance is effective, shall be deemed denied without prejudice to their being refiled after the City of San Dimas has adopted its ordinance regulating the development of the hillside areas.

SECTION 3. The City of San Dimas has an adopted general plan to provide for the orderly growth and development of the City. This general plan contemplates a mixture of traditional land uses and the City Planning Commission and City Council have embarked upon a program to change the zoning classification for real property in this City to conform with the land use designations set forth in the general plan, and in addition to develop those zoning regulations which are necessary in order to implement the development controls referenced in the City's general plan so that the community's goals can be realized. Much development has occurred within the cities and it has become apparent that the remaining areas of property and which are generally described in the attached Exhibit "A", are among the more difficult terrain to develop. The properties described in Exhibit "A" are, for the most part, very hilly and any development that does occur within these areas will, unless considerable control is exercised over the type of development , have a potential to negatively impact the entire community for generations to come.

The City Council has authorized the retention of a consultant to meet with the City Staff and to assist it in the preparation of development controls which should apply to the hillside development in this City. In order to permit the planning staff, the consultant, the property owners, the public and the Planning Commission the opportunity to review the various alternative types of development controls which might be suggested to determine the one which is most appropriate for the remaining hillside properties in the City of San Dimas, it is necessary that no development be permitted for any of the properties described in Exhibit "A" and that no maps, subdivisions or parcel map, be filed or processed relative to the properties described in Exhibit "A" until the ordinances are prepared and approved by the City Council.

In order to promote the public peace, health and general welfare and preserve the status quo and permit the Planning Commission the opportunity to consider thoroughly a matter which is of such impact upon the community and far reaching in its effects, the City Council deems it appropriate to adopt this Ordinance pursuant to the provisions of S65858 of the Government Code as an Interim Zoning Ordinance and the same shall take effect immediately upon its adoption.

PASSED, MOVED AND ADOPTED this 14th Day of June, 1977.

Marvin Ersher
MAYOR

I, RUTH V. FOSTER, City Clerk of this City of San Dimas, do hereby certify that this Ordinance, being Ordinance No. 584, was adopted by the City Council at their regular meeting held June 14, 1977, by the following roll call vote:

AYES: Councilmen Dipple, Lough, McLean, Wax, Ersher
NOES: None
ABSENT: None

Pamela Jean Jackson,
Deputy
CITY CLERK

I DO FURTHER CERTIFY that within fifteen (15) days from the date of its passage, I caused a copy of said Ordinance No. 584 to be published in the Progress Bulletin.

Pamela Jean Jackson,
Deputy
CITY CLERK
